To be called upon by the military to report for duty for service as a chaplain, for which he volunteered four years ago, was the experience of Rev. S. W. Hann on the eve of his marriage. Rev. Mann, who is in Toronto on his way to Petawawa Camp, was appointed pastor of Sandwich Methodist Church about a month ago, and was making arrangements for the purchase of furniture for his new home when the message from the Militia Department was pushed into his hand. His bride-to-be is a Toronto girl. The marirage may now be postponed until Rev. Hann returns from France.

Rev. Hann will be attached to an artillery unit at Petawawa.

GRAIN MARKET

The corn market closed irregular, the July option closing 1 3-8c. higher, August 1-2c. lower, and September 1-4c. higher. An oversold condition of the market was probably responsible for the advance in the July option, to-day being the end of the month, found some of the shorts forced into the market, causing an advance against essentially bearish conditions. Oats at Chicago were in a similar situation to corn, the July option closing out at 2 1-4c. advance over yesterday. The distant months were 1-2c. lower. Winnipeg oats gave way before the more favourable crop situation, closing 1 3-8c. lower.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

CHAPTER CXXXIII

George was very busy, the next two days. I spent my time shopping and entertaining myself as best I could. Mrs. Babcock lunched with me and we went to a matinee. I liked her better each time I saw her, and enjoyed being with her, even tho she was so much older.

The night before we left for home, we dined with them again. As we were dressing, George said to me:

"I haven't secured Babcock's signature yet, altho I think he is sure to come into the business. But tonight will settle it. They are already inclined to like you, so try and be of further help to me by your actions tonight."

I made no reply. I felt pleased that I could be of help to George, but I resented the implication that I might do something to spoil the good impression I had made. I would let him see that I was clever enough, at least, to hold what I had obtained.

We had a wonderful time and another delightful dinner. Mrs. Babcock asked me for more music, and we really spent a delightful evening, altho, to my surprise business was not mentioned. But just as George spoke of going, giving my previous illness as an excuse—he was really tired, himself—Mr. Babcock said:

"Come into the library, a moment, Howard. The ladies will excuse us, I may as well sign that paper tonight. Perhaps if I wait until to-morrow, I may change my mind; but your wife's music has made me mellow."

I couldn't help a glad thrill as I turned to Mrs. Babcock, who was smiling at me.

When we left, it was with a feeling that I had made two dear friends. And I was very happy when George remarked:

"You were an unqualified success to-night, Helen, I guess I owe it to you that I got that affair settled."

HELEN SEES JULIA COLLINS EMBARRASSED.

We stopped in the grill, when we reached the hotel. George claimed to be thirsty. The orchestra was still playing, so I offered no objection.

Just then I heard some loud talking, and turned to see the cause. At a table near us, sat Julia Collins and a large, rather coarse-looking man who evidently had been drinking. He was trying to make Mrs. Collins take a glass of champagne, which she had evidently been refusing. No one was paying particular attention, because of the nearness of closing time and their desire to have their orders filled. But I was interested. It was something new to see Julia Collins embarrassed, as she evidently was. I could not help a little thrill of joy as I looked at her escort—red, flushed, noisy, and persistent—then at George, who was cool, self-possessed, and handsome.

George heard an exclamation turned, and saw Mrs. Collins and her escort. He looked surprised, then remarked in a low tone:

"What in the world is she doing with that bounder!"

The man's excited manner and loud speech was now attracting attention from others in the room. There was a general lull, as everyone turned to gaze. The music had suddenly stopped, making the man more noisily obnoxious because more plainly heard. He had called the head waiter and was arguing with him over something. With a shrug that plainly said he could not propritiate so unreasonable a patron, he walked off.

GEORGE MAKES HIMSELF CONSPICUOUS AND ANNOYS HELEN

The crowd was once again busy with its own affairs. But I could not take my eyes away from Julia Collins. Her embarrassment, and the insistance of her escort, whom George had called a "bounder," fascinated me.

Suddenly I saw Mrs. Collins rise,—that is, she tried to, but her escort roughly pulled at her gown and she sank back into her chair, her face crimson. Then, in loud tones, he again tried to get her to drink, the champagne.

I had been so engaged watching them—my chair was in such a position I could, without turning—that I had not looked at George for a moment or two. The waiter had brought him his bottle of Celestine vichy, his usual drink, and he had paid him.

A chair scraped, and George started to rise. I thinking he had finished, rose also.

"Sit down, Helen. I'll be back in a minute," he said, then walked directly to the table where Julia Collins sat fairly writhing in her embarrassment. I was furious, that he should make himself and me conspicuous by his act, and more so when he quietly offered his arm and escorted Julia Collins from the room before her escort recovered from his amazement enough to object. Then, while the head waiter epected the man who was threatening to fight everyone in the room,—but especially George,—my husband returned and quietly took his place beside me and finished his vichy.

THE CURIOUS LUSHEIS.

An Eastern People Who Are Afraid to Speak Their Own Names.

In his book, "The Lushei Kuki Clan," Lieutenant Colonel J. Shakespear tells of a curious trait of the Lusheis, a Bengal frontier race. They have a strong and general dislike to speaking their own names. The author tells of his experience with this strange people and accounts for that fear in the following manner:

When we first occupied the hills a man would not tell us his name. If asked he would refer us to some one else and say, "You tell him." The following explanation of their habit was given by a Lushei:

"Lusheis are shy of saying the name of their father and their mother and their own name. Because it is their own name they are shy of saying it. Some people are shy because their names are bad. Their parents' names—because they are their parents they never call them by their names; therefore they are shy of saying them. Their own names also they never say. Just for that reason they are shy of saying them. The names of their brothers and friends they are always saying; therefore they are not shy of saying them."

Long ago another explanation was given. When a man kills another he calls out his own name, "I, Lalmanga, have killed you!" so that the spirit of the dying man may know whose slave he will be in "Mithi-Khua," the dead man's village. Accordingly, it was suggested, it was unlucky for a person to speak his name on a less important occasion.

On Visiting the Sick.

Do not ask them how they feel. It is an insult to them, for if they felt well they would not be sick, and it is also a reflection on your intelligence, for if you would look around a little you would be able to see how they feel. Be of some service and cheer if possible and get out. There is a time later when folks need company, but sickness is essentially a nonsocial occupation. It is a merit to visit the sick when you help them, but to beat them over their enfeebled heads with your robust personality is a peculiarly careless crime.—Collier's.

Moon Theories.

There is a theory that the circular, crater-like Mountains of the Moon are not of volcanic origin, but are the result of the moon's being hit by planetoids. Another theory is to the effect that the earth was at one time encircled by a ring similar to that which now encircles Saturn and that this gradually coalesced, gathering first around a large number of nuclei and finally uniting in a single sphere—the moon.

What "Borough" Signifies.

The word "burgh" in Saxon stood for "castle," hence towns anciently erected in the vicinity of castles for their protection had this name conferred upon them, and the soldiers who garrisoned these were called burghers, so the inhabitants of these towns received the same name. These also being formed into a community, the constitution formed for their regular government was denominated the borough laws.

Her Status.

The elder office mate was questioning the young clerk in regard to a girl he had seen him with at a moving picture show. "Was it your fiancee or your sister?" asked the elderly man.

Who Was Easy?

Mudde—Lend me a fiver, will you, Budde? That faker has just stung me for all I had. Budde—All right, Jim, I'll go you. But I'll tell you right now if you let any man talk you out of $5 you're dead easy."—Exchange.

Thought She Would Lose Her Little Girl With Diarrhoea

Thousands of infants die annually who could be saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

There can be no doubt about it.

During the seventy-two years that this wonderful remedy has been on the market, it has been proved conclusively that it is the best for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera infantum, and all looseness of the bowels, especially when the children are teething.

Many of the imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" being offered to the public to-day are positively dangerous, as they often check the diarrhoea too suddenly, cause inflammation and leave the bowels in a constipated condition. "Dr. Fowler's" will not do this, but will impart a healthy tone to the mucous surface, and stop the diarrhoea in an easy and natural way.

Mrs. M. Tyler, Orland, Ont., writes: "I have used your wonderful medicine for nine years with great satisfaction. My little girl was only five months old, and she was so sick with diarrhoea I thought she would die. I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it gave her quick relief. I have used it ever since for the whole of my family, six in all, and can praise it more than anything I ever used."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Matter of Postage

By MARTHA GAISER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

To Lucille Virginia Cranston, life had always been a joke; but the kind of joke that was a joy to all who knew her well, for no condition ever arose in which she could not find some humor to offset with the antidote of a clever bright remark. While she went her gay, happy way, refusing to take anything seriously, the serious-minded shook their heads and prophesied disaster, and a rude awakening when it did come. And Lucille Virginia, when she learned of it, enjoyed their predictions, and her reputation—enjoyed it, indulged it, and played up to it with all the vigor and daring of abounding youth. Even when the dark finger of war pointed to every American his duty; and relatives, friends and sweethearts responded, she had talked of their going and finally said good-by with a smile and a gay little sally, picturing the glad, proud day of their return, instead of shedding tears as were most of her friends.

Not even to the two men whose devotion for months had furnished speculation for her friends as to which would win her if either—had she wavered. Pride and natural coquetry had kept her silent, though to a close observer the big blue-gray eyes had a seriousness quite unrelated to the light words and laugh, for in her heart she felt that life had become very real and earnest all at once; so real that she did not want any sentimental emotion to play a part and betray her or them into a false position. There are two kinds of lovers, those who make love easily and gracefully, and those who do not; that is to say, those to whom wooing is a natural gift, and those who only acquire it as the outgrowth of a deep feeling. Such were James Moore and Warren Fielding, and how much they had meant in her life, and what they really were to her, she knew only absence could determine. That would be the acid test. In the weeks and months following their departure, life was turned quite upside down for Lucille Virginia. With the zeal of a true patriot she had thrown herself heart and soul into war work. Outside sports were abandoned for Red Cross work; dancing was supplanted by knitting; boxes of good things were made, packed and shipped with letters of cheer to the known and unknown, and all the while she was thinking, thinking. Lucille Virginia was doing this now, her knitting neglected in her lap as she gazed into the leaping flames of the open wood fire, wondering how long it would take her box to reach James, and if he would read between the lines of her note and divine her motive in sending the candy with it. If only he would see and understand she mused, visualizing him at his post.

"Dreaming in the gloaming, pretty maid?" said the cheery voice of Uncle Charles, as he slipped his hand under her chin and tilted her head back.

"I did not hear you come in," she replied rising for his kiss, but ignoring his query except with a sudden access of color.

"Did you mail my package?" she asked, as she turned on the lights and seated herself beside him on the davenport.

"Yes, but I Hooverized on postage," he announced laughing.

"How?" she asked puzzled.

"Well, I sent it to Warren, as it cost so much to send it out West to James, and as long as it was only candy I thought it was not worth all that postage—even though your pretty hands made it," he added teasingly.

"Did you take out the note?" she questioned quickly.

"Note? What note?"

"Oh, Un-c-l-e C-h-a-r-l-e-s," she exclaimed. "I had a note in there for James, and now Warren will get it. What shall I do, what shall I do?" she cried, turning her distressed face to him.

"Nothing. Leave that to Warren."

"But, Uncle—"

"No buts, there is nothing for you to do, but—wait. Warren can handle his own dilemma, or I miss my guess," he declared, as he put his arm about her and drew her towards him, but the twinkle in his eye would not have placed him in the guiltless list, as Lucille Virginia would have known had her head not been buried on his shoulder.

In his quarters at camp, Warren Fielding, a tired, homesick, heart-sick man, sat, pipe in mouth, given up to disconsolate thought. Despite hard work and his determination to be occupied every minute, he could not get away from his memories—memories as warm, and fresh, and real as though they had been made only yesterday, yet many of them dated back to the very beginning of his acquaintance with Lucille Virginia, who, after five months' absence—months of eye and heart starvation—was still for him the one woman. With the intensity of strong, repressed natures he had given her his heart, but with the knowledge of his love there had come an overwhelming humility, strange even to himself and entirely absent in all his other associations, and so, only by his devotion had he allowed his love to find expression. And she—well she had treated him as she had all the others—save Moore, he thought bitterly. Thus he was when the neat package so well camouflaged by Uncle Charles' unknown writing, was brought him. With no feeling but that of a natural curiosity he cut the string and removed the wrapper, but surprise and indifference disappeared as, lifting the lid of the box, he saw a white envelope on which was written in Lucille Virginia's familiar hand: "For a Brave Soldier Boy."

Smiling and wondering what joke she was up to now, he took up the envelope and broke the seal with fingers that would tremble, soldier that he was. It had no heading, and puzzled he read on, and on. Then light suddenly dawned on him, a strange dizziness seized him, and he sat down. The realization staggered him, but no longer did he hesitate. He had found himself and was without trembling, going over the top to his first great victory. He began at the very first and read the note through again, then with an exultant look on his face, he reached for a pad and drew forth his pen and wrote with fingers that no longer trembled:

Dear Jim—The enclosed has just come to me, in a box of candy that was evidently intended for you, also, though the wrapper was addressed to me, hence my opening it. The joke is on Lucille Virginia for getting things mixed, though you come in for yours, too, as I am keeping the candy. Believe me it's too good to surrender. Hope you are getting along all right. With best wishes.

W. J. FELDING.

The days followed the sending of the box dragged as they never had before to Lucille Virginia. Coming in late one afternoon from her Red Cross work, a tall figure came from the library to meet her.

"Why Warren—" she exclaimed, with a little catch in her voice, as she extended both hands to meet his outstretched ones.

"When did you come?" she asked, pulling her hands from his restraining clasp as she turned to lay off her wraps and collect her startled senses.

"An hour ago," he replied, as they walked into the library.

"Why didn't you let me know?"

"Because—I—well, I wanted to surprise you," he blurted out as if the words were forced from him, as taking her hand he drew her to the davenport.

"I wanted to see if you were glad to see me," he laughed. "Are you?" he questioned, looking her full in the face.

Fighting for time to meet that which she saw in his face, she answered: "Of course, I am always glad to see my friends, Captain Fielding," and she raised her hand in mock salute and flashed him a teasing smile.

"Stop!" he commanded. In sheer surprise she dropped her hand. For once she was too surprised and astounded to think of anything to say.

"Lucille, several days ago I received a box of candy and a note that I read and only at the close did I realize that it was not for me. How it ever came to me I do not know; all that mattered was that you certainly did not love the man to whom it was written as I had supposed. Now I am tired of jests; you have had your way long enough; and you are going to listen to me and do just as I say; for, hand in hand with the knowledge that you did not love the other man, was born a hope that you confirmed by face and voice, when I arrived just now. You love me. I am the captain of your fate, and you—you—are to be my—wife," he concluded reverently, but emphatically.

For a moment silence lay between them; then very softly, he said: "Lucille, sweetheart?" "Yes, my captain," she whispered, surrendering herself into his arms.

Why All Should Laugh.

There are days when forgiveness comes naturally to a man, when he is ready to pardon all, and cast aside his bitterness as a cloak and stand free.

There are times again when the lightest touch of adversity is as a wound to the death. It is well not to be too cast down nor to take oneself too seriously, for moods, fortunately, do not last beyond a few hours. To be able to laugh, to see the humorous possibilities in one's own conduct—for, after all, tears and laughter are at their source not so widely separated—to let others laugh with one and even at one; this is true working-day philosophy. There would be no bitterness in the world if all men could laugh occasionally at themselves. Our enemies are human as ourselves. Bitterness is a weakness of soul. The healthy soul will stand free of it.

Library for Every School.

In the past we have thought relatively too much about teaching people how to read and not enough about getting them to read after they learn how.

To develop "the reading habit" in each pupil should be one of the chief aims of every teacher, says the Progressive Farmer. Train any child so he likes to read, so he is a real book lover, and he will educate himself even if he never goes to school another day. Moreover, if a school has a good library it should aid greatly in educating the older people whose school days are over, but whose learning days should never be over. The saying of old Thomas Carlyle, "The true university of these days is a collection of books," cannot be too often repeated.

LINDSAY'S WOOD DEAL HAS FALLEN THROUGH

LINDSAY, July 30.—The purchase by Lindsay of some 500 cords of hardwood for $11.50 per cord, has, for some reason, fallen through and the wood has gone somewhere else.

In the opinion of those who are in touch with the fuel situation the town had a good bargain in this wood. Down in Peterboro several parties got together and purchased a car of hardwood and it cost them just $15 a cord without anyone making a profit on it.

Munitions Workers

Upon the quality and the quantity of your output rests the fate of our Armies.

If you regard your work as a sort of humdrum, everyday job you will just naturally "slacken up."

But to "slacken up" munitions work to-day amounts to a betrayal of our brothers.

The Canadian munitions output per worker is much less to-day than it was a year ago.

TRICKED HIS PREMIER.

Pitt Was Quick to Act, but the King Got Ahead of Him.

On Jan. 19, 1805, Dr. Manners-Sutton, bishop of Norwich, was giving a dinner party in his Windsor deanery when his butler informed him that a gentleman wished particularly to see him, but would not give his name.

"Well, I can't come now in the middle of dinner," said the bishop.

"Beg pardon, my lord, but the gentleman is very anxious to see you on important business," and the butler was so urgent that the bishop apologized to his company and went out. The gentleman who would not be denied proved to be King George III.

"How d'ye do, my lord?" said he. "Come to tell you that you're archbishop of Canterbury—archbishop of Canterbury. D'ye accept—accept? Eh, eh?"

The bishop bowed low in token of acceptance.

Next morning Pitt appeared at Windsor castle to inform his majesty that Archbishop Moore had died the day before and to recommend the bishop of Lincoln, Dr. Pretyman, for the vacant primacy.

"Very sorry, very sorry, indeed, Pitt," said the king, "but I offered it to the bishop of Norwich last night, and he accepted. Can't break my word."

Pitt was very angry, but the deed was done, as the king meant it should be, and so Dr. Manners-Sutton became archbishop of Canterbury and held the great office for twenty-three eventful years.—Chamber's Journal.

Living on a Salary.

Living on a salary is a more or less precarious form of existence, but it is not always wise for every man to go into business for himself. Some men are not fitted for that responsibility, and there are a great many failures of men who strike out for themselves without sufficient backing of capital or experience. However, if you never save any money out of your salary you will never get ahead financially. You always will be the tail of another man's kite, always stoking to keep up steam in the boilers of somebody else's business.—Rochester Sentinel.

CZECH-SLOVAK TROOPS CAPTURE ANOTHER CIT

The Allies Advance In Spite Of Stubborn Resistanc

Hill 205 Was Captured in the Opening Rush—Attack is Still Progressing.

GUNS ACTIVE

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press.)

WITH FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 1.—General Mangin's army attacked between Fere En Tardenois and Plessier-Huleu this morning (a front of nearly ten miles), taking Hill 205 east of Grand Rozoy, from where Fismes is visible, and capturing Cramoiselle (four miles northwest of Fere En Tardenois). At the hour of cabling the attack was still progressing.

Surprise Attacks.

Other troops took Meuniere Wood, in the salient south-east of Ciergois. Throughout the French front the Germans are using their artillery heavily, and especially in the neighbourhood of Rheims and Montdidier. They also successfully attempted surprise attacks along the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) and the Chaume Wood, seeking to feel about the Allied front.

HAVELOCK MEN FINED FOR BEATING ASSYRIAN ABOUD

Two Havelock youths named Couvert and Zufelt were each fined $20 and costs by (Magistrate Langley yesterday for assaulting Bert Aboud, the Assyrian merchant, on Saturday, July 20th. Four other young men were discharged, the Magistrate intimating that it was with some hesitation he permitted them to go unpunished. The session of the county police court was held in the Havelock town hall yesterday from 4.30 p.m. until midnight. The six men charged with assaulting Aboud range in age from 18 years to 28. It seems that Aboud had been pestered with a custom peculiar to villages by which young men frequented his store, appropriating it as a lounging place. On Saturday, July 20th, Couvert, Zufelt and the other four were lined up in front of Aboud's store, waiting for him to close up. There had been some slight interchange earlier in the evening. When Aboud stepped outside he ordered the men to take themselves elsewhere, and after that the dove of peace fluttered away to the accompaniment of a scuffle. Magistrate Langley found the two men guilty, but also concluded that Aboud had not been injured so seriously as imagined.

Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution, Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared in behalf of Aboud, and Mr. D. J. Lynch of Campbellford, was counsel for the Havelock and Belmont township young men.

Lansdowne's Peace Letter

"New Epistle Ought to Have Been Addressed to the Kaiser," Says London Press.

(Special to Examiner.)

London, August 1. —Former Minister Von Kuehlmann and former Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg are rumoured to have appeared in Holland, the News announced today.

The newspaper pointed out this may possibly mean a renewal of the German peace offensive, in connection with the new open letter of Lord Lansdowne.

The morning papers are unanimously unsympathetic with Lansdowne's attitude. The Daily Mail, anti-government, does not comment, but the Northcliffe press severely denounces the letter.

A NEW EPISTLE.

"Lansdowne's new epistle will do nothing but mischief," the Mail said. "When Lansdowne has persuaded the Kaiser and Hindenburg to return to Germany and pay for the damage they have done, then peace can be talked about. The allies and the British stand firmly by Wilson, saying, 'The agony must not be gone through again.'"

Other newspaper comment included:

Sketch—"He ought to have addressed his letter to the Kaiser."

OPPORTUNE MOMENT.

Express—"Lansdowne declares the present is an opportune moment to negotiate peace. He is mistaken. It is an opportune time to negotiate with the sword."

Graphic—"For the present, such utterances will lead to nothing."

Chronicle—"He wants us to state bed rock terms. We doubt that Lansdowne, in buying a horse, would tell the absolute top price he would give."

"THE GIRL WHO HAD NO GOD"

It was our intention to start the new serial of the above title in our issue of Saturday, August 3rd. As all the copy is now in for the story "The Woman Who Changed" and it will close about the middle of August, the new serial will not commence until that time. "The Girl Who Had No God" is an entirely different style of story to the one now running and will take only about a month to appear.

The Examiner is very particular about the stories it gives its readers.

"THE HEART BOWED DOWN"

FOOD SCARCE

(United Press Service.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 1.—"The Heart Bowed Down," is the German tune nowadays.

German officers and men taken prisoner near Merris, Morlancourt and east of Amiens, are extremely depressed as a result of the Crown Prince's failure and General Foch's staggering reply to Ludendorff.

After the first few weeks, of the German offensive, I declared the German morale to be higher than at any time. They strutted them inside the prison cages, as if they already owned the world. They replied even to kindly treatment with contemptuous and condescending smiles. They sneered at American fighters and jeered at American help.

Deeply Impressed.

To-day, I believe it is equally true that the German soldier afield is more deeply impressed that at any period. Prisoners admit supplies are low, and that ammunition is not plentiful. They say it is very difficult to obtain recruits to fill the ranks of worn-down divisions. Food, they report, is getting scarcer. Instead of a smashing victory, they now long for immediate peace. Events are going against them, while the Allies are growing stronger with each week.

Are Retiring.

Slowly the truth seems to be seeping into the German lines. They are beginning to hear that the Americans not only are well represented on the west front but also beating the best Prussian troops. They have heard that the Crown Prince is retiring instead of advancing, and that Prince Rupprecht's offensive against the British was postponed because of this and other factors.

From the statements of the prisoners, some of them obviously fear that the British would assume the offensive. In short they are very unhappy. I have seldom seen the front so quiet as it has been here, save for the British shelling and the spasmodic bursts of German shells. The front resembled a Sunday afternoon in a country churchyard.

SAYS FOOD CRISIS IS ALMOST OVERCOME

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1. —"The food crisis is almost overcome; it is unlikely that it will be repeated," Ludwig Paul, Austrian Food Controller, declared in an interview published in the Neue Frei Presse, according to a despatch from Vienna to-day. He urged, however, the greatest economy in foodstuffs.

U-Boat 56 in Communication With Other U-Boats At Sea

Special to The Examiner:

SANTANDER, Spain, Aug. 1.— Investigation has disclosed that the German submarine U-56, which arrived here under its own power, has been in communication with other U-boats at sea, it was announced here to-day.

Commander Reisser repeatedly was seen signalling toward the sea, while the Spanish government intercepted wireless messages from the U-56 after a French steamer was struck and its crew killed by a submarine.

REPRESENT THE EMBASSY

SIXTY DAYS GRACE

(Special to The Examiner)

OTTAWA, August 1.—Organization is proceeding apace in connection with the working out of the new convention providing for the conscription of Canadians and Americans by mutual agreement. L. J. Loranger, K.C., Quebec's representative on the Military Service Council has been appointed to represent the British Embassy at Washington. It will be necessary for Canadians in American territory between the ages of 20 and 34 to apply for exemption if they desire it, to the British Embassy and their applications together with the reasons will be referred to Mr. Loranger for consideration. Two other alternatives are left to Canadians either to come on over to Canada and join up here or to be taken under the American draft. Sixty days are permitted before summary drafting is resorted to by the two countries upon each others subjects.

BOLSHEVIKI PRESS BECOMING ALARMED

Czechs-Sovaks Captured Another Town—Movement is Growing

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1.—Yekaterinburg, in the Province of Perm, near the Siberian border, has been taken by Czecho-Slovaks, according to a newspaper at Moscow. With this new development of the Czecho-Slovak movement, the Bolsheviki press is raising cries of alarm. The "Pravda" declares the Czecho-Slovak danger is growing like an avalanche and the counter revolutionary movement is extending.

American Made a New Advance Beyond Sergy

OFFICIAL REPORTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, August 1.—(Official)—Southwest of Rheims, the Germans made an attack against the Heights of Bligny. They were repulsed after sharp combat. The enemy carried out a number of surprise attacks in the region of Four De Paris in the Meuse sector, and upon the right bank of the Meuse, without obtaining any advantages. The French inflicted losses upon the enemy and captured prisoners.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, August 1.—We carried out a successful raid last night in the neighbourhood of Lens. Hostile artillery has been active in the Villers-Bretonneux sector, in the neighbourhood of Bucquoy and about Merris and Meteren.

LINE STRAIGHTENED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, August 1.—American and French troops launched an attack on Wednesday afternoon from Seringes to Cierges, on the centre of the Marne front, for the purpose of straightening the line and demolishing barbed wire entanglements which the Germans have placed through the hills, forests and open places. The Allies brought into action their heavy artillery, their aviators and patrols having reported mile after mile of barbed wire standing along the German lines. The heavy guns soon found the range of the entanglements. Some enemy infantry had dug in behind the wires, but the lines for the most part were manned by machine gunners. The German artillery reply consisted chiefly of shells from 77's and 105's. The machine guns, with heavier pieces indicated, were active in an effort to prevent the Allied advance.

A New Gas.

The Germans on Wednesday used a new gas having a white flame and smoke. The purpose of the American and French attack, which is in a northeasterly direction, probably is outflanking the Meuniere Wood and in cutting off the blunt edged salient in the line between Romingny and Cierges. This salient was made more acute by the American advance from Cierges to Seringes.

Franco-American forces on the main battle front continued yesterday the work of straightening out the line. They scored advances in this effort, Americans pushing beyond Sergy to within two kilometres of Chamery. Allied forces effected their progress against stubborn German resistance.

Allies Went Forward.

(United Press Service.)

(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, August 1.—(4 p.m.)—New advances by the Americans and French were reported over a large part of the Rheims-Soissons battle-front to-day.

The Allies went forward in the Saponay region between Oulchy-Le-Chateau and Fere-En-Tardenois, in the Arcy Wood district near Cierges, and made fairly considerable progress toward the Rheims Road in the neighbourhood of Bligny.

South of Courmont-Fismes Road, the Americans hurled back the Germans into the woods near Goussancourt.

On the right flank of the salient, the Americans are making progress toward the Ardre Valley in the region of Ville-En-Tardenois.

THE WEATHER

The month of July this year taken as a whole, was not as warm as usual. The only really high temperatures were experienced between the 21st and the 29th, Sunday, the 21st, having the highest temperature of the month, namely 95 degrees. The coolest day was the 31st, with 43 degrees in the early morning. The rainfall was not up to the average, being 2.63 inches, only about one-half of June. Severe storms passed north and south of this place on several occasions.—W.P.

AMERICAN TROOPS STILL ADVANCING

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 1.—American troops struck again last night at the apex of the Allied advance on the lower portion of the Soissons-Rheims salient, storming the heights between Seringes and Sergy. They gained all their objectives.

The doughboys drove forward behind an American made smoke cloud. They were preceded by a series of heavy rolling barrages.

The advance was made possible by an Allied attack in the sector directly east of the Americans, which cleared out a small German pocket.

"Are Attacking Vital Forces"

(Special to The Examiner.)

THE HAGUE, August 1.—Germany is calling up every man that can be spared, according to information obtained from that country through various sources. Of 200,000 employees of Krupps, between thirty thousand and forty thousand are said to have been called to the colours. German press comment on the west front defeat continues to be dictated by officialdom. 'Foch's break through Thierry has not been realized," the Tageblatt says. "One is justified in speaking of German success."

Another Boast.

AMSTERDAM, August 1.—"The American army's numerical superiority does not frighten us," the Kaiser declared, in a proclamation addressed to the German army and navy to-day. "Despite efforts of the world's greatest naval powers, our U-boats sure of success, are attacking vital forces which are streaming across the sea to the aid of our enemies."

CANADA FOOD BOARD REMOVES RESTRICTION ON IT TEMPORARILY.

OTTAWA, July 31.—The Canada Food Board has removed temporarily the restriction on the consumption of pork. Such action has been made possible by the pork production and conservation efforts in Canada and the United States, and the Food Board's order, passed to-day, provides that pork, including bacon and any part of the carcass, may be served at any time in public eating places operating under Canada Food Board licenses.

In making this announcement, the Food Board stated that as a result of conservation measures and increased production, net exports of pork from the Dominion have been increased by 125,000,000 pounds per annum, which is an increase of 571 per cent. over a five-year pre-war average.

as it does away with the spectacle of able-bodied Canadians employed in the United States hiding behind their nationality to escape military service, while on the other hand Americans of military age who have been immune from the working of the Canadian Military Service Act, because they were not British subjects, will either have to enlist here within sixty days or else return to their own country for military service. All Canadians living in the United States who have made declaration of their intention to become citizens of the United States, and who are liable under the draft law, have sixty days to decide whether they wish to return to Canada to enlist with the Canadian or British recruiting forces across the line or else will be called up as other American citizens. Canadians who have not taken any steps to become American citizens, and who do not enlist in the United States or come back to Canada for that purpose within thirty days, become liable under the draft law of the United States.

The reciprocal arrangement seems to be a just and fair one. The men affected are given an opportunity to fight either for their native country or for the country in which they are living. They are given sixty days to decide.

Similar treaties with other allies countries would lessen the number of aliens in Canada who are evading service because they did not happen to be British subjects, although they do not object to taking the highest wages and slipping into the positions of Canadians who have been drafted to fight for the common cause.

THE Y.M.C.A. VINDICATED.

The report of the special committee of the Ontario branch of the Great War Veterans' Association selected to meet the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. and discuss the grievances advanced by the Veterans at the Hamilton convention, has been made public, and the finding of the committee should go a long way towards establishing a better feeling among the two organizations, as well as proving a vindication of the overseas work of the Red Triangle. The report emphasizes the fact that much of the misunderstanding was caused because the claims of the Y.M.C.A. of giving away free drinks and other articles referred to the work done during the year 1917, while the majority of complaints were based on conditions in 1914, 1915 and 1916 when, as the report says, "The Y.M.C.A. at this conference conceded that free distribution was non-existent." The statement of the Veterans' committee adds: "This would appear to be the basis for a great deal of criticism and misunderstanding. The individual returned soldier is thinking of what was done in the years 1914, 1915 and 1916, while the answer of the Y.M.C.A. is in terms of their policy of 1917."

The report, however, agrees that the Y.M.C.A. is doing a useful work for the Canadian soldiers in France, and the committee sums up its conclusions in the following terms:

"Your committee is of the opinion that while certain individual criticisms have been justified in view of the circumstances detailed above, the work done by the Y.M.C.A. is beneficial to the soldier. The extent of the work can only be measured if it were possible to imagine the Y.M.C.A. or any other institution doing similar work as being non-existent for some weeks. The absence of them would, by force of contrast, bring to light the essential value of their work among the Canadian soldiers."

The matter is likely to be discussed at the Dominion convention of the Great War Veterans now in session in Toronto.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hats off to the Australians. The capture of Merris, on the Flanders front, was a particularly brilliant piece of work on the part of the Commonwealth's soldiers.

The dashing capture of Butte de Chalmont, in the Soissons area, is a striking testimony to the fact the British are taking a hand in the fighting in the Soissons-Rheims pocket.

The Huns have paid the Sammies the compliment of turning the crack Prussian Guards loose on the American troops. The result was a bad defeat for the Guards.

The assassination of Field Marshal Von Eichorn, German governor of Ukrainia, should show the Germans that their rule is not appreciated.

Three more Canadian prisoners have escaped from Hunland. The Germans are finding it as hard to hold the Canucks as it is to capture them.

BEER AN ANCIENT DRINK.

Beer is believed to be one of the most ancient of drinks. Manuscripts written at least 3,000 years before the Christian era show conclusively that even at that primitive period the manufacture of an intoxicating liquor from barley or other grain as extensively carried on in Europe.

BELAND CARRIES ON

(Toronto Globe.)

British cables carry an impressive and inspiring message from Hon. Dr. Henri S. Beland, Canada's patriot-statesman. His tragic war story is familiar to his fellow-Canadians. The man who was formerly Postmaster-General of the Dominion wedded just prior to the outbreak of war. With his bride he was visiting in France and Belgium when Postdam let loose its mad dog in Europe. Within forty-eight hours of Britain's declaration of determination to honor the "scrap of paper" which bore her name, Henri Beland had volunteered his services to the heroic Belgian army and cabled his anxiety to enlist with the Canadian forces as soon as they arrived at the front. Madame Beland gave her Belgian villa as a Red Cross hospital and served as a nurse until her death toward the end of the second year of war. Dr. Beland was wounded and taken prisoner by the Germans when Antwerp fell, while ministering to wounded British marines, and was a prisoner of war in Germany until his exchange for Prince von Buelow some weeks ago.

Henri Beland was the first Canadian to serve at the fighting front—the first to come under the fire of the invading Boche. His country honors him and honors his record. At the hands of his Majesty the King at Buckingham Palace he recently received an expression of appreciation on behalf of the Empire. It might well be that this statesman-patriot, who has already given so largely in service and sacrifice, should be deemed to have done his "bit"—a big bit and a costly bit. But this is not the spirit that breathes in Beland. The cables have already carried the news that he hopes, after a visit home to his aged mother a little boy, to join the service of the surgeons with the Canadian army in the field. Beland plans to "carry on."

Even when home in Canada he hopes to serve. In his cable to Canadian contemporaries yesterday Mr. F. A. McKenzie, the war correspondent, tells of an interview with Dr. Beland just before the latter sailed for Canada. After questioning him concerning his experiences in Germany and the changes he found upon his return to England, Mr. McKenzie's cable proceeds as follows:

"I asked him his political plans, and he replied: 'I have no plans. My one purpose is to do my share as best I can to help our cause. I will help everything that promotes the unity of Canada, for I am convinced that only in the unity of Canada can the destiny of our people be fulfilled. Some of our own people in the rural parts of Quebec have been misinformed and have had their judgment prejudiced by the mis-statements of extremists like Bourassa, and maybe I can do something to help them realize how this great struggle is so vital that even naturally peace-loving men may as well put peace at home aside and take their part. No man has a right to complain about his work and sufferings today.

"'You, at least, have never complained,' I said, for Dr. Beland's absence of bitterness even towards his captors has been remarked here by everyone. 'I tried not to,' he replied, simply. Dr. Beland has left behind him in England memories of a gracious, kindly, generous personality, who rose above all suffering refused to be embittered, and kept the serenity of his soul even in the darkest hour."

In one resolute, patriotic sentence Henri Beland speaks for all true Canadianism: "My one purpose is to do my share as best I can to help our cause." All Canada will welcome him and listen eagerly to his message. But his thoughts naturally turn toward his native Province of Quebec. "Maybe," he says, "I can do something to help our own people in the rural parts of Quebec, some of whom have been misinformed and have had their judgment prejudiced by the mis-statements of extremists like Bourassa, something to help them realize how this great struggle is so vital that even naturally peace-loving men may as well put peace at home aside and take their part."

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

THE WORLD IS LEARNING IT.

(Kansas City Times.)

The Austrian Reichsrath is debating Austria's situation in secret session. But why? There is no secret about Austria's situation.

SHOULD FILL THE BILL.

(Springfield Republican.)

If von Hintze's own friends describe him as "internationally a barbarian," the ideal minister of foreign affairs has been nominated by the pan-Germans to carry out their programme.

COLLECTIVE EXTRAVAGANCE.

(Chicago Tribune.)

There is a kind of collective extravagance, we are beginning to learn, which is even more wasteful than individual extravagance. Mr. Hoover informs us for example, that one ton of garbage will provide enough glycerine to make explosives for fourteen shells, enough fats for seventy-five pounds of soap, and sufficient fertilizer to grow eight bushels of wheat. Yet many communities have in the past made no effort whatever to extract these products, but have simply incinerated the garbage or disposed of it in some similarly wasteful manner.

WANTED—A WAR BULLETIN.

(Winnipeg Tribune.)

Why not eliminate the printing of say 50,000 worth of dry blue books for a year and spend the money on real daily war information bulletins, in which there would appear a list of government war requirements in the matter of supplies and a list of persons to whom tenders are awarded; also all orders from the food and fuel control departments; appointments and promotions in the militia service, and such other facts as should be officially printed and in the public's possession? Such a bulletin, printed at a comparatively small cost, might well replace some of the present dry matter.

WITH THE SOFT PEDAL.

(New York Globe.)

Up to the present the American troops in France seem as highly esteemed for their modesty as for their efficiency. Let us not at home injure their repute by noisy bragging. The army at the front, at present in the field in relatively small numbers, is but girding on its armour, and it is true now as of old that he that putteth on armour should not boast as he that taketh it off. Every American has been thrilled by the news from France, but there is glory enough to go around, and let us not forget that if the American Saul has been victorious over hundreds the French David has been victorious over thousands.

BELGIUM, THE "PRE-REQUISITE."

(London Daily Chronicle.")

The attack on Belgium, a gratuitous onslaught on a peaceful and unoffending neighbour, was (apart altogether from the neutrality guarantee) a crime destructive of the society of nations. It must be undone and atoned for (so far as it can be) unconditionally. We may bargain about anything else, but to bargain about that would simply be to consecrate the crime. Until Germany recognizes this, it will be of little use to discuss anything with her. The point is our "pre-requisite; not because we have the least wish to stand on form, but because there is vastly more than a formality in it—nothing less, indeed, than the very root and foundation of all that the Allies are fighting for."

(From The Washington Evening Star, May 4, 1918.)

A simple operation on the vertebrae of the neck performed here yesterday by two Washington osteopaths, Dr. R. D. Moore, and Dr. Carl Kettler, has restored to an "Anzac" private, Thomas Sheyhill, his sight, lost through a shell explosion at the battle of Gallipoli in the early months of the war.

Examination of Skeyhill, who has been lecturing throughout the country in the interests of the Third Liberty Loan, showed a vertebra at the head of the spinal column slightly out of position. A correction easily was made, with the result that the blindness was dispelled. Physicians explained that the displaced vertebra had impaired functions of nerves indispeneable to the sight.

The blind man is said to have left Australia for this country a few weeks ago, reaching here Thursday last. He has been treated for blindness in many lands and had given up all hope of a cure. His reason for calling on the Washington doctor was only to obtain relief for recurrent neck pains.

At the end of some twenty minutes' manipulation, however, the patient remarked on seeing intermittent flashes of light, and finally astounded the osteopaths and the fellow-soldier who had brought him to the office by announcing joyfully that he could see. For some time after the operation he was color blind, but this even was dispelled in a few hours.

The operation was also followed by a partial loss of memory, but this also has now disappeared. He has cabled home the joyful news to his mother. Before the war Skeyhill was a government employe in Victoria, Australia.

He enlisted when only nineteen years of age and was in active service for more than two years.

BLINDED SOLDIER TELLS HOW IT FELT TO REGAIN SIGHT

(From the Washington Times, May 5, 1918.)

"Within a few minutes after Dr. Moore began manipulating the back of my neck at the apex of the spinal column I experienced a sharp, excruciating pain. Then, as if by magic, little flashes of light began to come before my heretofore dimmed eyes, and before I realized just what was taking place I found that I could see

"My first sensations were those of intense gratitude for the view of this grand old world, which for the last seventeen months has been a place of total darkness to me. Every object on which my newly returned sight fell seemed beautiful beyond compare. Even the bare white walls of the hospital appeared to my startled gaze the most beautiful things on which I have ever looked.

"While in the course of my travels in all parts of the world, speaking and writing for patriotic purposes, I have felt the most intense gratitude to the good people who have showered me with kindness. I must say that when I found that the curtain of darkness was lifted from my eyes, I experienced a thrill which will be my most vivid recollection for the remainder of my life.

"When I became certain that the return of my sight was not a cruel dream, and that henceforth I should be able to look upon the faces of my friends and view the world as I did when, a light-hearted boy, I sprang to the colors in defense of the Empire menaced by the Hun, I could not help stopping for a brief moment and offering a silent prayer of thankfulness. No man who has not experienced the shock entailed in the loss of his sight can appreciate in the remotest degree the feelings which surge through me, now that I am again in a land of light, and I know that I can go on as other men and see the glories of a breaking day or watch the sunset sink at eventime behind the hills or far horizons in the level country.

"I want to say to the people of the United States, through the columns of The Times, that just as soon as I have completed my lecture contracts on behalf of the various patriotic activities in which I am engaged, I will again join the colors and go back over there, where I hope to be given an opportunity of putting a number of Huns in the place where they will be pushing up daisies, as we say in the service when a man is buried.

"The battle in which I was blinded was fought on the dllll lu u uu uu December 8, 1916. We were charging up a steep declivity when there was an awful, world-rocking explosion, and I, among others, staggered back and fell to the ground. I was unconscious for some time, but at last came a sense of returning consciousness, which was followed by the dread realization that though still alive, I was blind.

"Regular physicians ascribed my condition to shell shock and were not at all encouraged as to the possibility of my ever regaining sight. I, however, kept on and hundreds of physicians, some famous specialists in England, France and the United States, have examined my eyes, all coming to the same conclusion, that only a medical miracle could save me from going through life in the black mists. * * *

"My one ambition now is to complete my lecture arrangements and get back into action, where every able-bodied man should be. There is a battle line in France that needs strengthening and it is there I want to be, fighting shoulder to shoulder with the gallant American lads, the brave French, the indomitable British, the fine Italians and the men of Canada and Australia whose dash and daring have won the admiration of the world and the bitter hatred of the Huns, who haven't got the physical or moral courage to face us, man to man, in the open field."

Experiences With Girls in Business

Some Comments on Their Efficiency With a Touch of Romance and a Good Measure of World Wisdom.

An anonymous contributor to the July "American" recounts his "Experience with women in men's jobs." The experience was gained in the office and workrooms of a large factory in New England. Mixed up with his cost sheets on efficiency the writer has a touch of romance and a good measure of world wisdom. "The girls who work for me," he writes, "are faithful, quiet, unusually quick to learn, and loyal to the interests of the business. When I say that they do not have the initiative or inventive qualities of the men I am making no criticism. They have been always —and must be — the conservers of the world. Men are the pioneers, the gamblers; it is woman's place to guard the civilization that has been accumulated through man's pioneering, by guarding its corner-stone, the home."

The feminine love for bright, home-like surroundings must be respected. They will not be contented in untidy, dark surroundings, no matter how attractive the employmen may be from a monetary point of view.

In skill and dexterity there is no comparison between boys and girls. Given a boy and a girl of the same age the girl is more mature, talks more intelligently and carries herself with more confidence.

They learn more quickly than boys, enthuse more readily and lose their enthusiasm more promptly.

To avoid too easy discouragement one girl noive only should be instructed at a time. When one sees that another cannot master a task the more competent observer is likely to become discouraged from even trying to learn.

A boy coming into a new place is full of curiosity. He must begin making investigations. He will not stay at his own post and mind his own work. A girl will follow her instructions attentively without attempting any experiments. Her curiosity mainly concerns the other girls about her.

But the boys have more ambition. When a boy looks at a superior in office, he is likely figuring out what he will do when he gets his job. The girl is probably wondering whether he is kind to his wife.

Women are slow to appreciate the impersonal element in business. They have their unreasonable likes and dislikes, and they will work only indifferently for the superior who does not apeal to their imagination.

Men are more liberal in their judgment of their business associates than women, and employers must respect social standards in making up a staff of girls.

While women are never jealous of the success of a man, and will loyally help him to success, they are not inclined to be so magnanimous towards their own sex.

A prevailing deficiency is the failure to take business seriously. Some special small demand at home and they are like as not to stay at home and attend to it. And next morning they turn up bright and smiling with no suspicion that their absence has in the least disturbed routine."

"But," we are told, "business is going to be cleaner and more wholesome in the future because of the presence of women in it."

THREATENED STORM BREAKS OVER G.W.V.A. CONVENTION

Murmurings of First Days of Convention Find Outlet in Definite Decision of Delegates Not to Remain Longer With Comrades—Playing Politics.

Toronto, Aug. 1. — A threatened storm which has been hovering over the Dominion convention of the Great War Veterans' Association, broke yesterday afternoon when the Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates withdrew.

In the statement issued last night the Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates make it clear why they found it necessary to secede. The statement says that they have received from the convention the unfortunate impression that an attempt is being made to formulate a political organization with the idea of running the country. They also point out that they believe there is an effort on the part of an element in Toronto to use the association for their own aggrandizement. They declare that the city of Toronto should have far more than 2257 paid up members. Complaint is made of the attitude adopted by Toronto and Ontario members of jeering and howling at outside members with whom they may not agree.

Colonel W. T. Purney of Halifax, President of the Great War Veterans Associaiton, when shown the statement issued by the Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates, refused to make a statement. He went into conference with Delegates Maxwell and Law of Winnipeg, and then said he had hopes of healing the breach.

When the convention opened on Monday the Winnipeg delegates objected to the representation granted to Toronto.

Following this Col. Pidgeon, of Ottawa, introduced an amendment to the procedure of the convention by which each delegate would vote upon the paid up membership of the association. His amendment was voted down. The Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates then withdrew and the convention went into executive session to attempt to adjust the difference. It continued until yesterday morning. On Tuesday night the Ontario delegation at the request of Delegate Fletcher, met in causus. A further resolution yesterday morning similar to the amendment of Colonel Pidgeon, was voted down. Then came the second decision to withdraw.

ON ROCK OF PUBLIC GRANTS.

Conditions in Toronto in the G.W.V.A. have operated in the minds of the western delegates. They believe that there is an effort upon the part of an element in Toronto to use the association for their own aggrandizement. They declare that the city of Toronto should have far more than 2257 paid up members.

TO DEMAND EXPLANATION.

It was stated among them last night that before they leave Toronto they will ask from the floor of the convention an explanation of the budget of the local association for the coming year, in which it is stated that $22,000 will be required or thereabouts to maintain the organization locally. Without civic assistance to the extent of $10,000 it would not be self-supporting. In Winnipeg with a paid-up membership of 3,500, the affairs are conducted by a secretary and two stenographers.

Cannot remain in Convention

"It is further submitted that the general condition of affairs prevailing at his convention are such that we do not consider it right or desirable that we should participate further in its deliberation.

"We have received from the convention the unfortunate impression that an attempt is being made to formulate a political organization with the idea of running the country. This is not or ever has been our conception, nor was it the intention at the inception convention held at Winnipeg, April 1917.

"We have faith in a just cause and the honor of our fellow-citizens, and believe that such means to obtain justice are entirely unwarranted at the present time.

"We are firmly of the conviction that the attitude adopted from time to time by the Toronto and Ontario delegates of jeering and howling at outside delegates with whom they may not agree is not conducive to harmoney or good results."

THE GROUND IS DRYING UP

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 1.—The ground on the British front is now drying under the hot sun. Except for laying down of barrages here and there along the line and the usual harassing fire from both sides, the front this morning was quiet. It is evident that the German defeat on the Marne is having full effect among the German emperor's troops on this front, despite the impression that while the second German asault had failed their comrades still were holding Chateau-Thierry. Prisoners knew absolutely nothing of the Entente Allied advance to Fere En Tardenois.

From German prisoners, British officers have learned news regarding what has happened on the Aisne-Marne front is now filtering into the German trenches opposite the British lines. Prisoners who have been captured in Flanders same some of the facts are just becoming known.

UNCLE SAM CALLS IN THE SOMBRERO HAT

LONDON, August 1.—The death knell of the sombrero type of hat, which has been a great favorite with American soldiers in England, is sounded in a general order issued by the American headquarters. The order states that all officers and enlisted men on duty in England will cease wearing the service hat after August and will turn in such hats to the quartermaster.

The regulation headgear in future will be the "overseas cap" similar to that worn by British aviators.

BOY LOST PART OF FOOT TRYING TO BOARD BOX CAR

While trying to climb on to a G. T. R. freight train near the Bonner-Worth company last night, Leo Walker, about ten ears old, son of Mr. Joseph Walker, 432 Cambridge street, got his right foot caught under the wheels of one of the cars ,and at St. Joseph's hospital it was amputated through the instep. The train was coming into Peterboro, and near the siding above McDonnel street the boy succumbed to the lure of the handle and steps on thesides of the passing cars and finally tried to pull himself abroad. It was not clear how the boy's foot dragged beneath the wheels but apparently in his adventure he had miscalculated distances and suffered the injury that has crippled many another boy who dared to steal a forbidden ride on a boxcar. Dr. Gallivan and Dr. Moir attended the boy, and found that the toes of the right foot were so badly squashed that amputation of part of the foot was necessary.

POULTRY DISEASES RESPONSIBLE FOR BIG NATIONAL LOSS

At least fifty per cent. of the chickens, young ducks and turkeys, and ten per cent. of the adult birds, die each year from diseases, many of which are preventable. This is an annual national loss of probably millions of dollars that should be avoided to a large extent.

War conditions make it imperative that farmers and poultrymen as far as possible should stop this enormous leak. To do this every breeder should pay strict attention to the general conditions of his flock. When anything unusual is noted in a fowl, it is advisable to place the affected individual in separate quarters. If within a short time recovery does not take place, it is unwise to destroy the fowl without first ascertaining the cause of the disorder. The prevalence of disease is more often the cause of failure than the lack of practical knowledge and the extreme importance of keeping the quarters clean; isolation of all ailing fowls and immediate action in regard to finding out the cause cannot be too strongly impressed upon the poultryman.

When trouble occurs ,forward to the Biological Laboratory, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont., a live but sick fowl, or, in the absence of such, a dead bird. In the interval disinfect the quarters, runs, drinking fountains and feed dishes to check the spread of any infectious disease.

Disinfect the poultry houses by spraying the interior with a limewash solution (50 lbs. stone lime slaked in a barrel of water plus one gallon of a good commercial disinfectant). Fill cracks and crevices to destroy mites, lice, etc. If a smaller amount is required it may be prepared by adding two and half pounds of lime to a pail of water plus half a teacupful of disinfectant.

Keep a crop growing in some part of the yards and alternate poultry and crops. If the runs are small cover with a coating of air—slaked lime and dig up. If the runs are too large to dig, plough and cultivate before sowing. Rape is a good crop for this purpose. Rear all chicks on fresh soil.

Although these precautions may appear unnecessary it is the only way of combatting many disease conditions affecting poultry, which if left to themselves will undoubtedly prove decidedly costly in the long run.

Imperial Advisory Council on Immigration is to Be Formed

Great Britain Will Naturally Desire to Restrict Immigration for Some Years to Come.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, August 1.—The formation of an Imperial Advisory Council on Immigration on which the Dominion will be directly represented is predicted by Hon. J. A. Calder, Minister of Immigration and Colonization. Great Britain, says Mr. Calder, will naturally desire to restrict immigration from her shores for some time after the war on account of the past four year's heavy wastage in her man-power. A bill was recently introduced in the British House whose purpose it was to provide for a complete supervision of immigration, but the measure failed to become law. An advisory board will, Mr. Calder thinks, be natural sequence.

Trade Extension.

The Minister states that it is impossible at present to predict the immigration movement after the war "Great Britain's ability to hold her men within her shores," says Mr. Calder, "will depend upon the extent to which she is prepared to go in the matter of extending her trade, commerce, industry, etc. So far as the North American continent is concerned, it will take a long time transporting our own troops home without thinking about immigration for some time."

Mr. Calder referred to the decision of the Imperial Conference to leave to each Dominion the right to decide who would come to their shores as a good solution of certain questions which have vexed Canada for some time back.

THIRTY THOUSAND CANS OF PEAS A DAY

COBOURG, Aug. 1. — Canning industries in the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham are scenes of busy activity. Canning peas has been extensively carried on the past two weeks. The pea crop is an excellent one, the best that has been known for years in this locality. At the local factory some 70 employees are engaged, including a number of ladies who answered the call to service in order to obviate the necessity of bringing in foreign labour, and to aid in food conservation. The factories in East Northumberland are equally busy.

The Durham Canning Factory at Orono is also a busy place. About 60 persons are employed, with a weekly pay sheet of $1,000. About 30,000 cans of peas is the daily output.

STONE NOW VISIBLE, PREDICTS HUN FUTURE

Famous "Hunger Stone" in Elbe River Above Water.

AMSTERDAM, August 1.—The famous "Hunger Stone" in the River Elbe near Tetschen which, according to popular belief in Germany, predicts a famine when seen, is now visible for the first time since the beginning of the war.

The stone lies in the bed of the river and has never been visible save at exceptionally low tide. On the stone is chiselled in old German: "When ye see me, ye shall weep."

YOUNG PRO-GERMAN BROKE HIS PAROLE IN PETERBORO, LANDS IN AMERICAN INTERMENT CAMP

Reinhold Heuer Joined an United States Regiment Under Assumed Name—Altogether Too Eager to Get Overseas—Now in Safe Keeping.

After breaking his parole in Peterborough, Reinhold Heuer was traced by Chief Thompson to an American regiment, in which he had enlisted under an assumed name, and is now interned for the duration of the war in a United States internment camp. Heuer was employed as an expert at the Colonial Weaving Factory. He asserted that he was a Swiss, but his passports and other papers showed that he was born in Germany. It was generally believed by those acquainted with him there that he was a German sympathizer. He was ordered to report regularly to Chief Thompson and did so until last autumn, when he disappeared. No one seemed to know how or where he had gone. His trunk and clothes were left behind, suggesting that he had made no effort to take them with him out of this country.

Eventually, the Chief picked up his trail. Heuer had enlisted in a battalion in a camp near Philadelphia under an alias. He claimed to be of Swiss nationality, and evidently had little difficulty in joining the Sammies.

When the Chief wrote the Colonel of that regiment, he latter replied that he had no one named Heuer on his roll, but Chief Thompson replied by sending a detail description of the young man, and also a picture post card of him. By that complete identification Heuer was picked out from under his pseudonym and finally deposited in an internment camp as a reward for his keen desire to get to the front.

Chief Thompson has received a letter from the United States Attorney-General's department acknowledging his initiative and co-operation in following up this case.

FREE COFFEE IS ONLY ISSUED BY THE Y.M.C.A. IN FIGHTING ZONE

Sgt. Norman M. Taylor enlisted with the 4th Field Ambulance Corps at Winnipeg, November 10th, 1914, went overseas April 14th., 1915. In his letter of June 20th he says:

I have just been reading G. W.V.A. complaints against the Y.M.C.A. Now I don't think there are any men here on active service in France could find any fault with the Y.M.C.A. If things are as they present them, it must have been in the earlier stages of the war before the Y. M. C. A. was rightly organized.

In one big battle I remember they were giving away chocolate, cigarettes, biscuits and hot tea or coffee. Right here to-day there are Y.M.C.A. stands where you can get a cup of tea or coffee free. Their stands are close to the front. I have seen them in the trenches and I have never seen any overcharging done. They supply all units with sporting goods. When out of the line you can go there and borrow whatever goods you need such as running shoes, lacrosse sticks, baseball outfits etc., and when finished with them you return them. This is only a few of the many things they are doing for us. We get all our writing paper free and I have never seen anyone buy socks here yet. Then work here is beyond praise and I consider the Y.M.C.A. my best friend.

By September 1918, Sgt. N. M. Taylor will have completed three years of steady work in France.

SERVED IN FRANCE.

Sgt. G. Stanley Taylor enlisted Aug. 1915, with the [illegible] served in France eleven months was invalided to England, where he still remains. He says:— In reading the statements of the G.W.V.A. in their attacks on the Y.M.C.A. one W. V. says he only heard tell of one man getting three cups of coffee free from the Y.M.C.A.

There is no free coffee issued by the Y.M.C.A. only in the fighting zone and any soldiers who never reach that line consequently does no get any free coffee. And there have been large numbers in France who have never been in the fighting zone.

On the Somme from our wagon lines to the guns there were three Y.M. C. A. dugouts all under shell fire. We received a cup of hot coffee and a package of biscuits free any time we called. We get all the writing paper we want. Also lots of free entertainments, baseball and sporting equipments. The last time I was on pass to London. I got my meals at a Y.M. C.A. but for 1 shilling just as good as I would have to pay twice the sum at any of the restaurants.

Protection for Soviet Government

Lenine Trotsky Addresses the Moscow Council.

Canadian Press.

MOSCOW, August 1st.—At a session of the labor organizatons, executive main committee and Moscow council at which Lenine Trotsky spoke, resolutions were passed declaring "Socialist Fatherland in Danger', and that vigilance must be increased against the Bourgeoisie. In order to protect the Soviet government the Bourgeoisie must be placed under control and mass terror put into practice against them. The general watchword must be death or victory with mass expeditions for bread and mass military organization. Chief tasks at present were declaredt o be the repulse of the Czecho Slovaks and obtaining of grain.

MAYOR HAS SCHEME

WOULD WIPE OUT EXISTING HOUSING COMMITTEES AND START AGAIN WITH ONE OF HIS OWN.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—Mayor Church yesterday issued a lengthy memorial on the housing problem, which will be submitted to the conference of the Board of Health and Board of Control next week. He suggests a committee composed of the Commissioner of Finance, Medical Officer of Health, Commissioner of Works, City Architect and Assessment Commissioner, to report on housing in lieu of the committee named by the local Board of Health and the Property Committee.

The Mayor also proposes:

1. City might consider temporarily leasing or granting part of its vacant land in trust to a civic trustee board to erect small cottages on a definite plan with all conveniences.

2. City to receive donations of land on which under city control small cottages could be erected.

3. Every district in the city to be separately treated, and building restrictions relaxed as a war measure In certain number of a limited few districts allow erection of frame cottages as a war measure, with all conveniences.

POLICE WARNING THAT NOXIOUS WEEDS MUST GO

Property owners must remove the noxious weeds from their vacant lots. Burdocks, thistles, clover and other weeds are now going to seed, and the city is promised a bumper crop, which the police are determined to discourage by means of fines, etc., as provided by a city by-law. This may be regarded as a warning to property owners that they are expected to rid their premises of weeds.

For coffee and tea make a syrup of your sugar by adding a third as much water as sugar and boil. This is an approved method of economy.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM A FORMER PETERBORO BOY

The following interesting letter from the front lines has been received by Mrs. W. G. Common, 381 Clinton street, Toronto.

Dearest mother, father and Billy,

"Just a few lines this time for I am a bit fagged out today. We've had a couple of hard days marching and once more we are with the 'old jolly boys' (guns). They sound quite homely after our rest. You ask me what I am doing? Well, I'm with the Lewis gun again and very glad to be with it once more. I am in charge of a gun crew and I've got the best crew in the whole battalion. We won a 60 franc prize in a proficiency competition, while out on rest so you can understand what a smart lot I have.

Float Parade.

The last two or three days of our rest we had divisional sport and one of the main features was a float parade. Serg. Brown, Bob Sherwood and I were the committee for our float which I am proud to say was my idea. It was a grand burlesque of the return of the Canadian Corps in 1950. But it was funny. We procured an old French waffon and the Pioneers converted it into the finest-looking ship or tramp steamer you ever saw. We had six horses pulling it and seven characters in all. They were as follows: Captain, 1st. mate (that's me), stocker, Bainsfather, Old Bill and Fritzie besides. The costumes we got from a concert party and did the sign painting for it. One of the best points about it was the funnel from which we had columns of dense smoke issuing. We won first prize for it and afterwards had our pictures taken. So when they are finished, you shall have one. I'm sure you will laugh when you see it for we made ten thousand men laugh. General Currie was there and I thought he would die laughing. We caried on a lot of Tommy rot on board, shooting up flar lights and a lot of funny talk, etc.

I must close new and you must not expect too many letters for the time being for I'll be pretty busy. But you may be sure that I'll not neglect you. God bless you all, best of love from—Roy.

This letter was written a few days before Corporal Common was severely wounded. He is now in the hospital. The formerly resided in Peterboro.

LONGBOAT MUST WAIT

Controllers Hear Letter Read from Famous Runner, Asking About $500 Grant.

An application from Tom Longboat ,the famous Indian runner for payment of the $500 grant voted by the City Council to enable him to take an engineering course, was received by the Board of Control today.

Mayor Church explained that the grant was made in 1907, but had not been paid.

Controller McBride: "He's in France with a construction battalion, and the matter had better wait over till he comes back."

Mayor Church: "All right, write and tell him the matter awaits his return and we hope he'll come back.

The most delicious cherry pie is made in the English fashion, in a deep dish with no bottom crust and a cup in the middle to hold the juice.

A carpenter's apron is handy to wear when gardening. It is firm enough to resist dirt, and the pockets are an everlasting convenience.

Simple frocks of silk or chiffon have a most important place in the summer outfit.

It may be that the persistence of the "cape fashion" may in a measure prevent a recurrence of last year's "summer fur" rage.

"Live in a Worry invites death in a hurry." Worry wastes nerve force at a tremendous rate. The more exhausted the greater the tendency to worry.

Then how is one to get out of this vicious circle? By building up the nervous system with the aid of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

As the nerves are strengthened you forget to worry and find yourself resting and sleeping naturally.

Price of Berries Affected by Big Crops Near the City

To local gardeners is due the comparatively low price of raspberries. The best berries are selling in the stores at from 20 to 22 cents a box, but quotations from the Niagara district are 25 cents wholesale. It is stated that Stinson and Son, on the gravel road, have been largely instrumental in bringing the price to consumers down to twenty cents. At that figure, of course, the market is abnormal, but it enabled far more persons to buy supplies than could have afforded a price exceeding thirty cents.

A fruit farmer near Newcastle has just sold his entire crop of berries to the canners at 24 cents a box. The general attitude of local grocers is to buy as little fruit as possible. In the first place there is no profit in this trade under existing conditions. The growers demand prices that are altogether too strong and the consumers strenuously object to the high prices. Hence, the helpless grocer is caught between two fires.

"We are most reluctant to ask our customers to pay the present prices, but we cannot avoid it. The only thing we can do is to stock lightly and that is what we are doing. Berries are an example of the general prices. Last year gooseberries were about 90 cents or $1.00 a basket; to-day they are $1.75 and hard to get." This was one grocer's statement, and he made it clear that the retailers are not the callouned, indifferent crowd that some citizens pretend to believe.

Boy Fell Out of Apple Tree, Pierced By a Stick Below

Last evening about 5:30 the ambulance was called to the home of Mr. Nicholas Martin, 532 Rogers street. His eight year old son, Michael fell out of an apple tree at the rear of the house and had the fleshy part of his leg penetrated by a sharp stick which lay on the ground. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital where the wound was dressed. He was removed to his home this morning.

LATE A. H. LEHANE

IN MEMORIAM.

LEHANE—In loving memory of Albert H. Lehane, who passed away to eternal reward February 1st, 1918.

"May he rest in peace."

The parting came, 'twas sad but true,
The end came all too soon.
The shock, the grief and loneliness,
Oh, Lord! Thy will be done.

Six months have passed, my heart is sore,
As time goes on I miss him more,
His loving smile, his dear kind face,
Nothing can fill the vacant place.

His calm, benign and peaceful poise,
His patient, loving ways
Have all passed on as records
Of those his earthly days.

Oh! can we never grasp his hand
Once more in love's embrace,
It's passed beyond our privilege
But in our heart's encased.

Forget him! No I never will,
I loved him then, I love him still,
His memory is as fresh to-day
As in the hour he passed away.

Oh! Happy thought, a life well spent,
A glimpse of heaven below;
We hope to meet, just in a while
To meet and part no more.

PETERBORO GIRLS QUICKLY LEARN TO BECOME EXPERT LIFE SAVERS

A Near Drowning Victim Would Have a Pretty Safe Chance With One of Miss Littlefield's Pupils Around—A Side Attraction to Inverlea Park—Spectators Are Not So Numerous.

Few of the public seem to know that there are mermaids in the city, and right within a stone's throw of the main street. It is true, though. And to prove it all that is needed is a visit to the new swimming tank at the Y.W.C.A. on a Wednesday evening when the life-saving' class it at work.

Last night a class of ten gave a splendid display of what Miss Caroline Littlefield had taught them, when ten athletic girls, clad charmingly in multi-coloured "one-piece" bathing suits started the evening with an amusing exhibition (amusing to the onlooker who didn't stand near enough to be splashed) of diving. Headed by one young lady who appeared to take the water as second nature, a series of four now glided in—then the inevitable comic one. She didn't want to jump! She knew she'd never come up! After arguing the matter with the swimming teacher for several minutes she received a little encouragement stronger than words and — splash—she came up again, and the onlookers moved a few paces further back in case of a repetition.

Life-Saving.

Following this exhibition in diving and swimming, the girls did some splendid work in life-saving. Five acting as victims, five as life savers, the girls 'rescued' each other in a miraculously cool headed manner which augured well for the victim of an accident in the water if any of Mrs. Littlefield's pupils should be handy. In this same feature the girls did some diving for objects on the tank floor under four feet of water and invariably bobbed up with what they were looking for.

Learn Quickly.

The girls are displaying marked aptitude for learning to swim and some who were never in the water, that is a large body of it, before, have after seven lessons, mastered the art.

Clean Water.

The water which is heated enough to take the chill off is clean and clear and four feet deep, changed daily from the top, where any impurities would rise to. Twice a week the janitor changes the entire tank and in this way everything is kept sanitary.

WORST STORM OF THE SEASON AT STONEY LAKE

Lake Steamer Had to Put Into Port Until It Was Over.

One of the worst storms of the season broke at Stoney Lake between 4 and 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon. It had been threatening for several days, and thunder storms were occurring at other places in the county but Stoney Lake got none. Monday's storm made up for any lack of attention in the past.

Captain Young of the "Manita" pronounced it one of the worst storms on the lakes that he had ever known. He was on his afternoon trip and had to put in to shore until it was over. The wind which accompanied it was terrible and drove the small craft to shelter.

Mr. George Guillett and another young man were on Mr. Collins' island, and were sitting on the verandah, when the cottage was struck. Dr. Lingwood whose cottage is on an adjoining island, saw it struck, and that it was on fire. He went over and found the young men were unconscious from the shock. With the assistance of others who arrived the fire was put out and the young men revived.

Six young ladies from Viamede were on their way back from a picnic at Indian River, and were caught at Ship Island, where there was absolutely no shelter. They were drenched with the rain but arrived back at the hotel unharmed and declare they would not have missed the experience for anything.

Some Great Pictures At the Empire

Season Has Been an Exceptionally Good One—Two Programs.

The Empire theatre has been giving a wonderfully good run of pictures this Summer which have been greatly appreciated by the large audiences that have attended.

Tonight Earle Williams, will appear in "In the Balance" from the popular novel, The Hillman, with the following cast in a five reel drama with a well balanced program.

The Cast.

John Strangeway—Earle Williams.
Louise Maurel—Grace Darmond.
Suphy Gerald—Miriam Miles.
Prince of Seyre—Denton Vane.
Lady Hilda Mullock—Julia Swayne Gordon.
Stephen Strangeway — Robert Guillard.
Graillot—Templer Saxe.

The Story.

The actress is on her way to visit the Prince in his castle when she is stranded on a lonely road by an accident to her motor car. The Hillman happens along and takes her to Peak Hall. He is still young and handsome, but marked by the stern, fanatical belief of his family that no member of it ever should leave the hills.

In an exchange of confidence, the Hillman warns the actress not to visit the dissolute Prince and she in turn tells him that for once he should try the broader life of the cities. Both heed the other's advice. She returns direct to the city and he, in a brief period follows.

The Prince, still pursuing the actress, seeks to entangle the Hillman by throwing a notorious dancer in his path, but fails. Strangeway, the Hillman, proposes to Louise, the actress, but she withholds her answer. His brother comes from the hills, to reclaim him, but his mission is vain. Again the Hillman proposes to Louise, who is always in the company of the Prince, and this time is accepted. Angered at his apparent loss of the actress, the Prince makes a scandalous remark about her at his club which is resented with blows by the Hillman, whose love is all but crushed, when hurrying to Louise she admits what the Prince said is true. The outcome of this strange situation forms the dramatic conclusion of the play.

THE LAKE OF BAYS

The Lake of Bays is one of the popular resorts this year and the Grand Trunk are carrying a heavy traffic, mostly Canadians, to that district. Additional attractions have been added at the Wawa, where a young ladies orchestra of clever musicians play for the evening dances and the Sunday evening sacred concerts. In addition to the regular golf course at Norway Point the management of the Wawa have laid out a nine-hole domestic course through the hotel grounds. The first two being almost to the front door of the hotel. The course is in charge of Lieut. Fraser, a returned officer, and the links are in excellent condition. G.W.V.A. REPORT

Grievances of Soldiers Are Attributed to Misunderstanding.

TORONTO, July 31.—The committee authorized by the Executive Committee of the G. W. V. A., Ontario Provincial Branch, to discuss the alleged grievances advanced by members at the Hamilton convention, has reported, and while there is criticism of certain things, the report, as a whole, is favourable to the Y. M. C. A. in Canada.

British Policy Different.

The report, in conclusion, says:

"It is quite possible that a Canadian soldier has been ministered to by the British Y. M. C. A., and has taken it for granted that it was the Canadian Y. M. C. A. The police of the two associations is different. Hence the misunderstanding.

"Your committee is of the opinion that whilst certain individual criticisms have been justified in view of the circumstances detailed, the work done by the Y. M. C. A. is beneficial to the soldier. The extent of its work can only be measured if it were possible to imagine the Y. M. C. A. or any other institution doing similar work as being non-existent for some weeks. The absence of them would, by force of contrast, bring to light the essential value of their work among the Canadian soldiers."

NO EARLY CALL TO MEN IN "B"

TORONTO, Aug. 1—As the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Garrison Regiment is considerably under strength, District Hedquarters is making an effort to fill up its ranks. With this view all the employed men at Niagara Camp and in the various guards are being carefully combed over. Headquarters officers do not anticipate an early call of men in "B" category, so are taking this means of filling up the ranks. The garrison battalion which is camped at Exhibition Park, is composed almos entirely of men in category "B." Military officials are inclined to think that in view of the fact that the hundred thousand men to be raised under the Military Service Act are now nearly all called up, more "B" men are not likely to be summoned for some time.

REASON FOR THE BIG CREDIT ASKED

British Parliament is About to Ad-Adjourn.

Canadian Press.

LONDON, August 1. — In asking for a vote of credit of three billion five hundred million today, Andrew Bonar Law said the largest of amount was not due to increased expenditure, but to the fact trat Parliament was about to adjourn. He hoped htat not more than one more vote would be necessary before the end of the fiscal year.

IMPERIAL PREFERENCE TO REMAIN

Canadian Press.

LONDON, August 1. — The Times says the Prime Minister made an important statement of economic policy of government in the Commons yesterday to a deputation of two hundred manufacturers. It is understood Lloyd George made it quite plain that imperial preference has come to stay. One of his arguments was that only raw materials of the Dominions. Another aspect of trade policy which the Prime Minister strongly insisted upon was that the government would have to see that our essential industries were strengthened and protected. He made it abundantly clear that the longer the war lasted the worse would be economic terms which Germany would obtain from England and her allies.

WEDDING BELLS

HOUGHTON—DOWNS.

On Tuesday afternoon the 30th, in All Saints' church, the Rev. R. B. Grobb officiating, the marriage took place of Lilly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Downes, to James, eldest son of Mrs. (and the late Pte. G. Houghton of the 59th) of N. Monaghan.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in apricot crepe de chine, with the customary wreath and veil, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Miss Margaret Spence in white crepe de chene, and carrying sweet peas and carnations made a very dainty bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Ernest Houghton. The little Misses Connie Downes and Victoria Goodson, in white silk and carrying baskets of sweet peas and ferns, made pretty little flower girls. After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, about forty guests being present.

Very numerous and costly were the gifts received, testifying to the high esteem in which the young people are held, among them being a very handsome silver coffee percolator and complete set of table silver from the staff and male employees, and a set of Irish table linen from the female employees of the Henry Hope & Co., at which plant the bride was employed, and a massive silver tea service from friends and neighbours of the groom in N. Monaghan. The best wishes of a host of friends go with them for their future. The happy couple will be at home to their friends after the fifth of the month at their home, 504 Bolivar street, city.

The groom enlisted in the fall of 1914 in the 21st battalion and saw considerable service in France, being discharged on account of wounds in the fall of 1917.

An order for another lot of these gloves to sell at the same price could not be placed with the manufacturers. They simply would not accept any orders while prices were wavering. ITALY WELCOMES AMERICAN TROOPS

Large Percentage of First Contingent Are Native-Born Italians.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, August 1.—I have spent a day at the base camp of the first American infantry contingent to arrive at the Italian front in one of those once-famous and now half-forgotten little towns of Northern Italy, whose battered walls and citadels tell of their old importance in the days when Popes fought Emperors.

In every company of the battalion at whose headquarters I lunched there were from 50 to 75 Americans, who were born in Italy and speak Italian perfectly.

The welcome the troops have had both in the large cities like Milan and Turin, and small villages like those where they are now billeted, is of the warmest.

The splendid build of the troops and their excellent equipment will have the effect of great encouragement whenever they are seen. Those lean, alert faces; those frames of steel and hickory do not belong to men who could be anything but a victorious army.

An attractive way to serve left-over mashed potatoes is to add to them an egg, make into balls, dip into egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat. They should be flavoured with parsley.

CANCER A PUZZLE

In Many of Its Phases It Baffles Medical Science.

ITS CAUSES ARE NOT KNOWN.

Neither Is It Revealed Whether the Disease Is Hereditary or Not—In Its First Stage It Is Curable—How the Malignant Growths Spread.

"The word 'cancer,'" says World's Work, "though it figures largely in popular speech, is used with less and less frequency in medical literature. There is probably no word comprehensive enough to include all the kinds of abnormal growths to which the human frame is subject. Cancer is merely one shape in which this tendency to malformation manifests itself.

"The human body in its ideal condition is a symmetrical product. It consists of a multitude of parts, each developing not only with reference to itself, but in perfect harmony with the rest of the organism. A subtle influence, known as the power of organization, regulates this highly important matter. An arm, a leg, a nose, a chin—any organ or member which one cares to name—does not develop independently, but preserves important relations with the rest of the body. Our four fingers and thumbs have constantly in mind the rights of one another. When one reaches a certain size it does not keep on growing, but stops. If it still went on a single finger would reach a length of several feet in a lifetime.

"Any observant person, however, is aware that this law is constantly violated. On almost any part of the body little independent growths start into existence. These are composed of minute groups of rebellious cells, small colonies which for some reason ignore this law of development and start on an independent existence of their own. They serve no physiological purpose. When harmless, as they frequently are, they are merely inconvenient blemishes. When dangerous they end by destroying life.

"Mild manifestations of this lawless tendency are the queer formations commonly known as warts and moles. There are other more noteworthy protuberances, such as 'wens,' that grow inexplicably, frequently upon the scalp, reach a certain size, and then stop. This latter growth belongs to the general class of tumors known as benign. They are benign simply because after developing sluggishly to a certain point their growth is mysteriously arrested. Between benign tumors and the most malignant cancers there is only this difference: That the latter have the power of unlimited growth.

"The true cancer, once started on its riotous career, keeps on and digs deep into healthy surrounding tissue and destroys it, until finally, for a variety of reasons, it kills the patient. In some cases a benign growth which has remained quiescent for years suddenly develops a new vitality and becomes malignant. There are those who maintain, though the occurrence is certainly rare, that a harmless wart may sometimes develop into a genuine cancer. The point to be brought in mind is that all these abnormal growths are related; that the only thing that makes one malignant and another not is this tendency to keep growing.

"A genuine cancer in its final stages has another development. It no longer confines its activity to the original seat, but starts new cancers in other parts of the body. Certain groups of cancer cells break away from the primary headquarters, escape into the blood stream and start new growths elsewhere. This is the phenomenon known as 'generalized cancer.'"

Millions of dollars have been devoted to the study of cancer and its cure, and every known scientist is wide awake to the study of the disease and to grasp hold of anything that may indicate a possibility of its alleviation. The points upon which the authorities on cancer in this country agree, says the New York World, are as follows:

First.—Cancer in its first stage is local and is curable.

Second.—The causes of cancer are not known.

Third.—It is not known whether or not cancer is hereditary.

Sixth.—The idea that cancer in plants may give rise to cancer in man is fantastic. Tumors are not contagious.

Seventh.—Radium does not permanently cure internal cancer. It may check the growth for awhile, but sooner or later it comes back. Popular belief in radium is based on the fact that only the occasional cures are heard from—not the failures. The failures outnumber the cures 100 to 1.

A Good Sign.

In digging out an apothecary's shop in Pompeii the workmen brought to light a notice that confronted visitors to the place 2,000 years ago: "Otiosis non est locus: discede, morator." It is a good sign for the modern office or place of business. Callers who know Latin will read it for themselves. Those who do not will ask what it means. Then comes your opportunity. "This is no place for lilers. Loafer not omit!"

"GOD'S GRACIOUS HELP"

Will Aid the Germans to Foil the Enemy, He Announces.

AMSTERDAM, July 13.— Emperor William has issued a proclamation dated August 1, addressed to the German army and navy, saying that they are facing the hardest struggle of the war and expressing his own and the country's confidence that they will be able to foil "the desperate efforts of the enemy," says a Berlin despatch received here. Emperor William's proclamation reads:

"Serious years of war lie behind you. The German people convinced of its just cause, resting on its hard sword and trusting in God's gracious help, has, with its faithful allies, confronted a world of enemies. Your victorious fighting spirit carried the war in the first year into the enemy's country and preserved the homeland from the horrors and devastation of war.

"In the second and third years of the war, you, by your destructive blows, broke the strength of the enemy in the east. Meanwhile, your comrades in the west offered a brave and victorious front to enormously superior forces.

"As the fruit of these victories, the fourth year of the war has brought us peace in the east. In the west the enemy was heavily hit by the force of your assault. The battles won in recent months count among the highest deeds of fame in German history.

"You are in the midst of the hardest struggle. The desperate efforts of the enemy will, as hitherto, be foiled by your bravery. Of that I am certain and, with me, the entire Fatherland."

ONE SORT OF MURDER.

It Doesn't Take Human Life, but It Shortens Its Usefulness.

Several well known financial men were talking the other day when the name of a man well known in the street for his proclivity to take up valuable time of friends with useless discussions about nothing was mentioned.

"What's that?" said another. "I never heard that he had killed any one unless he talked them to death."

"I mean just what I say. He's a murderer on the installment plan," came the answer.

The speaker was begged to explain, and he said: "I have just so many days to live, and all of them are filled with business of importance. That man comes in and steals my time, and I claim that he has just as much murdered me as if some time in the future he had struck me down, for the time he talks with his nonsense is that much gone out of my life and is lost. I say that he is a murderer on the installment plan."

And when the other members of the party recalled the many times they had been treated in the same way by the man under discussion they agreed with the first man in his verdict.—Wall Street Journal.

LONDON'S UGLY CHURCH.

The First Sacred Edifice in the World to Be Lighted by Gas.

Readers of "Our Mutual Friend" will remember that Dickens gives a whimsical description of St. John's, Westminster, when referring to the home of the doll's dressmaker, Miss Jenny Ween.

"In this region," he writes, "are a certain little street called Church street and a certain little blind square called Smith square, in the center of which last retreat is a very hideous church, with four towers at the four corners, generally resembling some petrified monster, frightful and gigantic, on its back, with its legs in the air."

Lord Chesterfield said St. John's reminded him of an elephant with its legs in the air, and Charles Mathews likened it to a dining table in the same position.

St. John's enjoys the distinction of being the first sacred edifice in the world to be lit by gas. As may be imagined, the introduction of the new illuminant was deeply resented by many conservative spirits, some of whom went so far as to describe it as a sacrilege.—Manchester (England) Courier.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts yesterday 32 cars, with 144 cattle, 81 calves, 1,131 hogs, and 303 sheep and lambs.

The market continuees dull and weak for anything in the butcher cattle line except for choice heavy steers of export quality and fat butcher cows of good quality. Outside of these there appears to be little or no demand for butcher steers and heifers of light weight and medium quality. Several of the packing-houses buyers have practically been out of the market for several days past, these firms having all the beef on hand required for the midsummer hot weather local trade. Choice weighty stuff for the export trade is the only kind the big packers are looking for just at present, and for this they are paying good prices.

While the beef trade is quiet there appears to be quite a demand for bacon hogs. Receipts have been comparatively light and competition keen. The result has been a sharp advance of $1.50 to $1.75 per cwt. in the past week, hogs selling yesterday up to $20 fed and watered, a few lots selling at $19.90.

Lambs also have taken a sudden jump up, owing to lighter receipts. One extra choice lot of lambs sold yesterday at $23.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

HELEN GIVES HER HOSTESS PLEASURE

CHAPTER CXXXIV.

We had a delightful trip home. George was so pleased at the success of his business deal, so pleased that Mr. and Mrs. Babcock had seemed attracted to me, that he was good nature itself. And I was perfectly happy. For once, I had really done something which met with his unqualified approval.

I had not spoken of his going to the aid of Julia Collins, after that night. When we had reached our room, I had remarked:

"I think you made yourself and me unnecessarily conspicuous by interfering with Mrs. Collins and her escort. I was terribly embarrassed."

"Not as much so as was, poor Julia! How she happened to go out with that man, is b., ond me. I expect she did not know his fondness for rum—champagne, rather."

"Well, I felt it was unnecessary for us to get mixed up in it."

"Had you been in such a position, and any friend of mine had not done the same, I should have been very much annoyed with him," he had replied, still good naturedly.

"How did she happen to be in Chicago when we were?" I asked, unable to say more about the restaurant affair because of what George had said.

"She went a couple of days before we did, I believe. She is to remain some time longer, so she told me."

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores.

One Cause of Unhappiness Removed

I was delighted that she was to be out of town for a while. I would be one less cause of unhappiness for me. I had told no one but Evelyn about the faux pas in the restaurant, and she surprised me by saying:

"I'm sorry for Mrs. Collins, or, rather, I should have been had I seen her."

"Well, I wasn't sorry! I was really glad," I confessed, acknowledging for the first time that I had been pleased at the situation in which Mrs. Collins had placed herself by allowing that man to act as her escort.

"Why, Helen! think how mortified she must have been."

"She was! I never saw anyone more confused in my life. I was so angry with George for going near her."

"I should have been glad, had I been you. They have known each other always, have been in the same set, and your husband realized, that, knowingly, Julia Collins would never go where she would be placed in such a position by anyone."

We said no more about the occurrence, but I confess I could not see Evelyn's view-point, and am afraid I rather gloated over the fact that, for once, Julia Collins had been embarrassed. She had made me feel so, many times, and I was not in a forgiving mood toward her.

It seemed that nothing could shake George's good nature. He beamed upon me when he told me how pleased the rest of the company were that Mr. Babcock had joined them in the affair.

"We must ask them to Moreland soon. Babcock will want to meet the directors, and we'll invite Mrs. Babcock, and entertain them at the house."

A Compliment.

"Do you think I am capable? You know they have such perfect service."

"Certainly you are capable. All you need now is a little more confidence in yourself. If they accept, ask Mrs. Sexton to assist you, if you like; she could come and stay while they remain. But I really see no necessity for any such thing. Mrs. Babcock knows you are young; she cannot expect you to be as experienced as she is. I imagine she was keeping house when you were born."

Would wonders never cease? I could scarcely believe it was George talking. If he were to be like this—like he had been ever since we came home—it would make life delightful. I must try harder than ever to please him — to be the perfect hostess, the well-poised woman he would be proud to call, and introduce as, his wife.

Thank you for the compliment, George. I shall try to deserve it," I said quietly.

"You deserve a lot more than you get," he said rather brusquely. "But I am mighty proud of you, at times." With that, he left the house without even saying good bye. He did not come in until nearly eleven o'clock. But I had been as happy as could be, all the evening, and had kept busy planning just how I should entertain Mrs. Babcock if she decided to visit us. I hoped she would. I wanted the chance to show George that his growing confidence in me was not misplaced.

HIS TACT WON.

Pleasantly Spiked the Enemy's Guns and Got What He Wanted.

A London advertising solicitor was sent up into the midlands to get business for a special edition of a daily paper dealing with an important industry. The king pin of this industry was a manufacturer of great repute, a baronet, whose actions determined policy in the trade, but it was said he had never spent a penny for advertising. The success of this special edition turned on Sir John. If this important personage could be landed for an advertisement others would come in as a matter of course.

The solicitor went after Sir John first. He tried to see him, but failed. He wrote to him, but got no reply. Finally an arrangement was made with his private secretary whereby the latter was to doze for five minutes on a certain afternoon, and the solicitor was to slip into Sir John's office on his own responsibility, providing his own introduction.

This plan worked out all right. The advertising solicitor got in. Sir John looked up threateningly when the door opened to admit a stranger. It was a large office, and as the intruder hurried across to where the manufacturer sat he could see storm clouds rising. The moment he was within earshot he said:

"Sir John, I am a staff investigator for the Clarion, and in visiting the leading men of your industry here in the midlands two things have impressed me particularly—the uniform courtesy with which I have been received everywhere and the intelligence with which a survey of the industry has been comprehended."

The rising storm subsided. Of course Sir John was bound to be as courteous and intelligent as the rest of the trade after that, and he wanted to hear about this investigation. He listened as the salesman quickly explained his proposition. The word advertising was not spoken. Before the interview ended, however, he had given his order for a page, and with that everybody else in the trade worth while was brought into line.—Saturday Evening Post.

RECKONING

With Waste In

ADVERTISING

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING offers the manufacturer the best possible way to eliminate waste circulation, for it enables him to advertise where he has and can get distribution. To sell goods profitably depends largely on ability to reach the maximum number of people at the minimum cost.

Newspaper advertising is the quickest and surest means of getting retail distribution. It shows the retailer that a wide spread demand is being created.

The dealer is always ready to sell products that sell easy. He is a reader and an advertiser of the daily newspaper, and is sold on newspaper advertising, for he knows what it will do.

You prove to the retailer you are doing the utmost to help create a demand for him: this is real distribution. You can expand at will, adding steadily to your markets making each a permanent stronghold.

AN EDITOR AND A WIDOW

By M. QUAD.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The editor of the Weekly Grantville Banner was hard up. He was hard up when he established the Banner, six years before, and he had been hard up every day since. He was a middle aged man, but hard-upness had added ten years to his age. He had been a fat man while running a sawmill, but the hard-upness of newspaper life had made a human toothpick of him. On this certain day, as he sat looking out an editorial window, he had to admit that another month would see the suspension of the Banner and the end of the world unless the unexpected happened.

On this same day and hour the Widow Spicer, whose back yard touched the Banner office and was under surveillance from some of its windows, sat down on the back doorstep with her sewing. She was plain under the editorial eye. In fact, he thought her the homeliest woman he ever saw. All the rest of Grantville thought the same way. All visitors to the town were a unit on this subject. As a matter of fact, the widow was corpulent, cross eyed, wheezy, lop shouldered and had a cast in her left eye.

For half an hour the editor surveyed her, and she looked up occasionally and knew that he was doing so, and then a bright thought flashed to his brain. He hugged it there for ten minutes and then dropped out of the window without hat or coat and approached her. They had long known each other. He knew that she was homely, and she knew he was hard up. As she looked up and nodded he took a seat beside her, clasped his hands around one of his knees and began:

"Widow Spicer, every widow ought to marry again."

"I agree with you," she promptly replied.

"And every editor ought to have money."

"He surely had, Mr. Poor."

"Well, our talk is strictly confidential. For $100 in cash the Banner will get you a husband, and you needn't pay a cent until after the ceremony."

She said a good deal, and he said a good deal, and as a result the next issue of the Banner contained the announcement that she was engaged to a rich man in Boston and would soon be married and leave Grantville. The second issue denied the first. A rich relative of the widow's had died, and she would remain right in Grantville until she had found the man of her choice. The third issue stated that she had turned down seven offers that week and that the readers of the Banner would hear of a surprise on the next. The editor made good. He had prevailed upon the widow, he said, not to throw herself away upon the first millionaire that came along, but to give all eligible candidates a fair show. He had put a fruit jar full of beans in the office window, and every one wanting to take a chance at the widow was to pay a quarter to guess at the number of beans. Names would be recorded, and at the end of twenty days the guessers would be introduced in rotation—the nearest guesser first of all. The guessing business, with the hand of a widow at stake, was something new in that locality, and it caught on. Old bachelors, widowers and young men came as far as thirty miles to look at the jar of beans and record a guess. Some put in as many as ten guesses.

Meanwhile, as was the agreement, the widow became a recluse and was not to be seen on the streets. She was looked for, but was not to be found. Of course all the guessers heard of her homeliness, but they also heard of her property and were not going to miss a good thing by being too particular. About the fifteenth man who presented himself was a humpbacked, bowlegged, broken nosed widower. He was baldheaded, and he was cock eyed, and nothing like him had ever been seen in the town. The editor looked upon him with joy and satisfaction. He found him eligible, and for $10 he told him the exact number of beans in the jar. The man then put in ten guesses so as to avoid suspicion, and on the day of the counting he of course won out. There had been fifty guessers and over 400 guesses, and this money had jumped the Banner into the front ranks of journalism.

The widow was prepared to receive Mr. Nott, the successful guesser. If he failed then No. 2 would come along. But he didn't fail. He was jeered and guyed as he made his way to her house on the arm of the editor, but he was not dismayed. The widow saw him when yet a block off, sized him up, and when he entered the house she fell into his arms, exclaiming:

"Thank heaven! I did not dream there was such a homely man in all the world!"

The editor left them and went out to sit on the back steps, but within ten minutes the widow came out with tears in her eyes and a roll of money in her hand and said:

"This hundred dollars belongs to you."

"But you are not married yet," he replied.

"But you are to go for the preacher at once. Such love as Mr. Nott's and mine takes no chances and brooks no delay."

And the Banner enlarged to nine columns a page and got a new head and arranged for a colored supplement and a sporting department, and they have re-elected the editor to the mayoralty of Grantville over and over.

Wagner and Beer.

Signor Angelini Giustiniani, who traveled specially from Rome to Baireuth in order to be present at the first performance of "Parsifal" July 26 1882, gave an account of his impressions in the Rassegna Contemporanea. He was surprised at seeing Wagner drive up to the theater "in a carriage which also conveyed a large barrel of beer perched conspicuously on the box seat by the side of the driver. This was carried into the theater, presumably with a view to slaking the thirst aroused in Wagner and his friends by the performance of his masterpiece."—London Chronicle.

Two Queer Epitaphs.

Are graves, then, dwindled into Button-holes?

Which is not as clever as this epitaph which a famous New York dentist composed for himself:

Stranger, approach this grave with fitting gravity.
Here lies a dentist—filling his last cavity.

Missing Opportunities.

"I have no patience with a man who makes the same mistake twice," said Armes, rather severely, in speaking of an unfortunate friend.

"Neither have I," agreed his wife "when there are so many other mistakes to make."

Missed His Chance.

"Barber's Itch"

Annoying, isn't it? But you can soon get rid of this form of eczema by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment after shaving.

This soothing ointment heals the irritated skin and keeps it soft and pliable. By its antiseptic influence it prevents the spreading of skin trouble.

You will not suffer from tenderness of the skin if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment after shaving. It acts as a food for the skin, keeping it smooth and velvety.

Two Old Customs.

One of the oldest customs in the world, according to an archaeologist, is giving precious metals or other commodities of agreed value in exchange for the necessaries of life. Of course, an equally aged custom is promising to hand over the precious metal or other commodity next week.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Zoological Question.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE MISSING LETTER

By M. QUAD,

(Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.)

When Deacon John Green's wife died he was left with seven children on his hands, and his friends and neighbors said they wouldn't blame him a bit for getting married again within a year. This was very kind of his friends and neighbors, but it didn't exactly solve the problem. To get married, whether for the first time or the second, and whether man or woman, one must find one of the opposite sex who is willing. It is said that in case of a widower over forty his first thought is to marry a girl of twenty and his second to look around for a widow of about his own age. If Deacon Green figured this way he didn't find the girl, and it was two years before he found the widow. He was planting corn in his field one day when a sewing machine man came along and sought to banter him into a purchase. He was a jovial man, and, although the farmer couldn't see his way clear to buying, the other saw his way clear to do him a good turn, and he finally asked the deacon why he had not married again.

"Because I don't know of anybody that would have me," admitted the deacon, with almost a blush.

"Whew! Why, man, you are way behind the times! Say, I can give you the name of a widow right now. She's about forty years old, and she lives in Saundersville. Owns her own house and lot, and I guess she has money."

"She might have me and she might not," answered the deacon.

"But how are you going to know until you try? Say, man, I believe you are letting a good thing slip away."

The deacon thought it over after the agent had gone, and he thought it over when the children wrangled over the supper table and after they had gone to bed. The result was that next day he drove over to Saundersville. It was an hour after he reached the village before he dared call upon the widow, and then he made the slimsiest sort of excuse. He hemmed and hawed and finally asked if she had cider barrels to sell. The Widow Taylor suspected the real object of his visit and smiled at his wanting cider barrels in May, but she didn't smile to hurt his feelings. She let him down easy, and he returned home feeling quite chirky. It was only when he drove into his yard and found five of the children pulling hair on the grass that a chill came over him. Dare he ever pop the question and own up to the seven?

That night, after the children had fought themselves to bed and to sleep, the deacon got out pen and paper and wrote a letter to the woman whom he had seen a few hours before. He told of his situation very truthfully until he came to the number of his children. He dared not admit to seven. It was deception to say "several," but he deceived. "A widower with several interesting children," he put it, and early next morning he gave it to a passing farmer to mail. Only two hours had gone by, and the children had had but one free for all scrap, when his beels suddenly lifted from the ground. Suppose his letter led the widow to saying yes. She must then know that he had seven instead of several children, and what would be the result? She would claim deception and probably sue him for damages. His own letter would convict him. It was a warm May day, but the deacon shivered. Half an hour later he was driving to Saundersville again. His letter to the widow would reach there at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and he must get hold of it.

It was a very nervy thing for the deacon to go to the postoffice at the proper hour and inquire for mail for the Widow Hastings, but he had worked up his courage and the postmistress happened to be unusually busy, and so the letter was handed out and he started for home. An hour after his doing so the widow herself appeared at the office and asked for mail and was told that a letter had been handed out. The postmistress couldn't remember to whom, and a row was on. It so happened that the widow was expecting an important letter, and the inspector for that district was notified and came on to solve the mystery. There was no clew to start on. The letter had been handed out to some one, but whether to man, woman or child could not be recalled. In detective work clews turn up like soft corns between the toes. A man who knew Deacon Green remembered of seeing him in Saundersville on a certain day with a letter in his hand.

Meanwhile the deacon had heard of the row being raised and had become both conscience stricken and frightened. He had done a thing to land him in prison, and he must undo it. He had the letter, and he put it in his pocket and started for Saundersville for the third time. On the way over he and the inspector passed each other, but neither suspected the other's identity. Straight to the widow's house the deacon drove and handed her the letter.

"What is it?" she naturally asked.

"Read it," he replied.

"This is from you, I take it?"

"Yes."

"And you—you"—

"I didn't want cider barrels that day, but I wanted you. I want you yet. I deceived you about the number of my children and that's why I stole the letter back. There are seven of 'em."

The widow looked him over and then looked up at the ceiling and around the room. Then she cast her eyes on the floor and said:

"Well, I believe I could manage fourteen of 'em if I tried my best!"

DOCTOR URGED AN OPERATION

Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Was Cured.

Baltimore, Md.—"Nearly four years I suffered from organic troubles, nervousness and headaches and every month would have to stay in bed most of the time. Treatments would relieve me for a time but my doctor was always urging me to have an operation. My sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before consenting to an operation. I took five bottles of it and it has completely cured me and my work is a pleasure. I tell all my friends who have any trouble of this kind what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—NELLIE B. BRITTINGHAM, 609 Calverton Rd., Baltimore, Md.

It is only natural for any woman to dread the thought of an operation. So many women have been restored to health by this famous remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after an operation has been advised that it will pay any woman who suffers from such ailments to consider trying it before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

PASSING OF ST. HELENA.

Made Famous by Napoleon, the Island Appears to Be Doomed.

When the great French emperor died in exile in 1821 there was probably a wish buried deep in his Corsican heart that the island which had been the scene of his humiliation might be wiped from the face of the sea.

Whether or no such a curse was ever cast upon the island, it is certain that St. Helena is doomed if not to extinction at least to become an uninhabitable rock. With the advent of steam navigation the island ceased to be a regular port of call, so that its always scanty exports dwindled almost to the vanishing point; plagues of insects destroyed its vegetation; rats, brought thither by foreign vessels, multiplied and overran its soil until the government was compelled to offer a bounty of a penny for every rodent captured. Then the English garrison, which had been practically the sole source of income to the inhabitants, was withdrawn, and the needs of the natives became desperate.

Then, as if this series of misfortunes was not enough, the termite—that curse of tropical and semitropical countries—invaded the island and will unless controlled reduce the city of Jamestown to a pulp of sawdust.—New York Independent.

Possibilities Overlooked.

He was a suburban garden faddist, who innocently bored all his friends by asking them down for week ends and showing them around his 2 by 4 estate. Just now it was brown from the office. He showed him his three rose trees, his pocket shrubbery, his half inch fountain jet with its little basin and pair of goldfish. He showed him his summer house, which would accommodate two people at the same time.

"Never know what you can do with a bit of ground till you try!" said the host gleefully.

"Quite so—quite so!" returned the visitor. "But why don't you take a strip off the flower bed—say about six inches wide—turf it over and make it into a blooming golf links?" — New York Post.

IMAGINARY MILLIONS.

Money Myths That Hover About England's Chancery Court.

Most people seem to think that there are countless and vast fortunes in chancery waiting to be bestowed upon their proper owners. This, as a matter of fact, is purely a myth, and how it arose it is impossible to say.

"We are supposed," said an official of the pay office recently, "to have the estate of a man named Hoffman valued at £18,000,000, and we are repeatedly receiving inquiries—almost always from Poland—but we know nothing of the estate." Another estate with which the pay office has nothing to do—that of the great Sir Francis Drake—is also the subject of many questions.

In all there are 3,838 estates in chancery, but the value of the largest is not more than £7,000. And, so far from many millions, the paymaster of the supreme court of judicature has only £1,250,000 in his hands awaiting claimants. A large proportion of this money, moreover, has been lying unclaimed since the early part of the eighteenth century.

If you think you are entitled to any of this money you should first study the official list at the law courts and then make a formal claim. But, it may be said, it very rarely happens that such applications prove successful.—London Answers.

WHEN JENNY LIND SANG.

Only an Old Ballad, but It Touched the Hearers' Hearts.

Whenever Jenny Lind came to dinner my father was careful neither to ask her to sing nor to allow any one else to suggest it in her hearing if he could help it. He did not think it proper to ask any one to confer that kind of favor upon him merely because he or she was his guest.

Jenny Lind, however, fully appreciating my father's taste in the matter, used to go up to him and say quite simply, "Shall I sing?" And, of course, she was at once led to the piano, and an instant silence fell on the whole company. Her husband, Otto Goldschmidt, accompanied her.

I shall never forget one great occasion when, after singing one or two of her songs, she asked my father if there was any particular song he would like to hear. Some inspiration came to him to ask her if she ever sang "Auld Robin Gray."

She began it at once, and something must have moved her to throw all her marvelous power of emotion into the singing of this old world story. Never in my life have I ever heard anything so transporting and overwhelming. Tears were in her eyes and sobs of anguish seemed to swell up out of her heart. Every one in the great drawing room rose and stood around in a wide, spellbound circle, and when at last she had finished and stood with one hand on the piano, looking at the floor in silence, all were too overcome to speak. My father went to her, took her hand and led her away to a sofa, saying some words of gratitude to her, and the wonderful scene was over.—Hon. Stephen Coleridge's Memoirs.

Albania's Blood Feuds.

The great problem in Albania is the blood feud. Every one has killed, and all have enemies who seek their blood. The houses are fortresses, the only windows of which are loopholes for Martinis. Many men have not left their houses for years, and food has to be brought to them by their friends. A man who is under the obligation of custom to take vengeance on another cannot marry if he is a bachelor and if he is already married cannot give either his sons or his daughters in marriage until his enemy is killed.—Youth's Companion.

FEET AND FLOORS.

How the Body May Be Robbed of Its Heat and Vitality.

A cold floor is one that conducts heat away from the body, not necessarily one that is cold in itself. A wooden floor and a stone floor exposed to the cold will in themselves have no great difference in temperature. But one may walk barefooted over a wooden floor with comparative comfort, no matter how cold the weather, while a stone floor will seem to freeze the feet.

On the other hand, in a warm room the stone floor will be warmer than the wooden floor, for it will take up the heat. Thus the heat from a radiator standing on a stone or tile floor will make it warm for several feet in every direction, but it will affect the wooden floor only very slightly. A cold floor, therefore, is not a floor which sends cold into the body through the feet, but one which takes away the body heat, leaving it cold.

Life consists in keeping up the body heat. It is in order to get sufficient body heat that we eat and to retain it that we wear clothes. Were there no wind and if we moved hardly at all clothes would not be necessary, because the heat of the body would keep a layer of heated air about us all the time. But the wind and our natural movements constantly disperse this layer of heated air, and in consequence we wear clothes to keep this layer in.

In summer coolness is secured by loose clothing, which lets the wind blow away the heated air; in spring and fall more closely woven garments keep the heated air near. In very cold weather furs are used, because the skin and the fur afford a powerful resistance to the escape of body heated air. As long as the body heat is kept up illness is likely to be a long time away.

Cold floors rob us of body heat—they steal away our vitality. The slow sapping of vitality that comes from standing on cold floors is fearfully weakening to the system. No matter how old or ragged a rug or carpet, no matter how thin a cork or fiber mat, it will lengthen your life and save you from numberless discomforts which cold floors cause.—New York Journal.

Comparative Values.

A German peasant had just lost his faithful cow. His wife became so grieved over the loss that her heart was broken and she, too, died. Scarcely was she buried when one of the neighbors came and offered his daughter, another his sister, and a third his niece, for a wife, whereupon the farmer remarked:

"Well, I can easily see that it is better to lose a wife than a cow in this town. As soon as my wife is dead a choice of half a dozen wives is offered me, but when my cow died they didn't offer me a single one."—Youth's Companion.

Clearing Out Forests.

Because of the war, Scotland has been cutting down a great many trees to supply its own needs. Much of the land thus cleared will eventually be used for agriculture.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

An Indulgent Father.

The Duke de Richelieu one day visited his son, who was a student in the University of Paris. "Do you need any money?" he asked in the course of the conversation.

"No," said his son. "I still have 20 louis from last month's allowance."

On hearing this the duke took the boy's purse and, handing it to his servant, said: "There, John, are 20 louis. My son, the Count de Fronsac, presents them to you. Go and drink his health."

But to his son he said: "Young man, remember that you are the son of the Duke de Richelieu. Be more generous with your money."

How many youths in college today would like to have so thoughtful a father!

Thought He Was Neglected.

Billy Boy was the only child at the table, consequently the only one with a bib. As he looked and saw all the others with napkins in their laps he asked "Why can't I have one of those big bibs to keep my knees warm, too?"

Incapacitated.

"That returned soldier certainly can't go back to his trade as bookkeeper."

"Why? His writing-hand gone?"

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Pasnebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

BILLY RIGGS' CASE.

By BRUCE PARKER.
[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

During the civil war one of the many things that interested me was the fact that after a hard day's march, when we men were lying about on the ground resting, the drummer boys would choose a convenient place and play ball. One of these boys of our regiment turned out to be a young hero. He was known as Billy, and his other name was Riggs. He was fourteen years old and small for his age.

No one has ever been able to account for the "blunder" that won the battle of Missionary Ridge. I happened to see that blunder at the time it was made. Billy Riggs was the blunderer. Our regiment was one of the line at the base of the ridge and in one of the most exposed positions. We were suffering under a fire that we could not return with any hope of hurting any one, for we were obliged to shoot up the side of a mountain at an enemy we couldn't see.

Billy Riggs was standing with the drum corps looking up the side of the mountain. Suddenly he made a jump and, landing on a rock in front of him, began to climb. In a few moments he was sheltered behind a precipitous bank. There he began to drum like mad. What he did it for I didn't know, but I supposed it was to let the men know that if they would come up there they would be under cover. At any rate, several men followed Billy, and a number followed the several, and it wasn't two minutes before the regiment, or the bulk of it, was climbing to Billy's position.

But Billy wasn't there. Realizing that there wasn't room for 600 men where he stood and seeing a similar position higher up, he went there and stood rattling his sheepskin to let his comrades know that there was plenty of room beside him. The most daring as well as the most chivalrous left their cover to make room for others and followed Billy.

By this time the regiments on our right and left, seeing our game, concluded to practice it in their own behalf. In other words, three-quarters of a brigade were climbing the steep. Other regiments followed, and regimental commanders, thinking that an advance had been ordered, took their commands where they saw others going. Before the general in chief could send orders to stop the advance most of the army was halfway up the hill, and soon after gaining the top the ridge was won.

So it was that what appeared to be a foolhardy movement led to victory and is recorded in history as "the soldiers' battle." The soldier that led that army was a drummer boy, and his name was Billy Riggs.

After the fight we men talked the matter over and agreed that it was a sort of genius in Billy, of which he was entirely unconscious, that had gained an important victory. In other words, he saw that safety was in an advance. But the officers either didn't see his act or declined to attach much importance to it.

In time I was given a commission in the regular army and ten years later as a major of infantry was assigned to command of a three company post west of the Missouri river. The day I arrived at my post as I approached riding across a plain I heard a sound of drums and fifes playing the "Rogues' March." I knew that some culprit was being drummed out of camp and put spurs to my horse to see the ceremony. Entering the gate, I saw the garrison drawn up in line before which a drum corps was leading a man with a feather behind each ear. There was something in his walk that was familiar to me. I rode to a position where he would pass close to me, and when he went by I was sure I had known him. Halting the squad I asked his name:

"Private William Riggs."

Billy looked up at me and recognized me. There was a curious expression on his face, of injured innocence, mortification and pleasure at seeing one of his old comrades under such distressing circumstances.

"Stop this!" I cried angrily.

"Our commander"— began the sergeant in command, but I cut him short.

"I am commander here," I said sharply. And, dismounting, I took Billy in my arms, pulling the feathers from behind his ears at the same time.

By this time the officer temporarily in command of the post, a lieutenant out of West Point several years after the war had ceased, came prancing across the parade to discover who was interfering with the execution of his orders. Seeing a gold leaf on my shoulder, he came on hesitatingly, looking up at me as much as to say, "Who are you anyway?" and "What do you mean by embracing a man under punishment?" I explained to him that I was the new commandant, that I had known Private Riggs in the civil war as a brave boy and that I preferred to investigate the case before it went any further.

The investigation proved that Billy had been restive under the command of a man who was his inferior in all except theoretic military subjects, an antagonism had sprung up between them and Billy had got the worst of it, as all rebellious soldiers are bound to do in the end. Under my command Private Riggs became the best soldier at the post, rose to be first sergeant of his company, and I eventually succeeded in getting him a commission. He fought Indians under me, and, though he was brave and cool, he admitted that he missed the inspiration of the drum, which cannot be used in savage warfare.

Varieties of Bridges.

Bridges are seen hanging over rivers and upon noses. They also span some streets. They should not be confused with the game called bridge, which spans only time and money. Some bridges, like poker, depend entirely upon the draw. Bridges spend their time in heaving up and down and leaning against their towers. The object of bridges is to give very one a chance to get back from where he has been, or to go whence he can get back. Some times bridges are built over railroad tracks and spend all their time in saving people from being run over. A bridge which is thus employed is very happy, because it leads an upright life also because the railroad company was sad when obliged to put it there.

Bridges are also used over chasms. Every chasm ought to have one. It provides a place for children to fall from; also it gives the chasm something to look up to.

Friendliness of London.

There is no friendliness like the friendliness of London. Six or seven years ago I went rather frequently to a certain tea shop, which has every afternoon a crowd of men taking their tea and playing dominoes and chess. We used to talk occasionally, but none of us ever knew the name of any of the others. Then for five years I did not go near the place until one day when I dropped in almost by accident. At once there was a greeting and a welcome from at least half a dozen. The other day I went in again after another absence of six months, and the greeting was the same. This will do to tell those people who insist that London is an unfriendly place.—London Citizen.

COFFEE AT SANTOS

Brazil's National Beverage and the Way It Is Brewed.

A DRAFT OF LIQUID LIFE.

Thick as Thin Maple Sirup, Amber Bright and Crystal Clear, the Seductive Drink Stimulates the Brain, While It Sets the Nerves on Edge.

The coffee of Brazil is the lowest priced in the world's market. Knowing this fact, I was the more surprised at the exquisite flavor of the coffee served in the public cafes of Brazil. I called this apparent anomaly to the attention of an old Anglo-Brazilian with whom I dined in Santos one evening, and he advanced the opinion that the Americans, Germans and French, the principal coffee drinkers, did not know how to make the beverage.

"You are all too free with water and too sparing with coffee," he said. "You spare your coffee and, I suppose—um—well, yes, possibly your nerves." Then he summoned the head waiter, held a short conversation with him in Portuguese and finally induced him to escort us to the kitchen in the rear and inaugurate for my benefit the ceremony of preparing a fresh tank of coffee.

The chef desired it particularly explained that coffee as generally used in Brazil was not roasted to the crispness of that treated in the United States. This insures against any but the most delicate of the flavoring essence being extracted in the boiling and thus imparts smoothness to the beverage. He also called attention to the fact that the bean is not ground fine. Each grain is cracked into not more than six or eight pieces by being run through a wide set mill and then carefully blown and sifted to get rid of the dust and smaller fragments.

But the main divergence from our procedure lies in the quantity of coffee used. An extract of meat advertisement defines its product as "a bull in a teacup." With no more exaggeration might the modern Brazilian nectar be styled "a plantation in a coffee cup."

The chef took four liter measures of the cracked coffee and added it to just twice that quantity of warm but not boiling water in a shallow copper pan. Here he allowed it to soak for five minutes before turning on the burners, quickly bringing the water to a boil so violent that pieces of the coffee were thrown out on the stove.

This agitation was followed by ten minutes' cooling on a side table, at the end of which time the chef added a half dozen drops of a pungent liquid from a slender green vial, the nature of which he refused to divulge, but which my friend told me was some kind of a neutralizing agent to eliminate a certain rawness, impalpable to other than trained palates. Almost immediately a nickel siphon was introduced just under the surface of the liquid, and about six liters of it was drawn off from the pan into a boiler.

Nothing now remained but the boiling down, which took half an hour and reduced the liquid to a volume of three liters and the consistency of thin maple sirup. In the boiler it was inky black, but when poured showed a stream which was amber bright and crystal clear. Thus the four liters of coffee beans made only three-quarters of that quantity of liquid coffee.

If you are not of a nature impervious to the appeals of the appetite your first cup of coffee in a Santos cafe will be an experience. You enter and seat yourself at one of the tables scattered in refreshing aimlessness over the cool marble pavement. Hidden in a tangle of shrubbery an orchestra is playing something with a catch and a sob in it that you are sure you have heard in another incarnation, while an electric fan placed in a palm tree sets a frond aquiver just above your head.

Even the rattle of the street sinks to a heavy hum and comes to your ear all peacefulness. Lulled by a veritable lotus eater's spell of content, you are about to drowse away and loose your fancy on a search for the original source of the familiar but elusive melody that is still pulsing in the jungle in the patio when somehow you become aware that the mozo has set a little cup before you, which, from the pleasant odor and the thin curl of smoke above it, might be full of a fragrant incense.

You lift it to your lips and feel that strange stir of anticipation, that mysterious foretaste, called by sentimentalists "the soul of the drink," which steals over you preliminary to sipping a rare and pungent liquor. Now it touches your tongue, and you are willing to swear that the capsule of liquid life is dissolving in your mouth. In a moment more the fumes have risen to your brain, a thrill of energy goes tingling through your nerves, and you straighten up with the feeling that you are able to go out and build a railroad single handed. If you can go to sleep in the next twenty-four hours you deserve a gold medal.—New York Sun.

LIFE OF A SIBERIAN EXILE.

One Political Offender Who Lives in Comparative Luxury.

How a political exile lives in Siberia is shown in M. S. Price's book "Siberia." Mr. Price encountered this exile at Minusinsk. He and his family lived in a large house, and his actual punishment seems to consist of a certain social ostracism consequent upon banishment from the great centers of Russian life.

"When I went to call upon him he came to the door himself and, showing me in through a room where he and his wife had been having their evening meal, ushered me into a room beyond. I noticed his calm, philosophical face was that of a man who had evidently endured mental strain with stoical fortitude, but his wife, more nervous than he, showed signs of former anxiety. It seemed strange indeed that I should be sitting in company with two members of high Russian society, now ostracized by exile to Siberia, and stranger still to partake of their intelligent conversation on topics of human interest.

"First of all I was interested to know what sort of restrictions were placed upon the exile's liberty. I found that he was not allowed to leave the district in which he resided and that every week he had to sign his name in a book kept at the house of the chief 'nachalnik.' With that exception his life was free. He had money, and he could live as he liked and go where he wished within that district, but he was continually watched by spies, who dogged his footsteps wherever he went.

"He related to me how he had acquired gold concessions on the Mongolian frontier and was hoping to find capital to float a syndicate for working them next year. This was not at all my idea of the life of a Siberian exile. Instead of being made to work himself in the galleries of the gold mines till death released him from his chains, the exile now floats mining syndicates."

INFINITUDE OF SUNS.

Those We Know Are as Nothing to Those Beyond Our Ken.

The photographs of 25,876 standard plates show the points, or images, of 100,000,000 suns. These have not been actually counted, but plates secured by exposure in telecameras to typical regions of the sky have, and the entire number has been subjected to the calculus of probabilities, resulting in the general number of 100,000,000 colossal suns.

These have been weighed—that is, their combined force of gravitational attraction has been computed. This led to one of the most overwhelming discoveries—namely, this entire pull of attractions of the quantity of matter in 100,000,000 suns as massive as our own sun could not even begin to impart the high specific speeds of several well known "runaway" suns. These are dashing through what has been named space with velocities so much greater than all other suns that they are a class by themselves.

Our sun contains 333,426 times more matter than is in the earth, and this multiplied by 100,000,000 reveals the quantity of matter known to exist, beyond all human imagination. But this immense mass may almost be ignored as a mere fraction in comparison with the gigantic quantity necessary to impart a velocity of from 150 to 200 miles per second to these suns flying athwart the sidereal universe.

Let the number of these suns or dark bodies run up to trillions or octillions, then the entire quantity of matter in all of them would be less than the weight of one grain of sand if compared to an infinite quantity of matter.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

How Not to Drown.

A person who has not learned to swim, who falls into water, really drowns himself because he struggles to climb out. Should he keep cool and immerse his body, excepting his nostrils, he could float until help reached him. No one drowns with his nostrils above the surface and his mouth closed. By many experiments it was ascertained years ago that a fish—not a mammal—will live ten or twelve days out of the water if its gills are kept thoroughly wetted, and a man or woman with nostrils above the surface will not drown.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Postage Stamps.

There was stamped postal letter paper as early as 1818, but postage stamps proper begin with those used in Great Britain between 1833-1840. It was not until 1839 or 1840 that the adhesive stamp was used on letters and other mail matter.—New York American.

Nicely Explained.

"Ah," said the dealer, "I will tell you the history of that. When Raphael painted that picture he was heavily in debt, so he put it in the wife's name for safety."—Argonaut.

LANDLORD PLEADS FOR PROTECTION.

Londoner Holds Bad Tenant Laws Responsible for House Famine.

A recent London, Ont., despatch reads:

Mr. John M. Parsons, secretary of the Real Estate Owners' Association, of London, on behalf of that body, has prepared a report on the housing situation for presentation to Premier Hearst. The report condemns any scheme under which the government would tax landlords to erect competitive dwellings, and hails as applicable the aphorism that "fools build houses for wise men." The report, continuing, blames any possible house famine in Ontario as due to bad landlord and tenant laws. Under these Mr. Parsons claims the tenant, "who is probably worth nothing," is able to treat his landlord as a scrap of paper, fill a house with vermin, damage the property, tender bad cheques, and get away with it. The banks of the Dominion are filled with money earning but three per cent., the report concludes, but until such times as the landlord is given protection there will be no stimulus to build houses.

Peterboro Boys Were Stranded

Walked In From Rice Lake After Futile Attempt to Start Launch

America's champion walker will have to yield the laurel wreath to three Peterborough boys who by force of circumstances had a nice jaunt of sixteen miles Wednesday evening, or rather night, which did not at all conform to their idea of comfort.

Fremont Doan, Herman Hunter and "Doc" Meredith, sailed down to Bewdley in Mr. Doan's launch on Wednesday morning. Nine o'clock that evening they started for home, or at least tried to start for home, because their engine would not start. After many useless efforts to start the engine, they started down the road towards Peterborough and entered the farm yard of a farmer. Miraculously escaping the teeth of the watchful canine they knocked at the farmer's door and asked for lodging for the night.

"Nothing doing," was his answer.

"Nine miles to Peterborough and good luck to you."

So Peterborough's Three Musketeers started on the long trail for Peterborough, but got on the wrong road when they were misdirected by another wayfarer.

At last, after wandering about seven miles out of their way they found the right road, and alal would have been clear sailing if it wer not for the darkness and the stones which seemed to litter the road. At last they entered the city six o'clock in the morning just after day-break, when the milkmen are abroad.

The Situation is Described as the Turning Point of the Summer Campaign—Positions Captured.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, August 2.—The Allies, advancing three miles on a five mile front today captured all of the watershed, connecting the territory north of the Crise River, it was learned this afternoon. (The Crise flows from the vicinity of Launcy northwestward into the Aisne at Soissons).

The capture of this ridge between the Ourcq and the Aisne endangers the German retirement in the center as well as on the entire west flank.

FRENCH OFFICIAL

PARIS, August 2—On the battle front north of the Marne, French troops continue to press back the Germans farther toward Vesle, says today's war office statement.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

LONDON, August 2.—(Official)—A few prisoners were captured by our troops yesterday in the neighborhood of Festubert. During the night, English troops carried out a successful raid north of Albert, capturing 18 prisoners and a machine gun. Hostile artillery has shown somewhat increased activity south of the Somme and south of Ypres and has been active also north of Bethune and on our front east of Hazebrouck.

RIDGE CAPTURED

Canadian Press.

LONDON, August 2.—Yesterday's Franco-British attack on the Westerly side of the Marne salient was one a front of five miles and Penetrated to a maximum depth of three miles, according to news received today. It resulted in the capture of the entire ridge which forms a watershed between the Ourcq and the Aisne. Advices indicate the French also captured the entire Neijmiere Wood on a line to the north of Goussancourt at about the center of the salient.

The advance by the Allies along the western side of the centre of the salient is described as extremely important and possibly the most important thing the Allies have accomplished since the Germans retreated from the Marne. The importance of victory, it is explained lies in the fact that the Allied positions command the whole area to the north ward and takes in the flank and rear of the entire western gate through which the Germans have been retreating.

WILL HINDER RETREAT

In this area is most of the German reserves and field artillery. Goussancourt itself has been taken by the French, advices add. The capture of important ground on the height to the west of side of Line also means that the Germans will not be able to retreat in the ordinary leisurely way and that they probably will have to go beyond river Vesle in their course.

SITUATION IS GOOD.

The situation is considered extraordinarily good, being described in advances as the turning point of the Summer campaign and possibly of also the war.

The important town of Ville En Tardenois on easterly side of the Marne salient has been encircled by Allied forces.

Italians Will Be Executed

Were Convicted of Blowing Up An Italian Battleship.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Aug. 2.— Dramatic scenes were enacted here on Thursday as a military tribunal passed sentence on the sailors, Cavapriman, Carpi and Moschini, convicted of espionage in the sinking of the Italian battleship, Benedetto Brin, which resulted in the loss of 500 lives. These traitors were sentenced to be shot in the back. One was condemned to life imprisonment at hard labour. Another one was acquitted for lack of sufficient evidence.

The court remained in the Council Chamber during the deliberations, while the most intense agitation was in progress in the crowded court room, largely among women, relatives of the victims of the tragedy. Often demands for lynching the prisoners were heard.

When the verdict was announced the public applauded, cursing the traitors and spitting at them. The police backed the prisoners toward their cells. They were given twenty-four hours in which to appeal.

The Giornal D'Italia said: "The verdict is universally recognized as just. The court inflicted the highest penalty of the law on the men bereft of all morality. For a few trances they committed the greatest crime of which a citizen is capable."

INTENSE FIGHTING

Americans Gained Dominating Heights From the Germans By a Sudden Heavy Attack.

CHARGED STEEP HILL

(Frank T. Taylor—United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 2. — American troops advanced their entire right wing during the night as far as Bomplery. They hold Cierges and all the Meunieres Wood. Intense fighting is proceeding beyond Cierges, where the Americans gained dominating heights from the Germans by a sudden, heavy attack.

The Americans' gains were made in the face of stiffening opposition. Yesterday morning our left wing attacked north-east of Seringes (a mile and a half east and north of Fere En Tardenois) and Sergy (three miles south-east of Fere En Tardenois), following a smoke cloud which partially concealed their advance from enemy machine gunners, which were planted thickly in the fields.

Quickly Dispersed.

The Doughboys went forward in groups, filtering through the German positions and gaining all their first objectives without a pause. The fighting centred in Nesles Forest (north-east of Seringes and north of Sergy). Our infantry quickly dispersed the outer line of German machine guns in hand to hand combat. The advance was discontinued here during the afternoon owing to the sharp salient created.

The American right wing, advancing simultaneously, moved eastward in a flanking movement around Meuniere Wood (south-east of Cierges.) French troops co-operated in this assault. By evening the German resistance had been wiped out and the Wood was cleared, the Allied troops progressing almost to Gousaancourt (three miles east of Cierges.)

Barbed Wire.

Fighting in Mouniere Wood was intense, artillery raking the Boches, while the infantry charged up a steep hill into a row of machine guns, driving out the defenders with the bayonet.

American artillery continues to pound German strongholds along the roads leading northward, exacting heavy casualties. Latest indications are that the Boches are massing in increasing numbers to oppose further advances, although no additional defences have been encountered, other than widely scattered sections of half-dug trenches and increased barbed wire entanglements. The wire is not continuous, but is used as carriers for machine gun posts.

French Army Was Still Advancing Early To-day

Completeness of Allied Success Is Evidenced by the Speed With Which the Artillery Was Hurried Up.

POSITIONS CAPTURED

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 2.—General Mangin's army was still advancing early to-day, utilizing every advantage gained in yesterday's impetuous assault along a ten mile front.

Beating down stubborn resistance, the Allied troops had the satisfaction of seeing the enemy wildly fleeing at some points.

The completeness of the Allied success is evidenced by the fact that Franco-British batteries were installed shortly before 8 a.m. on ground which we had only begun to drive the Germans at 4 a.m.

The Germans were able to use their own artillery only on the smallest scale, being compelled to reply upon machine guns. These were taken one by one, notwithstanding the Boches' dogged resistance.

Casualties High.

The enemy's casualties during the day were extremely high. The bravery of their defences could not be questioned, up to the point where it seemed hopeless. If they disobeyed their orders to resist to the death, their commanders knew why.

Hill 205 (four miles north-east of Oulchy Le Chateau) was conquered by six o'clock, Courdoux (a mile west of Hill 205), Servenay (two miles east of Courdoux) and Cramoiselle (a mile south of Servenay) fell soon after, giving up many prisoners.

The Germans violently counter-attacked from Buzancy (eight miles north of Oulchy Le Chateau) and L'Eveque Wood (just south of Buzancy) but the French infantry broke up their efforts.

By evening Cramaille (a mile and a half south-east of Cramoiselle) and the hills to the northward had been captured.

Positions Menaced.

As the result of the Allied successes, German positions up to and including Fismes (twelve miles north-east of Cramaille) are menaced. Railroad lines and other communications radiating from that city are subject to direct fire from our artillery. Fismes has been a great storehouse for German supplies. The extent to which the enemy has been able to evacuate this, if at all, is not known.

The Germans yesterday began a heavy boinbardment of Rheims, which still constitutes a thorn in the enemy's side.

I stood on a spur on the Montague De Rheims and watched hundreds of shells explode in the ruined towns between the mountain and the city. Every now and then one would drop in Rheims. Twice great clouds of dust rose up in front of the cathedral, obscuring the structure for several minutes. When the clouds cleared away the building was apparently unscathed.

The cathedral, as a whole, appears intact, but those who have visited it recently say it is only a hollow shell, which rises in ghostly magnificence, mocking the Huns' efforts.

To the right of the city, shells fell regularly on Fort De La Pompelle, from which the Germans have sought since 1914 to oust the French. To the left the village of Coulommes was being shattered while the forest of Vrigny on a log hogback hill, seemed fairly heaving and rocking under the bombardment.

"Enemy Hate."

Further to the left, Bligny, three kilometers distant, was crumbling into ruins, as follows:

Persistence of the bombardment eliminated the theory that this might be only the usual "evening hate," suggesting instead a coming attack. This idea was supported by several hundred shells falling from the town almost to our feet.

The amount of metal the Boches are expending hereabouts proved the restlessness with which they view the Allies' possession of strong positions encroaching upon their lines, which the enemy must hold to avoid complete evacuation of the pocket.

PTE. WOOD IS WOUNDED

Mr. Robert Wood of Westwood received word from Ottawa yesterday that his son, Pte. Samuel Wood, who is with the C.E.F., has been wounded. Pte. Wood enlisted in Toronto.

AIRPLANES ACCOUNTED FOR MONTH OF JULY.

(Special to Examiner.)

London, Aug. 2. — Eight hundred and forty-four enemy airplanes were brought down by the Allies during the month of July. Three hundred and twenty-five allied machines were lost during the same period.

British aviators accounted for 410 planes; French 290; Italians, 106; Belgians, 4; Americans 4.

In addition 26 planes were brought down in the Balkans, and 5 in Palestine.

Fighting Has Been Bitter

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Reuter's correspondent on the American front, telegraphing Thursday night says: "There may be some danger of misconception or disapointment from certain rather flamboyant accounts of the fighting on the American front since these give the impression of a tremendous effort with little headway, and the conclusion may be drawn that the director of the allied advance is finding a successful accomplishment beyond his means. Although no praise is too high for the way Americans are fighting, that fighting is on a comparatively small scale, as things are measured on this front and does not suggest a hurry on the part of the allied command, to reach any particular destination.

More Guns.

If the commander's purpose required speed more guns would be needed for, by comparison with past fighting, present operations might be almost called gunless, so large has the role of infantry been. It has been bitter as possible, and the Americans have won imperishable laurels in it, but the scale of fighting would not entitle one to expect greater progress from it, or indeed, more than the mere folding up of ground. It would be a mistake to suppose that the tremendous struggle is producing inadequate results.

A FURTHER RETIREMENT

This is What Hindenburg is Planning—A Slow Retreat Towards the West.

NEW CONDITIONS

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Von Hindenburg is now conducting his slow retreat toward the west, in such a manner as to avoid the dangerous pocket which the Americans are creating by their advance along the main railway to Fismes. The German west flank, south of Soissons, is at the same time slowly bending before the Allies' blows, and is tending to form a diagonally straight line with the southern front. By rectifying his defensive positions in this manner, Von Hindenburg is trying to eliminate all salients, and to compel the Allies to continue their pressure by means of frontal attacks. These attacks are only temporarily of advantage to the Germans, and are in the nature of an expedient to gain time for the further retirement of German heavy artillery and munitions.

Lines Threatened.

The present position of the Allies west of the Fismes railway is seriously threatening the German communications along the Orise river and the important railway which runs along the bank of the stream. This is the only defensive position remaining in Von Hindenburg's possession south of the Vesle, and in the western area of the Soissons-Rheims salient. Today's fighting, however, is proceeding less heavily on the western flank and is tending to shift the central area, directly south of Fismes. General Foch's purpose in bringing renewed pressure to bear here is due to the horror Von Hindenburg is showing of salients. Every small advance by the Americans in the central sector tends to create a pocket and causes the Germans to retreat elsewhere so as to try to keep their entire line straight. Minimum losses are thus falling to the Allies for the gains they are making. Henceforth Gen. Foch may be expected to shift his assaults from one local area to another, as new conditions present themselves for creating pockets.

A Kansas Congressman Writes His Impressions of British Royalty

AFTER THE WAR

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 2.—King George acted like the Mayor of a small Kansas town, is the opinion of Representative John R. Connelly, of Colby, Kansas, Editor of the Colby Free Press, who to-day wrote his impressions of British Royalty on the occasion of the reception of a Congressional committee, as follows:

(By John R. Connelly, Kansas Congressman.)

"We Americans are not used to meeting Royalty and naturally had some feeling when we met the King and Queen of England and their daughter. The King, Queen and the Princess immediately removed this embarrassment. Their greeting was most cordial.

THE NAVY.

The King gave us a regular Kansas handshake and then we talked for half an hour. The fact that he spent four years in the Navy while a boy perhaps made him at once find the subject upon which we were both best informed. We discussed the subject with much interest and understanding. The committee came away with the impression that the King is a most human fellow. He knew how to make the committee as just ordinary Americans and make them feel easy. He treated us fine, just as if he were the Mayor of a small Kansas town.

LIKES A STORY.

The King is rather small of stature, not so tall as the Queen. He enjoys a good story. He expressed the hope to us that after the war the Americans will not think that the Briton is stuck up and that the Briton will be more tolerant toward the American disposition to boast. The Queen is fine appearing. She talked interestingly about the work to be done for wounded soldiers. She is more active in this work, going personally to various hospitals. She inquired about the interest of American women. She had read of their activities in the Red Cross and along other lines of relief. Princes Mary, the only daughter of the King and Queen, has four or five brothers in military service.

OWNERS LOSE HEADS IN BAKER DECISION

Magnates Panic-Stricken and Neglect Opportunity to Protect Themselves.

NEW YORK, August 1.—When Secretary Baker ruled that players in the deferred draft classes would have to seek essential employment after September 1, it seems that he was generally misunderstood. Mr. Baker did not order the major leagues to close their parks after that date. He did not throw an obstacle in the way of the engagement of other players under 21 and over 31 years of age. If the magnates had not lost their heads in the general excitement they would have readily seen that it was possible for them to rebuild their teams in September, thereby laying the foundations for a campaign on new lines in 1919.

The magnates' decision to wind up the pennant races on Labour Day, September 2, was the result of a panic and created the wrong impression that after the above date baseball would not be toferated by the Government. This unwarranted state of affairs further proves that baseball, during the recent controversy with the War Department, was poorly handled.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2ND, 1918.

SPEED UP, MUNITION WORKERS!

Any task persisted in becomes commonplace. That, perhaps, accounts for the fact that the munition worker may regard his or her job as a daily grind with nothing extraordinary pertaining to it. This is not so. Munitions production is no common, everyday task, and for the worker to assume that it is, is to develop a critical state of mind.

Think what would happen if the soldier became indifferent about his job. While one appreciates the fact that sustained effort produces physical and mental weariness, the knowledge that munitions workers are literally the soldiers' right arm, should nerve them to the greatest of efforts during these trying days.

Another point to be remembered by munitions workers is, that he and she are contributing in no small measure to our National well being. Canada's magnificent industrial record is, in no small measure, due to their loyalty, resolution and fortitude. All hail to them. Grant that they may keep up the good work.

THE WORM TURNS.

The peculiar working of the German mind is illustrated by the fact that there is widespread surprise and indignation in Germany over the assassination of Field Marshal Von Eichorn. Why ex-Field Marshal Von Eichorn. Why even the Germans should be surprised will be a mystery to the world generally, for the plundering and enslavement of Ukrania by the Prussians under the direction of Von Eichorn, as governor, have been as ruthless as the atrocities that have made the name of Germany infamous. The Field Marshal has treated the people of Ukrania from the first as slaves, and the whole end of his policy has been to see that the Huns obtained the utmost supply of food from the conquered country. The Ukrania farmers were first compelled to cultivate their land for German benefit and then accept a ruinously low price for their products. Members of the Ukranian Government have been imprisoned on trumped up charges and the indignation of the people has grown so great that German newspaper men have warned their Government that the Germans were more hated in Ukrania than in any other part of the world.

Under such conditions the assassination of the man whose policy was responsible for the suffering of the people is not be wondered at—the only thing to cause surprise is that the German people themselves should be surprised at the culmination of the Ukranian tragedy.

THE G. W. V. A. TROUBLE.

All friends of the returned soldiers will unite in the hope that the breach in the ranks og the Great War Veterans Association caused by the withdrawal of the Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates from the Dominion Convention will be speedily healed. The hope of the returned men of getting justice and his rights lies in a strong Dominion wide body adn anything that threaten to interfere with the existence of such an organizing is a serious matter to the cause of the veterans.

At the same time there will be an inclination of the part of the public to sympathize with the views of the western delegates. With the breezy independence of the Canadian west the, G. W. V. A. in the west have followed the principle of paying as they go and have dissociated themselves from the system of seeking provincial or municipal assistance. They have from the first stood on their own feet and have not asked for help from any body. What they have accomplished has been by their own efforts and they are therefore inclined to criticize the methods of the eastern veterans, especially those in Toronto who have been the recipient of many grants from the city and also assisted by a provincial grant.

The delegates from Winnipeg and their associates from Ottawa have also formed the impression, whether rightly or wrongly, that judging from the convention, an attempt is being made to formulate a political organization with the intention of running the country. With such a policy the westerners have no sympathy.

It is to be hoped that the differences will be settled. A split in the ranks of the G. W. V. A. at the present time would be a regretable matter.

THE UNITED STATES' PLAN.

When the United States' administration tackles a problem they do so with a whole-hearted zeal and aggresiveness that brings results. The decision of the government to take over and control the recruiting of common labour throughout the country for war purposes is a striking demonstration of the fact that President Wilson and his associates do not believe in half-way measures. The new system, which becomes effective to-day, means that the United States' government has taken hold of the labour situation in all parts of the country. The United States will be divided into thirteen districts, each in charge of a superintendent of the Federal Employment Service, while each state is in charge of a State Director who is given full control of the service within his State. Labour requirements for war industries have been apportioned to the various States on a basis of population and with the Government in charge of the labour, men will be moved as they are needed to meet the demand. The benefits to be gained by such a scheme are obvious. The production of essentials will be increased, war work will be speeded up, the labour supply will be utilized to the best advantage, wages will be stabilized and the wasteful turn-over of labour will be done away with. The plans of the United States' government are drastic, but if they result in the transfer of workers to the points where they are most needed and from non-essential to essential occupations, they will no doubt be strongly supported as a war measure. Independent concerns employing over one hundred men will be restricted by the government.

The feeling of organized labour in connection with the new plan will be awaited with interest.

LAND SETTLEMENT.

The resolution of the Great War Veterans in regard to placing returned men on the land will be endorsed by the public generally. In the words of Col. Mackenzie Forbes, one of the delegates to the convention, little or nothing has been done by the Government towards a progressive land settlement scheme. The chairman of the Land Settlement Board is responsible for the statement that only four to five thousand quarter sections in Northern Alberta are available, whereas the Department of the Interior had stated that there would be twelve thousand quarter sections. There are no crown lands in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and in British Columbia the land is in the possession of the Province. As the situation now stands there is no chance for eastern veterans to take up land in the west, because there is not sufficient crown land there to take care of the western returned men.

Not only must more land be found, but there must be schools of instruction for the purpose of training returned men who desire to become farmers. At present the Dominion government is doing nothing along this line.

Col. Forbes' address on the subject was thoughtful and illuminative. There can be no fault found with his opinion that Canada's opportunity lies in the development of its agricultural resources and that the greatest possible thing for Canada would be the placing of returned men on the land. It was useless, however, to do this unless the men were trained.

"When we should be preparing nothing is done," said Col. Forbes. "All has been forgotten. It means that the most important national work is being neglected. Canada will be doing the biggest piece of work of a decade if she appoints the biggest men in the country for this task."

The resolution passed by the convention read as follows:

"That a Cabinet Minister be appointed whose sole duty shall be to evolve a scheme for the rehabilitation of the returned and returning soldier on the agricultural lands of the Provinces in which prospective settlers are domiciled.

"That a reasonable amount of land be secured or acquired by the Dominion Government to meet the estimated requirements of soldier settlers, of a quality suitable for succesful farming within easy access of the railway facilities, and that provision be made for the equitable settlement of land by those who may return at a later date."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Marquis of Lansdowne has written another letter advocating the discussion of peace. The communication is not likely to produce any more results than his previous letter.

Restrictions on the consumption of pork in Canada have been removed. As the prices have not been altered, however, the average man is not likely to eat any more than usual.

However, the citizen who has to eat at a public eating place will be glad to learn that pork has been restored to the menu.

"Away with the Germans" is said to be the slogan in Ukrania. It has a much better sound than "Peace at any price."

The Canadians are back in the front line, and it is a safe bet that the enemy holding the trenches opposite General Currie's army have already discovered that the Canucks are there.

"Russia is tired of Bolshevism," says a newspaper heading. In that weariness Russia has nothing on the rest of the world.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A BRIEF RESPITE

(Kingston Whig.)

The postmen's strike in Toronto and Montreal had its compensating advantages: the people there enjoyed the non-arrival of the usual butchers' and other tradesman's bills.

SHOULD STAY ON THEIR JOBS

(Winnipeg Tribune.)

In these war times, and even in peace times, the Cabinet should be on the job every month in the year and at least six days a week. Our Cabinet is big enough to have shifts.

HIS EASY TASK.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

With Armand Lavergne trying out the Habeas Corpus in behalf of enlisted men the hope may be expressed that Armand get as many men out of khaki as he got into it. Then the army won't suffer.

TOO GENEROUS TO ALIENS.

(Kingston Standard.)

The suggestion has been made that aliens should be paid 'military pay." That is all right as long as it is not confined to the money only of $1.10 a day. A soldier really receives a great deal more than that.

WOULD KICK LIKE STEERS.

(Windsor Record.)

Let the Postmaster-General or any any other member of the Government walk miles in the present weather and in the depth of winter with a heavy burden of mail and they would kick like steers at the magnificent wage of two and a half dollars a day.

IF WE CAN GET IT.

(Brantford Courier.)

And to think that in a few weeks all of us will be paying so much per ton for heat.

USELESS NOW.

(Kansas City Times.)

Why does the Government keep on coining nickels? They won't buy anything any more.

NEXT!

(Montreal Herald-Telegraph.)

The poor little American army" is following closely in the footsteps of the contemptible little British army.

DID IT EVER STRIKE YOU.

(Guelph Herald.)

That yesterday was a hot day—one of those we have been waiting for. It proved too hot for many to go to church, yet not too hot to go motoring and canoeing, though the churches were really less trying than the blazing roads and river. Strange isn't it, that such things should be, this is war time. Do such incidents prove that the nation is nearer to God, or getting further away all the time!

WAS TRANSFERRED TO PETERBOROUGH

KINGSTON, Aug. 2.—Bruce Culcheth, a well-known Kingstonian, who has for some time served as city traveller here for the Imperial Tobacco Company, has been transferred to Peterborough. Prior to his leaving, he was waited on by members of the local Travellers' Association, and presented with a club bag, and at the same time with the best wishes of every member of the association.

Early Italian Surgery.

Benvenuto Cellini (1500-1571) tells of early Italian surgery. He had got a bit of chipped steel in his eye, "so far into the pupil that it was impossible to get it out, so that I was in very great danger of losing that eye. But the surgeon came to the rescue with the pigeons. The surgeon, making me lie upon my back, with a little knife opened a vein in each of their wings, so that the blood ran into my eye, and I was there by greatly relieved. In the space of two days the bit of steel issued from my eye, and I found that I had received considerable ease and in a great measure recovered my sight."

At the Concert.

"Why do so many people yawn all at once just now?"

"Didn't you notice that the critic over there in the front row yawned first? Everybody else wants to show that he, too, is a musical sharp."—New York Post.

GARDEN PARTY AT HOLMWOOD

The combined efforts of the Progressive Club, the Great War Veterans and the Business Girls Club resulted yesterday in a very successful garden party held at, what is perhaps the most popular and appropriate place in the city, Holmwood Hall which for the second time this season was placed at the disposal of patriotic interests by Mrs. Holmes.

The grounds were prettily decorated for the occasion added to which the brilliantly draped booths lent a fairly like appearance to the beautiful lawns. No effort had been too great for the clubs form tents for the tea room to dancing pavillion for the evening.

The Booths.

The candy booth was one of the most popular places and this was run by the three clubs, was in charge of Mrs. S. T. Medd, supervisor; Mrs. B. B. Gillespie, Mrs. Sangster, Mrs. J. Mills, Mrs. White, Mrs. Gordon Hall, Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Cottrell and Miss Linden Hall.

The flower booth with proceeds to be devoted to the Progressive Club, was in charge of Misses Mabel Collins, Florence Rubidge, Miss Laura Lambe and Miss Helene Bonneville, Ottawa.

At the fish pond, Miss Jean Mervin and Miss Florence Saunders, were in charge. The ice cream booth was run by the Business Girls, Misses Mowatt Evans, Magaret Rae, Lowry, L. Crowe, I. Knapman, H. Dennison and Celia Dunsford. The tea room was in charge of Mrs. Thomas Walker, Mrs. Rew, Mrs. Rose and Miss Peck.

The sofft drinks were in charge of the G. W. V. A.

At the embroidery table which Mrs. R. J. Devey took charge of amongst other raffles, a pair of chickens donated by Detective Sam Newhall created some interest and the checks sold well. Mrs. Bruce Gillespie held the lucky number. Miss Rae, won the table centre, donated by Miss Rubidge.

JAZZ DANCING

The Business Girls had charge of the dancing pavillion with Miss Gladman, Miss Margaret MacDonald and Mrs. Fenwick to supply the music. Here for the first time in the city jazz dancing a popular new form of whiling away the hours was introduced and the epidemic spread wildly. Caught from a couple of Toronto youths, in no time the whole platform jazzed till ten o'clock when the evening broke up.

The Programme.

Many people took advantage of Mrs. Holmes hospitality and enjoyed one of the loveliest views possible. From the balcony the flotilla of canoes and row boats which assembled at the foot of the grounds to watch by the moonlight the dancers on the pavillion and the gay costumes of the dancers lent a charming effect. During the evening a delightful musical programme arranged for by Mr. R. J. Devey was given.

Altogether the affair was a huge success and although no definate estimate can be made, over five hundred people visited the grounds during the evening.

The musical programme was as follows:

"Sussex by the Sea" .....
Louis Bachelor
"Carry on" ..... Miss Fenwick
"Killarney" ..... Mr. Geo. Rose
"After the War" .....
Louis and Leslie Bachelor
Violin Solo ..... Mrs. Foster
Accompanists: Mrs. Fenwick and Mr. R. J. Devey.

"THE GIRL WHO HAD NO GOD"

It was our intention to start the new serial of the above title in our issue of Saturday, August 3rd. As all the copy is now in for the story "The Woman Who Changed" and it will close about the middle of August, the new serial will not commence until that time. "The Girl Who Had No God" is an entirely different style of story to the one now running and will take only about a month to appear.

The Examiner is very particular about the stories it gives its readers.

Has Purchased a New Maxwell

Mr. Thomas Ephgrave, whose car was destroyed by fire last Sunday evening, has purchased a new Maxwell car through Mr. Turner of the Gillespie garage. The destruction of Mr. Ephgrave's old car which was a Maxwell has not lowered his faith in the Maxwell product which he believes to be the best on the market The cause of the fire has not been determined. It is one of those unaccountable things that happen in a long time.

The glaring lights used are particularly complained of as being responsible for many accidents.

The Sunday closing of garages will be discussed. There is a movement among garage employes of the province to have their place; of employment closed on Sunday save for the looking after crippled cars. The closing of garages on Sunday in Toronto is said to be impracticable.

Japan has found acceptable the American proposal which primarily looks to the aid of the Czecho-Slovaks, now operating in Siberia and after exchanges between Tokio and Washington which have cleared up all doubtful points and removed any possibility of future misunderstanding, a complete agreement has been reached. The plan of operation will be put into execution at once.

U. S. HAS PERFECTED AIRPLANE FLARE WHICH LIGHTS BROAD AREA.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Perfection of an airplane flare for use in night-bombing expeditions over enemy trenches was adopted today by the ordnance department. The flare is released from the plane in a parachute and is set off by air friction. At a height of 2,000 feet, it was announced, it will cast a light of more than 400,000 candlepower over an area one and one-half miles in diameter. The flare prevents detection of the plane from the ground, it was explained.

LATE WAR NEWS

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, August 2.—The whole American line moved forward today while the armies along the flank from Soissons to Rheims pressed hard against the sides of the German salient, their gains were made almost without resistance.

Hammered as they have been for days, Germans withdrew during the night so that when Americans who were supported on their right and left by French started early this morning, they did not encounter usual machine gun fire. In open order, men ploughed their way through rain soaked fields for almost a mile. Indications are that Germans will not make stand until they reach the watershed, north of the Fresles forest.

General Retirement.

ON THE FRENCH IN FRANCE, August 2.—The battle on the front north of the Marne resolved itself during the night and morning into almost general retirement of enemy north of Ourcq, with allies pursuing the Germans with greatest zeal and success. The town of Hartennes Et Taux was occupied by allies who also stized, the wood lying to the south of this most important place. French and British in this sector took Contremain and then crossed the Chateau Thierry-Soissons road.

IMPORTANT LAW CASE

Cheque without Stamp Raises Point Under War Measures Act.

Kingston, August 2. — A case of more than usual interest is scheduled to come up before Justice of the Peace Hunter. It arose from the action of a school treasurer issuing a cheque in part payment to a teacher without affixing the necessary stamp to it. When the cheque was presented for payment the cashier of the bank refused it.

The teacher then consulted a lawyer who advised action against the treasurer and the school section and when the notice of motion was served on the defendant, his counsel served notice on Justice Hunter forbidding action without first obtaining the consent of the Attorney General.

Meanwhile the hearing of the case was set, and it is expected that counsel on both sides will have interesting cases to unfold.

This is the first case under the War Measures Act in this district and its outcome will be watched with interest.

A BOUNTIFUL CROP OF PEAS.

STALKS MEASURE OVER EIGHT FEET LONG.

Mr. A. J. Brooks, 235 Princess street, left with the Examiner this morning a sheaf of pea stalks that for growth are exceptional. They measure over eight feet long and Mr. Brooks says were well loaded with peas. The peas were grown on Mr. Brooks lot at the above address.

FATHER P. J. MACCORRY.

Two Great Lectures Chautauqua Week.

FATHER P. J. MACCORRY.

In the afternoon of the second day of Chautauqua, Father MacCorry, with wonderful Irish eloquence will lecture on "The Kingship of Man."

A big story told in a big, broad way, illuminated by reproduction in fac-simile colors of the world's greatest modern paintings. The paintings illuminating this lecture — more than one-hundred in number — are nearly all copyrighted and for the most part unknown in this country, and were colored expressly for "The Story Beautiful" by Mr. Joseph Hawkes of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. The pictures are copied in replica directly from the original canvas as they hang to-day in the great art galleries of America and Europe. They are unquestionably among the finest and most artistic specimens of coloring ever attempted on this side of the water. Accompanied by an elaborate classical setting of vocal and instrumental music. The ensemble—an earnest effort to assemble in a single evening the best things that art, music and literature have produced on the Life and Labors of our Saviour.

Alexander, in France with a Canadian unit, and one daughter, Mrs. Fannie Stewart of Sandwich East.

Fined $25 for Not Stamping Cheque

SPITE ALLEGED BY DEFENCE, BUT PLAINTIFF STOUTLY DENIES THIS.

KINGSTON, Aug. 1.—The first case in this district under the War Measures Act was tried before Justice of the Peace Hunter to-day, when John F. Quinn, Secretary-Treasurer of Union School Section Nos. 1 and 14, Hinchbrook, was charged with having issued a cheque without attaching a 2c stamp to it. The cheque was made out in favor of Thomas B. Furrs of Colebrook, teacher of the school, who has since been discharged. After hearing the evidence of the plaintiff the only witness, the Justice fined Quinn $5 and costs.

A. B. Cunningham, counsel for defendant, endeavored to prove that spite had prompted Furrs to enter action against Quinn, but this was stoutly denied. The plaintiff said that one object in entering the action was that he wanted to see the laws of the Union Government, of which he was a supporter, carried out. Mr. Cunningham pointed out that the War Measures Act was put through before the Union Government was formed, and added, "That won't do." "Well, whatever Government it was, then," added the plaintiff.

THE MYSTERY OF MORALE

(By Lieut. C. D. Stelling.)

The Lewis Gun Section of the Umpteenth Battalion, London Regiment, on one occasion, in rest billets, challenged the Bombing Section of the Battalion to a competition in smartness. Each was to provide a contingent for Guard duty—the one at Brigade H.Q., the other at Battalion H. Q. The Commanding Officer, Adjutant and Regimental Sergeant-Major were to be the arbiters, and the main points to be taken into consideration were general appearance, the smartness of the sentries in paying compliments, quickness in turning-out, and so on.

Any one who has ever stood for two hours on sentry duty will know that it is not exactly a job that a soldier would go out of his way to obtain. Moreover these two sections being Specialists sections—in those days bombs and Lewis-guns were the luxuries of the few—were not in the ordinary way called upon for such duties. But the Lewis-gunners believed implicitly from the very depths of their hearts that their section was

In the best battalion
Of the finest brigade
In the grandest division
Of the most splendid army
In the world.

The bombers held exactly the same opinion about their section and they accepted the challenge.

It happened that both Lewis gunners and Bombers were wrong, for that distinction was then enjoyed by the Signalling Section of the Umpteenth Londons (of which the writer was at that time in command), but the question of whether they were right or wrong in their belief is of small importance. It was the spirit that mattered and the spirit was superbly right.

In that challenge and its acceptance lies the secret of the mystery of morale. I am quite convinced that either section, (equally, of course, with the Signallers) would have been prepared to take on any corresponding section of the German Army at their own game—and give them odds. We have, curiously enough, no word of our own to express that spirit, and we have had to anglicise a French word in default. In official writings, it is sometimes hinted at in such phrases as "the inculcation of an offensive spirit," a cumbersome and very far from comprehensive definition. In the first chapter of "Infantry Training, 1914," the vade mecum of every Infantry Officer, it is laid down that:—The preliminary steps necessary to the training of the soldier are (1) The development of a soldierly spirit . . . ." There follows a paragraph of some 200 words to explain the meaning of this phrase and a second paragraph setting forth some of the methods to be employed in fostering pride of regiment and love of country.

But morale is something more than soldierliness allied to intense local patriotism, for it contains the spirit of comradeship, a personal comradeship that has been welded in the fires of peril and sacrifice. There is no comradeship like that of a common danger shared. There is no love greater than the love between men who have been ready to lay down their lives the one for the other. No company of men can go through the hell of modern battle and emerge the same as they went in. For there persists not only the tried comradeship of the survivors but also the abiding comradeship of their dead. That is why morale is always in the making, and always more to be relied upon in tried troops than in novices.

The belief that was held in all sincerity by the Bombers and Lewis-gunners of the Umpteenth Londons inspired them with a confidence in themselves and also with a spirit of emulation, prompting each man of the section to uphold the traditions which the section had created for itself. When you read the statement of a war correspondent that "the morale of the troops is excellent," it really means that every individual section, every company, battalion, battery brigade is imbued with a similar belief; and moreover that every one of them is convinced that it is fighting in a just cause. For any doubts in the justice of its cause will ultimately sap the spirit of an army. Morale may be artificially stimulated, as in the case of the German Armies marching Pariswards in 1914, by promises of victories, booty and dissipation. But that form of morale met with the fate it merited. The German Command shows, by its careful doctoring of the information it permits to reach the troops, how fearful it is lest the truth should leak out and destroy the morale of an army whose cause it knows to be unjust. But in the long run truth must prevail, and a spuriously induced will-to-victory must break down. That is partly why, even in the darkest days, Britain has never lost faith in the ultimate liberation of humanity from the German menace. "Thrice-armed is he who hath his quarrel just."

Limit Cheques To Six a Month

Savings Accounts Give Bank Unnecessary Work, is Claim.

Ottawa, August 2. —When asked if there was a movement on foot in local banks to curtail savings accounts, Archibald G. Parker, manager of the Bank of Montreal, said that it is the policy of the Bank of Montreal to have Savings accounts changed into current accounts whenever the customer makes a practice of drawing more than six cheques on his account per month.

He said that small accounts were more or less of an expense to a bank, and that a lot of unnecessary labour was caused by unthinking customers. The latter, he said, are generally willing to conform to any requests made by the banks when the burden which they are causing is pointed out to them.

Mr. Parker stated that until about ten years ago it was a practice in almost all banks to charge from 25 to 50 cents a month to carry all accounts which fell below $200. At the present time no charge is made to carry accounts, no matter how small.

Food Board Flashes

Now that we are in the midst of the hot season every wise housekeeper is surely trying to reduce her labors in the kitchen to the minimum Nothing answers better for a hot weather meal than the salad, which lends itself to every occasion and can be made to reappear with pristine freshness and variety every day in the week.

There is certainly no dearth of vegetables and the salad, as well as being easy to prepare, is the most inexpensive of dishes at all times but more especially in a year of war gardens such as this.

Mary Miles Minter, noted for her charming delineation of ingenue roles, has a role in her new American-Mutual production, "A Bit of Jade," which will be found peculiarly appealing to the admirers of the dainty star.

The story is one of mystery, in which a rare Hindu necklace is lost by its owner, a collector of antique gems, and suspicion is cast on Phyllis King (Miss Minter), whom he had met in a cafe and whom he believes is in league with a band of thieves.

When Phyllis finds the necklace in her brother's overcoat, she believes him to be the thief, and in attempting to shield him and return the necklace to the rightful owner, is involved in the mysterious machinations of the Hindu. She is discovered by Blair, the young antiquarian, in his lodge disguised as a boy.

The search for the lost "bit of jade" results in a series of thrilling adventures, in which Phyllis is involved as an innocent accomplice of the wily Hindu.

The Germans are Beginning to Learn of the Marne Disaster

LATE DESPATCHES

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 2.—Desperate attempts are being made to hide the news of the Marne disaster from the men in Crown Prince Rupprecht's group of armies, or to sugar-coat it as far as possible. But despite these precautions the news is percolating through. Prisoners taken at Merris knew nothing definite concerning events in the Champagne. Rumors however, had been circulated persistently that the German offensive was going badly. This is having an increasingly demoralizing effect. There is considerable dissatisfaction among the men, owing to the scarcity of news. An officer had heard that the Crown Prince's drive toward Paris was not progressing favorably, but he still thought the Germans held Chateau Thierry. A private heard a rumour that the French attacked with 800 tanks and that a big German retirement was under way.

Advance Continues.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, Aug. 2.—The French are continuing to advance and have taken additional towns and villages at various parts of the front between Soissons and Rheims. The enemy is resisting desperately and losing in prisoners.

The position of the Germans in the Aisne-Marne pocket is daily becoming more precarious. Last night's communication shows the allied grip on the neck of the salient is tightening. A Reuter despatch French headquarters says General Mangin, commanded the allied attack north of Ourcq. Its results were very interesting, because it gives us views of the enemy's rear as far as Fismes and puts the Germans in the Hartennes-Croisy salient in a most awkward position.

RUMOURS OF ILL TREATMENT UNTRUE

Investigation at Carling's Heights Proves Origin Huns or Malice.

PETROLEA, Aug. 2—A letter has been made public signed jointly by A. B. Auld and Harry Gilroy, as officers of the United Farmers and Farmers' Clubs of Lambton, in which they state that after a thorough personal investigation they were able to say that the rumors circulated among the farmers of Lambton regarding the underfeeding of farmers' sons at Camp Carling, London, the insanitary conditions of the camp, the bad food tyranny of imported English officers, etc., etc., were all unfounded, and that such stories must have been instigated by German sympathizers or by the maliciously inclined.

World Happenings

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 2. — The arrest of Maxim Gorky, Russian author and revolutionary, has been ordered by the Soviet government. Gorky's paper has been suppressed permanently.

UNANIMOUS VOTE.

LONDON, Aug. 2. — The House of Commons adopted the vote of credit introduced yesterday unanimously.

PRESS DIVIDED.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 2.—London morning newspapers are divided on Premier Lloyd George's announced economic policy, some criticizing it, others favouring it. All place special stress on America's attitude, inasmuch as the United States has not yet spoken regarding the Paris resolution.

ANOTHER REVOLT.

Canadian Press:

BASEL, Aug. 2.—Revolt against the Bolsheviki government in Turkestan has broken out, according to news received here to-day from Ukrainian sources.

Eggs and Poultry

OTTAWA, Aug. 2.— While Toronto and Montreal jobbing prices continue unchanged in the egg market, the undertone is weaker due to the inferior quality of current arrivals. Although dealers quotations to country points are down about two cents, forty-five to forty-six f.o.b. is reported paid for fine candled stock. Western surplus fresh, receipts greatly reduced; interprovincial movement very light. Winnipeg jobbing, forty-one and a half to three, according to grade. Chicago unchanged, easy.

FIRE THREATENED BUSINESS BLOCK

Residents on Chambers street got quite a scare yesterday afternoon, when a fire broke out in the rear of Edwards' butcher shops, in a small shed of one of the tenants upstairs. In a short time the fire was clear across the back of the building and going fast. The roof of the Examiner caught fire and windows were broken with the heat, but the prompt arrival of the firemen soon put it to an end. The damage will not be very large. The estate of the late Edgcumbe Pearse own the building.

ALWAYS DREADED TO SEE NIGHT COME

Mrs. Anderson Had Awful Nervous Spells and Couldn't Sleep.

"It took only four bottles of Tanlac to put me on my feet again and I never had any medicine before to do me so much good," said Mrs. Sarah Anderson, whose husband is employed as freight clerk by the Canadian Pacific Railway and who lives at 82 Peter street, Toronto, the other day.

"For several years," she continued "my system was in an awfully nervous and rundown condition which it seemed utterly impossible for me to overcome. I had no appetite at all never, felt hungry and took hardly enough nourishment to keep me going. My nerves were in such a wretched state that going down stairs for a pitcher of water would set me to trembling and shaking like a leaf. I never could rest well at night on account of the nervous twitching and jumping I was subject to and I would wake up in the mornings feeling so tired and fagged out that I could barely get up out of bed and drag myself around the house all day. When I would try to do my housework I would have to stop every little while to lie down and rest. Really, I just can't describe how weak and miserable I felt, and I fairly dreaded the coming of night, for I knew that I would be in for an awful time of it."

"My husband would buy all kinds of medicines for me to take, but they might as well have been water for all the good they did me. But one day he brought me home a bottle of Tanlac and right after I started taking it things began to change for the better. I kept on with it till now I am enjoying all my meals and my food is certainly building me up right along. My nerves are stronger and calmer, I sleep like a child at night and get up in the mornings feeling greatly refreshed. I am stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time and I can now do all my housework without a bit of trouble. My face is filling out, too, and I feel worlds better all over. My husband will bear me out in what I have said about the good Tanlac has done me, and he is as much pleased as I am with my great improvement."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., In Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

PETERBORO BOY WRITES HOME

HAS BEEN AWAY TWO YEARS—FOOD PRICES IN FRANCE.

Private E. J. Koster, a Peterboro soldier, who has been in France two years writes the following letter to his mother, Mrs. Louis Major, 341 Rubidge street.

France, July 12, 1918

My dear Mother,—

It is just two years since I received telegrams from you at Kingston and a few days later I was on the Pond for Old England and it would take the whole of the Morning Times to print one half of the things I have gone through since then but still I am O. K. and well and that is everything so cheero and lets smile eh.

As for money I get $8.00 a month and we are issued with tobacco and cigarettes every week and I can get paper and envelopes from the Y.M.C.A. or Church army huts free at all times and one of these huts are with every bunch of troops, even under shell fire. To buy a pad of paper here from the French stores it would cost from $1.00 to $2.00 a pad and it is not very good at that. Here are a few prices to go by:—1 lb of fish 60c, 1 lb of butter (half lard) $1.75; potatoes 20c lb.; I can salmon 80c; peaches 90c a lb. The rations in training camps are good and clothing and baths are to be had every week so that there is no excuse for being dirty Pay day comes twice a month the 1st and 15th usually and we old soldiers always live within our means. Still those comforts from home seem to shorten the time.

I must say good-bye for this time. Give my love to all at home.

Your loving son,
JACK.

PRICE OF WHEAT PROBABLY $2.24

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—The price to be paid for the wheat of the 1918 crop will be fixed by the Board of Grain Supervisors at a meeting to be held on August 20. The price for last year's crop was set on the basis of $2.21 a bushel for No. 1 Northern at Fort William. The figure this year will, it is authoritatively stated, be two and three cents a bushel higher, probably $2.24, in order to cover the increase in the freight rate on grain which has taken place in the past year.

BUSHMAN WEDS HIS JULIET.

FILM STAR, ROMEO, JUST DIVORCED, MARRIES BEVERLY BAYNE.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 1.—Francis X. Bushman, who was divorced on Friday of last week by Mrs. Josephine H. Bushman, was married on Monday to Beverly Bayne, who played Juliet to his Romeo in the moving picture production of the play. They are now spending their honeymoon at Bushman Manor, at Riderwood, in the Green Spring Valley, Maryland, which was vacated by the first Mrs. Bushman three weeks ago. The first wife is living in Mount Washington, where she is likely to meet the Romeo and Juliet of the moving picture world at any time they motor over the roads of Baltimore County.

The ceremony by which the moving picture stars revised the climax of "Romeo and Juliet" as Shakespeare wrote it is said to have taken place in New York. The first Mrs. Bushman was called on the phone.

"Yes, I have heard that they are married and that they are at Bushman Manor," she said.

"Is there any comment you care to make?" she was asked.

"The incident is too small for comment, but I do think they should have waited until the pen was dry," she answered.

Mr. Bushman's second wife is 23 years old and ten years his junior. The divorce decree granted the first

RIVERSIDES LEAD TWILIGHT LEAGUE BEAT OUT THISTLES BY 12 RUNS TO 8

BIG CROWD OUT

THE STANDING

	Won	Lost
Riversides	6	1
Thistles	5	2
Orientals	2	4
De Laval	2	4
Matthews	1	5

The long looked for battle between the Riversides and Thistles leaders in the city Twilight League race was staged at Riverside Park last night and as the result of handing the Thistles a 12 to 8 beating Manager Solomon's aggregation are now firmly perched on top in the race for the pennant. There was nothing uncertain about the Riverside's win because they played far the steadier ball in the field and ran wild on the bases They took chances on every slip up and got away with most of their attempts pulling off the delayed steal, the squeeze play, scoring from second on an infield out and similar stunts that made the Thistles at times look very bad. Manager Yeotes aggregation played a wretched fielding game having no fewer than nine misplays and the majority of them were costly in view of the daring base running of the Riversides who used the errors of their rivals to the best advantage.

Both teams were under a handicap. Thistles were without McLeod their clever second base man while Neary their twirler is just recovering from the effects of an operation. On the other hand Kirn the Riversides pitching ace" hurt his side early in the game and was barely able to finish. He had to lob the ball up to the batter in the eighth and the result was that Thistles hammered four runs over the plate and looked dangerous for the first time in the game. However the rally fell two runs short of tying the score and Riversides cinched the game in their half by sending two counters in.

Riversides led all the way from the first innings starting out with a trio of runs in that session and they were always at least two to the good.

In spite of the boots there was some fine fielding. Cherrett pulled off several snappy plays at short for the Thistles. Connors the Riversides centre fielder threw a batter out at first base on a line drive over second Jackson pulled down a screaming liner from Guerin's bat. Shaw had a nice running catch to his credit and Guerin handled fifteen chances at first base for Riversides.

Kenneally's hitting was a feature. The Thistles right fielder had four hits in five times up, one of them a screaming three bagger to right field; scored two runs himself and drove in three more which was a pretty busy night's work.

FIRST INNINGS.

Thistles, Cherrett flied out to Smyth, Jackson grounded to Sheehy and Murphy missed three. No runs, hits or errors.

Riversides Sheehy singled to left and stole second. Cherrett grabbed McCarney's fly. Guerin singled between first and second sending Sheehy to third. Guerin stole second and Sheehy scored on the squeeze play Neary fumbling Phelan's bunt and everyone was safe. Phelan stole second. Smyth singled to right scoring Guerin and Phelan going to second himself on the throw in. Solomon was passed and stole second. Murray died on a foul fly to Cupoli in trying to bunt. Connors drew a walk. With the bases filled Kirn fanned. Three runs, three hits, one error.

SECOND INNINGS.

Thistles, Shaw hoisted one to Guerin. Kenneally singled over second and went to second on Cupolis roller to McCarney on which the batter was retired. Kenneally started to steal and went all the way home when Phelan heaved the ball over Murray's head. Bartley died on a roller to Kirn. One run, one hit, one error.

Riversides Sheehy was called out on strikes. McCarney grounded to Mahood. Jackson nailed Guerin's vicious liner down the third base line. No runs, hits or errors.

THIRD INNINGS.

Thistles Mahood fanned. Neary was out on a roller to Sheehy. Kirn threw Cherrett out at first. No runs, hits or errors.

Riversides Cherrett grabbed Phelan's hopper and threw the batter out at first. Smyth walked and stole second but was nailed in trying to make third. Cupoli to Jackson. Solomon flied to Shaw. No runs, hits or errors.

FOURTH INNINGS.

Thistles Jackson's fly was nailed by Kirn. Murphy singled to centre and stole second. Shaw fanned and when Phelan dropped the third one and had to throw to first Guerin's good throw doubled Murphy trying to reach third on the play. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Riversides Murray singled to centre and stole second. Connors was called out on strikes. Kirn dropped a Texas leaguer into left centre. On a delayed steal Murray scored and Kirn went to third on Cupoli's bad throw to the difficult corner. Jackson collared Sheehy's fly. McCarney rolled one through the box, Cherrett making a fine pick up and throw but Mahood dropped the ball, Kirn scoring, McCarney stole second but Guerin fanned. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

FIFTH INNINGS.

Thistles Kenneally cracked a triple to right. Cupoli hit to Kirn and Kenneally was caught between third and the plate and tagged out. Cupoli going to second on the play. Bartley singled to left and when Smyth let the roller go by Cupoli scored and Bartley went to second. Mahood's safety to right scored Bartley. Neary fanned and Cherrett also missed three Two runs, three hits, one error.

Riversides Phelan was safe on Jackson's fumble, stole second and went to third on a passed ball. Smyth and Solomon walked filling the bases. Murray fanned, Neary passed Connors forcing in Phelan. Kirn hit to Neary and Smyth was out at the plate. Kirn beat the catcher's throw to first and Solomon scored on the return throw. Sheehy hoisted one to Bartley. Two runs, no hits, one error.

SIXTH INNINGS.

Thistles Jackson singled to left and stole second. On Murphy's seemingly sure safe one to centre Connors made a quick pick up and threw getting the batter at first. Shaw hit to Kirn and Jackson was out at the plate. Kenneally singled to left, his third hit in succession and Shaw scored. Cupoli grounded to Kirn. One run, two hits, no errors.

Riversides, McCarney went all the way to second when Bartley missed his easy easy fly. Guerin doubled over Murphy's head, scoring McCarney. Phelan fanned and Cherrett made a nice catch of Smyth's fly. Solomon singled through short, scoring Guerin. Shaw dropped Murray's fly to left after a run and Solomon went to third and Murray to second. Solomon scored on Neary's fumble of Connors grounder Murray tried to score from second on the play but was nailed at the plate. Three runs, two hits, three errors.

SEVENTH INNINGS.

Thistles, Bartley grounded to McCarney, Mahood was safe on Murray's fumble but was forced at second on Neary's grounder to McCarney. Cherrett died on a foul fly to Murray. No runs or hits, one error.

Riversides, Shaw made a fine catch of Kirn's long drive to left. Sheehy popped to Mahood and Neary grabbed McCarney's fly. No runs, hits or errors.

EIGHTH INNINGS.

Thistles, Jackson died, McCarney to Guerin. Murphy was safe on Sheehy's bad throw to first. Shaw singled to right sending Murphy to third. Shaw stole second. Kenneally's single to right scored Murphy and Shaw. Cupoli singled between first and second sending Kenneally to third, Cupoli stole second. Bartley's double over Solomon's head scored Kenneally and Cupoli. Mahood hit to Murray and Bartley was caught off second but managed to work back in safety. Cherrett ended the excitement by striking out. Four runs, four hits, one error.

Riversides, Guerin was hit. Phelan bunted a fly to Neary in attempting to sacrifice but the pitcher dropped the ball and everybody was safe. Cupoli had his finger hurt and had to retire. Ahearne replacing him behind the bat for Thistles. Smyth fanned but Ahearne dropped the third one. On his throw to first the base runners advanced. Solomon was out on a roller to Cherrett, Guerin scoring and when Mahood threw low to third Phelan also crossed the plate. Murray crashed a single through the box but Connors fired to Cherrett. Two runs, one hit, two errors.

NINTH INNINGS.

Thistles, Sheehy threw out Jackson. Murphy singled past McCarney and Shaw hit safely to left. Murphy tried to go to third on Smyth's throw to second but Guerin threw him out at third. Kenneally went hitless for the first time in five trips to the plate when he lifted a fly to Murray and the game was over. No runs, two hits, no errors. The box score:—

Gate Money More Than Patriotism

NEW YORK, August 2.—If the National League men arrive here Saturday morning ti discuss the baseball situation it is said that they will vote to wind up their pennant race on Labor Day, regardless of the action of the American League. Insiders declares yesterday that already the Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and St. Louis clubs were prepared to vote in this manner. The New York, Chicago aad Cincinnati clubs are eager to have a Woldr's Series after Labor Day, but they will not agree to suspend their regular championship season on August 20, as suggested by the American League.

In other words, the National League, as a whole, is willing to give up the World's Series rather than lose the gate receipts accruing from games between August 20 and September 2, inclusive. Some of the National League men intend to discuss at Saturday's meeting the advisability of continuing play until the original schedule ends on October 7. These club owners seem to think that enough players above and below the draft ages can be obtained to keep their teams in the field until that time. But just at present it looks as if Labor Day would be the end.

TWENTY INNINGS WITHOUT ONE RUN BIG LEAGUE RECORD

BOSTON, Aug .1.—A world's record for big league baseball of twenty innings without a run being scored by either team was made to-day by Pittsburg and Boston, Pittsburg making two runs in the twenty-first and winning 2 to 0. The previous no-score record was eighteen innings.

To-day's was the longest National League game played in this city.

Schmidt opened the twenty-first inning by singling to left. Cooper, who had relieved Mayer in the sixteenth as pitcher for Pittsburg, forced Schmidt at second. Ellam was thrown out, Cooper taking second on the play, and reaching third on Leach's single to deep short. Carey's single to left scored Cooper and Southworth's single to centre scored Leach.

Nehf pitched the full distance for Boston and until the twenty-first held Pittsburg to eight hits. In the twelth inning Pittsburg failed to work the squeeze play, Southworth being tagged out at the plate on Mollwitz's bunt, Nehf to Wilson. In the second half of that inning "J. C. ("Red") Smith bunted fair on the third, crossed the plate, but Umpire Quigley ruled that Smith had interfered with Catcher Schmidt's attempt to field the bunt. Smith was declared out and Massey was ordered back to third.

Boston had nineteen men left on bases and played errorless ball, while brilliant support saved Mayer in several innings. Southworth, Ellam and Herzog contributed choice fielding plays. The score:—

LONDON'S "SEASON."

The London "season" figures in nearly every English novel and in hundreds of English short stories. It is a semi sacred "tradition" that dates back nearly a century and a half.

The inaugural of the operatic season has come to be its actual beginning, although officially the London season does not begin until the private view of the Royal academy, on the Saturday previous to the first Monday in May.

Important as it is to attend the opera's opening performance, the Royal academy private view and dinner still continue to be the great inaugural functions of the season. It is a sub time recognition of the power of the fourth estate that the press men are given the first glimpse of the new paintings comprising the Royal academy's annual exhibition. Even royalty has to be content with second place. On the Wednesday preceding the private view the gentlemen of the press have sole possession of the gallery. Every important newspaper of Great Britain and Ireland is invited to send a representative, and the London correspondents of the big American and colonial newspapers are also similarly honored. All day Wednesday and Thursday morning they have the gallery to themselves. On Thursday afternoon the members of the royal family take possession of the exhibition. Then comes the Royal academy dinner, at which custom prescribes that the royal family and the cabinet must be represented.

The "private view" is an accurate phrase, except that it is not private and the crush is so great that it is almost impossible to view the paintings. Everybody who is anybody must go, however, and those Americans who are excluded from Burlington house on that day of fate may as well return home and try to forget. True, they may later visit the gallery and study the works of art in a leisurely and comfortable manner, but what social climber wants to do that?

The London season, as an institution, was established by George III.; but, as in many other matters, that amiable monarch did not show good judgment and started the season in January. When Queen Victoria came to the throne she inaugurated the metropolitan season in February, but later she changed the date to about the first of May. After the death of her consort the London season had to get along without royal participation, but despite this handicap it gradually increased in importance. It is the busiest season for the hotels and the merchants of Bond and Regent streets and Piccadilly.—New York World.

Willing Messenger.

Mrs. Suburbs (to tramp)—Out of work, are you? Then you're just in time. I've a cord of wood to be cut up, and I was just going to send for a man to do it. Tramp—That so, mum? Where does he live? I'll go and get him.—Boston Transcript.

A STRANGE SUICIDE.

Bar Harbour, Maine, August 2. — The bodies of a man and woman lashed together with a rope, were picked up in the harbour yesterday by a patrol boat of the Naval Coast Patrol Reserve. They were floating 100 yards below the breakwater. The bodies had been in the water for several days apparently and identification was believed impossible. An examination of the clothing by the manager of a local hotel indicated that the bodies were those of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Morse of Boston. Mr. Morse and his wife were guests at the hotel on July 8th, and left a few days later for another summer resort.

If you are living in a country community, there is nothing more hospitable to the afternoon caller than a cup of tea served with bread and jam or butter, or with crackers.

While passing the showcase at 147 Hunter street to-day, we were attracted by a large picture of the late Sergeant Carter, of Lakefield, which in our opinion is one of the best pieces of work of its kind ever shown in this town. It was enlarged and worked up from a very small snapshot taken in England and reflects great credit to the artistic skill of Photographer Haynes.

CATTLE MARKET

Although, in the opinion of some, the past week has been the dullest in the history of the local cattle trade, or at least for a number of years past, still even at present prices, after a number of sharp declines, cattle are selling at extraordinarily high prices, when compared with pre-war prices, or even for some time after the opening of the war When the commonest of butcher cattle are selling around $1.0 it can hardly be said that prices are low, when it is remembered that not so very far back the same class of cattle were selling around $10, it can hardly be that was "befo de war," and that seems along way back.

Yet prices have gone back in the past two or three weeks, and declines have still been the order of the day all through his week, except for a very limited class of cattle, and these so few in number that on several days there were practically none in the market.

The only kind of cattle at all in demand this week have been good, weighty steers of export quality and fat butcher cows of weight and quality. Anything in either of those two classes have commanded good prices, choice steers anywhere from $14 to $15.50. Fat cows from around $10 to $10.50. For all other classes of butcher cattle the market has been slow and weak, with price tendencies steadily lower. Receipts of heifers of poor to medium quality, including several carloads of Western stuff, chiefly heifers, have been so heavy in proportion to the total receipts that the market at times was badly congested, none of the usual large buyers for the packing houses wanting to load up with these cattle. The result has been that butcher heifers have been particularly slow and draggy. Fears of serious drought in parts of Ontario and in the West account for so many of this poor, unfinished class of cattle being shipped to market.

Among the small stock this week has seen a substantial advance in the price of lambs, and an almost sensational advance in hogs, the latter again touching the $20 mark, an advance of $1.50 to $1.75 from the previous week-end market.

Von Eichhorn Earned Hatred of the Peasants of Ukraine

WAS RECOGNIZED MILITARY LEADER

Before the European war began, General von Eichhorn was one of the recognized leaders of the Prussian military ring, and a favorite of the Kaiser. He was the first army officer to exploit the use of the field telephone at Prussian army manoeuvres. This was in 1905.

Most of this work after the outbreak of the war, was on the east front. From April, 1915, to November, 1915, he was in command of the right wing of Hindenburg's big push through Poland. In September 1915, he received the Order of Merit for taking Kovno. From November, 1915, to March, 1918, he commanded the 12th German Army, with headquarters at Vilna, on a front that extended from Vidzy to the Vilna.

In March, 1918, he was sent to Kiev as German military commander of the Ukraine. As such he was the supreme authority in the Ukraine. Being concerned chiefly with the task of extorting foodstuffs from the Ukraine for German consumption, his military policy toward the population and the Ukrainian Government was one of peremptory demand, followed by the threat and often the application of force, whenever the peasants failed to comply. Many sporadic uprisings resulted in which the blood of peasants was freely shed.

Rather than release their food to the Germans, the peasants would burn and destroy their crops. General von Eichhorn repeatedly issued decrees ordering the peasants to sow crops and threatened dire punishment if they failed. Just as repeatedly, however, the peasants listened with a deaf ear, and this last Spring, despite the oppressive tactics of General von Eichhorn, the peasants preferring to starve rather than put their labor into the filers for no purpose other than to produce food that would be taken away from them.

When the Ukrainian peace was made, the Rada agreed to supply Germany with 1,000,000 tons of wheat by August 1, 1918.

When the helpessness of the Rada to meet its obligations because evident, General von Eichhorn and the German Ambassador in the Ukraine, Baron von Schwartzenstein, decided to dispense with the Rada and support in its stead a dictatorship with General Skoropadski at the head. Under such an arrangement the German military leader believed he could better command the obedience of the peasants. Having nothing to give the peasants for their wheat, he adopted a system of ruthless seizure wherever possible. On the whole, however, this method merely made things much worse. The policy of the "iron" hand only fanned the flames of resentment and antagonism in the population, and Hetman Sporopadski either could not or would not assist the Germans in acheiving their purpose.

Kiev and other parts of the Ukraine became the scenes of many riots in protest of the peasants against von Eichhorn's decrees. Desperate over their failure to obtain the promised wheat, the German authorities were ready to employ every means available to seize from the Ukraine whatever resources she held. In several instances it was reported that General von Eichhorn distributed arms and munitions to partisans of German rule in order that they might more effectively suppress the outcries of elements which demanded the estab-ishment of a real oGvernment and the cessasion of Germany's oppressive tactics.

Sent a Note.

In May, 1918, the Ukrainian Government under Skoropadski sent a note to protest to Berlin indicating that it would resign if several Germen including Field Marshall von Eichhorn, the German military commander, and Baron Mumm von Schwartzenstein ,the Ambassador, were not recalled. Von Eichhorn's failure to fulfill Germany's economic measures became appallingly evident to the Reichstag and even there he became a subject of sharp criticism. He was allowed to remain, however, and since then his presence there, with a large force of bayonets always available, has been equivalent to military occupation of the Ukraine, each organized attempt on his part to assemble grain being met by an increasing and more defiant manifestation of resistance on the part of the peasant masses.

GRAIN MARKET

The situation in the wheat flour market was indicated yesterday in a 20c. advance in Ontario flour quotations. Stocks of this flour are evidently running low, as there has been little or no wheat available for milling purposes for some time. Millers have been glad to secure an odd car to be picked up here and there among the country elevators, the farmers being practically cleaned out long ago. The corn markets were again active and strong yesterday, due to continued reports of hot dry weather in the South and reduced estimates. Oats were very inactive.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2, $2.20 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-2, including 2 1-2c. tax, in store, Fort William.

U-BOATS STILL MORE THAN MERE NUISANCE

But Raids Along American Coast Cannot be Repeated on Larger Scale Without Disproportionate Risk to Foe, Thinks Arthur Pollen.

ANTI-GERMAN CARGO LOSS

Arthur Pollen in The London Daily Mail.

The recent U-boat invasion of American waters has been so successful in tonnage sunk, without any apparent compensating loss of submarines, that we may be quite sure that it will be repeated on a more ambitious scale. We can, I think, be equally sure that the scale cannot be increased without the risk to U-boats being magnified out of all proportion. For the American Navy Department will certainly see that the coastwise and Caribbean traffic is, so to speak, canalized, and, if necessity arises, will extend convoy protection to its more important units. This incident lends a new interest to the whole problem of defeating this conscienceless attempt to paralyze the world's traffic, and once more provokes us to ask the question: Is the absolute and complete defeat of the submarine a practical possibility?

In spite of what the navy has done and of the very changed condition of things to-day from what they were a year ago, the problem is still intensely serious. Speaking at Edinburgh a week or two ago, the Prime Minister confirmed, with the full authority of the Admiralty, what some observers had already been rash enough to infer from the published figures. He told us that the German submarine, though no longer a menace, was still a nuisance. Hardly more than a year ago it was a menace of appalling dimensions. The German plan and the German expectation was to destroy a million tons of British shipping a month and so frighten all neutral shipping off the seas. For two weeks in the month of April, 1917, the enemy attained this rate of destruction, and, indeed, surpassed it. In the three months, April, May, and June, he sunk between 1,300,000 and 1,400,000 tons of British shipping alone, and very nearly 900,000 of neutral and allied shipping. To call this a "menace" only is to understate the case. It was a sentence of death—if it could have continued. To-day not only is the sinking much less than half of this, but with American help we are building nearly twice as much tonnage as we were building then. Germany's immediate strategic aim, then, is defeated, for allied tonnage is growing and not diminishing.

ANTI-GERMAN CARGO LOSS

But if the word "menace" understated the position of a year ago, the word "nuisance" underrates the present position. For in the month of April the world lost over 300,000 tons of shipping and cargoes to correspond. Herr Dernburg, in his recent speech, said that the average cargo ton was worth £35 ,and that it cost £50 to replace a ton of shipping At this rate the submarine war has already cost the anti-German world over £1,250,000,000, and must now be taxing us at the rate of over £300,000,000 a year. The economic loss, the dislocation of plans, and the embarrassment to our military action involved—all of these are most formidable disadvantages, and the enemy can still impose them on us.

The nuisance, then, is in the vulgar phrase, an "awful nuisance," so bad in fact we are compelled to ask if the measures that have ended the submarine as a menace can be expected to put an end to it altogether, or at least so greatly hamstring it—if you can hamstring a creature that has no hind legs!— that is depredations can be expected to be negligible? To answer this question involves examining how the efficiency of the submarine has, in fact, been halved during the last 12 months. We can then judge whether any or all of the methods employed bear in themselves the hope of a complete and radical cure of this ghastly evil.

The anti-submarine campaign may be divided into two sides. One consists of measures of defense as interposing between the submarine and its intended victim, with a view to defending that victim by sinking or threatening to sink the submarine. The other consists of measures of offence, namely, either methods of ending the submarine when at large and then pursuing it till it is destroyed—or methods which, if the submarine tries to get to sea, will automatically block his passage, or finally stopping it from putting to sea. The first involve the tactics of defence, the second the tactics of offence.

TACTICS OF DEFENCE.

The tactics of defence are made up as follows:

(1) The convoying of ships by destroyers, sloops, trawlers and submarines.

(2) The arming of merchant ships.

(3) The careful stowing of cargoes, so that ships when hit remain afloat.

(4) Camouflage.

The tactics of offence consist of

(5) Discovering the submarine by aircraft or hydrophone and then running it down by destroyers and annihilating it by depth charges.

(6) Stalking submarines at night when they have to come to the surface to recharge their batteries.

(7) The maintenance of mine barrages across routes which submarines must take to get to their field of operation.

(8) The destruction of the bases from which the submarines issue.

(i) Of the first group the most effective and —if historical precedent should be a guide to policy—the most obvious is to group the ships liable to attack into squadron and send them through the danger zone under the convoy of vessels possessing the right armament with the required rapidity. (ii)The less effective is to arm the merchant ship itself with guns. This measure is technically inexicient, because the gun is not the best weapon to use against the submarine, and, further, it is less effective when carried in a slow than in a rapid craft. It is theoretically inferior, because it leds to a dispersion of force, that is guns. (iii) No passive defence against torpedoes, that is protecting ships by nets or otherwise, has been found which can make a hit innocuous though much has been done in finding ways of so stowing cargo that ships will keep afloat after being hit, while (iv) camouflage at times is protective by preventing the submarine seeing the merchant ship until it is too late to manoeuvre into a favorable position for attack.

SATURDAY EVENING BULLETINS

Allied Patrols Have Made a New Advance—Heavy Fighting at Some Points.

WOOD CAPTURED

ALLIES PENETRATE THICKETS.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 3.—Along the centre of the front as well as on the westerly side the German resistance seemed greatly diminished. The allies pressed through a series of thickets to the north of the road leading from Gaussaincourt to Coulonges, and reached the southern part of Vezilly Wood.

Farther east on the lines the aalies are within 500 yards of Villers-Agron, and along the line towards Rheims they captured a wood situated 1,500 yards east of Romigny.

Allied patrols have attained a position three-fifths of a mile north of Ville-en-Tardenois, and have occupied a height 1,500 yards north of Romigny.

BECOMING FRIGHTENED

LONDON, Aug. 3—Lord Cecil, Assistant Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, declared in an interview that the Kaiser's proclamation to the German army and navy yesterday showed he is becoming frightened.

"The Kaiser's proclamation shows a wholesome chastening," said Lord Cecil.

REVIEWED TROOPS

PARIS, Aug. 3.—King Victor Emmanuel, of Italy, reviewed the American troops who have taken positions in the war zone, according to a Havas despatch from Rome.

1920 CLASS

PARIS, Aug. 3.—The Senate has adopted the resolution providing for the calling up of the class of 1920, the vote upon which in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday was considered one expressing confidence in the Clemenceau Government.

The letter-carriers of Toronto were informed by members of the federal cabinet that the governor-in-council has no authority to grant them a statutory increase in salary. This could only be granted on a vote of the House of Commons. Canada is thus indebted to the postmen for discovering something that cannot be done by order-in-council.

Winnipeg Travellers Get Chance to Study Hinterland

New Ontario's immense forest reserves and seat of Provincial Colonization Scheme of Great Interest

The traveller nowadays wants something more than formal seat space, and the well established service of the Canadian Northern to Western Canada affords ample opportunity for thought. The immense stands of merchantable timber, the untold wealth in water power, and the great commercial and agricultural possibilities of Northern Ontario should be matters of common knowledge to Canadians. Modern trains of standard and tourist sleeping cars and coaches leave Toronto Union Station at 10.00 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, connecting at Winnipeg for all points in Western Canada.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A BIT OF GOSSIP

CHAPTER CXXXV

Madge Loring called upon me one afternoon soon after my return. I was not particularly pleased to see her, but, in line with my new resolves, I tried to be particularly gracious. She, too, seemed more attractive than I ever had found her. It flashed across my mind that perhaps Mrs. Sexton had been right when she told me, a long time before that our attitude toward people tinged theirs towards us, to a great extent,—that people usually responded in kind.

Be that as it may, I certainly found myself enjoying her call. We chatted of the people we knew, and what had been going on socially while George and I were away. She asked if we had seen Julia Collins, and when I told her "yes, frequently," (altho I omitted to mention anything unpleasant), she said:

"I hear she is to marry a Mr. Lombard, a very wealthy Chicago Board of Trade man. Of course she hasn't announced her engagement, yet, and one never can be sure of Julia doing anything until after it is done."

I was tempted to tell her of the man we had seen Mrs. Collins with, that night in the restaurant, but did not. Afterward, I was so glad I had restrained myself. If Julia married, I should be very much pleased, especially if she made her home in Chicago. But it would have been a very tactless thing to allow her best friend to discover my feelings on the subject.

HELEN REPEATS THE GOSSIP.

When George came in to dinner, I repeated what Madge Loring had told me. He didn't seem at all surprised, and only remarked:

"It was inevitable that Julia should make another marriage, and a good one; she has many sterling, as well as charming qualities. If she marries Lombard, he is to be congratulated."

A short time before, I should have been annoyed at the flattering way in which George had spoken of Mrs. Collins. But now I simply rejoined:

"Mrs. Loring was very funny. She said that one never could be sure of what Julia Collins would do until it was done."

"Madge knows her pretty well; and perhaps the uncertainty in which she keeps her admirers, is one of Julia's attractions."

I made no reply, but thought of what George had said many times.

Was it true that, to keep a man in uncertainty, added to ones attractiveness? In other words, did George mean that if I kept him guessing, he would be more apt to care for me? I did not believe so. I thought it a case that applied to the "other fellow," not to him. I would ask him, some time when it came naturally—when he could not think it was because I was jealous of Julia Collins.

Evelyn Reeves and I talked it over one day and she said she "was sure it wouldn't work with my husband." Then she added:

"Why, if he thought I was pretending, he would lose faith in me. If he imagined I did things purposely to make him jealous, he would be angry, I know; and as to being uncertain in my actions toward him,— keeping him guessing, etc.—I don't believe he'd guess very long! He'd just stay away until I had made up my mind what I wanted to do." Then she added: "No, Helen. That might go with some men, especially from a rich widow like Julia Collins. But they wouldn't stand it from young things like us—anyway, after we had married them."

RUNAWAY THOUGHTS.

Often, I would sit for an hour, quietly thinking. Sometimes my thoughts would run away into the coming years, and I would wonder and speculate as to what those years would bring me—what life had in store that would be doled out to me.

Sometimes I would allow myself to think that, in the years to come, I should be very happy—like Mr. and Mrs. Babcock, or like father and mother. Tho it was not easy to think of George and me leading the quiet home-life led by my parents; it was easier to think of our Chicago friends. They were society people, such as George's people were, and as we were obliged to be. But they were just as happy. Being socially prominent had not spoiled their lives together. They seemed just as happy as did father and mother.

I decided to take Mrs. Babcock for a pattern. That is, when I felt that I was to have a happy future. Then, at other times, I would wonder if I ever would be what George wanted me to be. For, in spite of his unusual kindness, I had displeased him once or twice after we came back—had done it so unconsciously that, when he reprimanded me, I could not control myself and allowed him to see the tears in my eyes, and so brought double annoyance to him, and an extra reprimand to myself.

When I felt that I never should succeed in making of myself the woman he wanted me to become, I would wonder what he would do, and, therefore, that I would do, in the coming years. Would he do as some men did, and divorce me or separate from me? The thought was torture, yet I considered it as a possibility. But such thoughts as the last ones, were becoming more and more infrequent; those of a happy future more frequent. I had found a certain encouragement in the manner in which George often spoke to me, both when we were alone and when with others. It often appeared as if he were really proud of me.

Spanish Nicknames.

One of the peculiar ways in which Spanish differs from English is in the names the language gives to all people with a certain infirmity or peculiarity. A blind man is referred to as el ciego, a man with but one eye is a tuerto, a pug nosed man is chato, one who is cross eyed is a bisojo, a cojo is a lame man, and a manco has but one arm. If he is humpbacked he is a jorobado, if baldheaded a calvo, and if his hair is very short he is a pelon. The feminine titles for the same classes are the same, with the exception that they end in "a" where the masculine terminate with "o." These short names are used most commonly. In fact, they are applied as nicknames in many cases, and especially among the lower classes persons are addressed or referred to only by these names.

Europe's Diamond Industry.

Years ago Amsterdam was at the head of the diamond industry in Europe. Of late Antwerp has forged ahead and taken first place. Amsterdam very largely specializes in small stones, and its superiority over Antwerp in cutting these diamonds is unquestioned. Antwerp, on the other hand, cuts large diamonds and small ones, according to what happens to be most in demand. It works on the larger Transvaal stones furnished by the London syndicate, and at the same time it monopolizes the small southwest African business.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus, without even one little twinge of pain.

You simply apply a few drops of this freezone on a tender, aching corn and the soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, with your fingers. This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

PERCY HAWN, Sale Manager

When you set out to select the motor car that will best suit your own particular needs and your purse, you demand as primary requisites, the highest degree of reliability with economy of operation.

And every salesman you meet insists his car is that car.

If you are informed, as you should be, you are liable to quote some of those Maxwell records—to see what he will say, mostly.

He must say something and usually he affects to disbelieve those records.

You remind him that they are official—made under the sanction and supervision of A. A. A. officials.

Then he insists that his car will do as well or better.

Your cue, at this point, is to ask that perfectly fair and most pertinent question, "Then why doesn't your car go out and do it?"

We'll tell you why—it can't.

Any Maxwell salesman can take you through this car, from motor to rear axle, taking up in turn every unit and comparing design and construction and strengths with any and all other cars of similar size and capacity.

And he will show you right there why this Maxwell can, and that rival can't.

For it is all there—in the design; in the dimensions of parts; in the quality of materials and in the making.

Let him show you. He will take all the time you will give him—and you owe it to yourself to know before you decide.

Then when any salesman tries to convince you that you ought to pay $100 or $150 or $200 more for a motor car—ask him to show you one as good as this Maxwell.

Insist on proofs—not mere statements.

For if a car will do it, surely that fact is susceptible of proof.

If you would have the claims and promises of salesmen backed by proofs, and in official form—that car must be a Maxwell.

OUR WORD "GARDEN."

We speak so freely and often of a "garden," assuming that there is some well defined common use of that word even among the authorities on gardening subjects. But the fact is that it has reached mighty elastic limits in their writings and speech and can be taken to mean anything from the enormous private parks and estates to the tin can glories of a back yard.

The word garden is from the old Anglo-Saxon root "gyrden," meaning an inclosure. At that time, due to the uncertain character of community life, it was either inclosed within fortifications or left unprotected and exposed without. This private inclosed land was the garden of that time. That is the meaning of garden in the Song of Solomon.

Gradually the sense of the word has changed to cover those parts of the land devoted to the cultivation of plants either for pleasure or for use; thus, we have the vegetable or fruit garden, and on the other hand, the wall, water or rose garden, etc.

Liberty Hyde Bailey defines a garden as "the personal part of an estate, that area which is most intimately associated with the private life of the home."

Whatever the sense in which it is used, the word "garden" always succeeds in carrying with it an atmosphere of romance and beauty, which countless ages of use cannot dim.—Philadelphia Record.

Rungs of the Ladder.

Thomas A. Edison at a dinner once endeavored to instill courage into a disappointed man.

"You haven't got on," said Mr. Edison, "but if you keep on trying you'll succeed in the end. The successful man's life is just like yours, only he keeps up the fight; he doesn't give in.

"Yes," Mr. Edison ended, "the ladder of success is composed of round after round of failure."—Washington Star.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

PlottersofLove

By MICHAEL J. WHITTINE

"Confess, Mr. Kerr, that you have been warned to avoid me like a pestilence."

"My dear Miss Prentice—"

"I see you understand the situation," half smiled Alvin Kerr, "but as to avoiding you," and the bright young man caused Verda Prentice to blush under his manifestly ardent gaze, "or as to hating so beautiful a being," but she had put her hands to her ears and his eulogies were wasted.

"And as we have met entirely by chance," resumed Kerr, "and as I could not very cheerfully see you, curless and drifting to the dam, O my fair enemy, let us improve the opportunity to see if our views as to the peculiar situation coincide."

"Very good," nodded the sprightly young girl, "you tell the story."

"It is soon related," answered Kerr. "Over beyond the river is the old Ridley Yarm. The father died, leaving two sons, James and Robert. In his will he divided the farm. The wording was faulty, and while it gave an equal number of acres and a home to each of these persistent bachelors, a 100-foot strip running behind both farms, and originally appertaining by deed to the land James inherited, came into dispute. By right of original deed James claimed it, because for years one-half of it was accepted as going with land Robert inherited, the latter claimed that running behind his three hundred and twenty acres. They fought over it, stormed over it, litigated it. The court divided the strip equally."

"Then they became deadly enemies."

"Precisely. James Ridley vowed he would never again speak to his brother. Robert Ridley declared he would yet possess the entire strip."

"My Mr. Ridley built a new house," observed Verda.

"Mr. Robert Ridley, who was a great friend of my dead father, adopted me."

"And Mr. James Ridley practically did the same with me. His purpose, as I now view it, was to use me as his heir, so that by no possibility could his brother ever inherit that unfortunate strip of land."

Alvin had come home from college the first time in a year. He had seen Verda at a distance, but only an hour previous had come upon her in a skiff in the river, with both oars floating away. He had rescued her, and now the harmonious twain, fully aware of the wrath of their respective guardians were this acquaintanceship discovered, discussed the situation.

"There will never be peace between those two men until that troublesome strip of land is out of the way," asserted Alvin.

"If we could only devise some way to make them friends again!" murmured Verda.

"Let us try it," suggested Alvin eagerly. "I will think out a remedy, and I am sure that you, with your gentle, peace-loving nature, will co-operate. Let us once a week, say this day and hour, meet here and exchange opinions."

"But anywhere else I must view you with disdain!" warbled Verda.

"And I must frown darkly upon you!" chuckled Alvin.

"They made little progress, for the brothers were set in their prejudices. About all for a time that came of the clandestine meetings at the river shore was a glowing love romance, so sweet to the satisfied participants that they closed their eyes to discovery.

Two incidents occurred, however, which favored the plans and hopes of the lovers. Robert Ridley was cut by a scythe one day and would have bled to death had not Alvin been near to succor him. James Ridley, a little later, was overcome by the heat in the field and it was Verda who aided him. One day Alvin met Verda, his face aglow with satisfaction.

"About the strip of land?"

"Yes, Verda"—he called her this now. They put their heads together, two amiable plotters. The next day Alvin approached James Ridley.

"I've got some news for you," he announced. "That big bone of contention, the one hundred-foot strip, passes out of the situation."

"They've surveyed it for the new railroad."

"Well, they can't have it."

"You can't prevent them," advised Alvin. "If you don't take a fair price, they will start condemnation proceedings. Just think, though, the road will increase the value of your land 50 per cent."

It came about that James and Robert Ridley had to meet to adjust the sale. It came about that Verda urged Robert, and Alvin influenced James, and induced them to bury the hatchet.

"You scheming rascal!" declaimed James Ridley, when he learned that Alvin had influenced the utilization of the land in contention through his surveyor friend. "You've been traitorously plotting with that pretty girl all the time, eh? Well, Robert and I have agreed to the marriage. We're going to build you a home squarely between the two farms. You see, it will be a sort of buffer, to hold us in check if either of us get cantankerous again!"

Nature's Way Is Best

Nature's laxative is bile. If your liver is sending the bile on its way as it should, you'll never be constipated.

Keep the liver tuned right up to its work.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until your bowels act regularly, freely, naturally.

Corn Frowns Vanish in a Moment

HERE is a fact which millions know. It is so clear, so simple that it makes a corn ridiculous. You can stop any corn pain in a jiffy, and stop it for good.

You can end any corn quickly and end it completely. You can do this without any bother, without any soreness, without any muss.

So corns are utterly unnecessary. And folks who have them nowadays do themselves a wrong.

You can prove these facts on any corn by applying a Blue-jay plaster. The pain will stop instantly.

Then a bit of red wax, centered on the corn, will gently undermine it. In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. An occasional corn needs a second application.

It is simple and gentle, yet sure.

The whole effect is centered on the corn, so it doesn't lead to soreness.

To pare a corn—for brief relief—takes ten times longer than to apply a Blue-jay.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. See how promptly you forget it—see how soon it ends. Then remember that every corn—right at the start—can be ended in like way. You should never for a moment suffer corns.

Prove this tonight.

HUMAN INSTINCT.

More Potent at Times Than Reason In Directing Our Actions.

That even in man instinct is sometimes stronger than reason is illustrated by these two cases:

There had been shipped on a Mississippi river steamboat a box with a glass cover, containing a very active rattlesnake. Whenever any one approached the box the serpent would strike the cover. The owner of the reptile challenged any one to hold his finger on the glass and let the rattler strike at it. There was no danger, and it seemed an easy thing to do. First one and then another tried it, but when the snake gave its vicious spring the finger was invariably drawn back with a jerk. Instinct was stronger than reason and will combined.

A young man in Paris had lost his last sou at the gambling table. Not only was he without means, but he had lost a large sum belonging to his employer. He started for the Seine with the intention of drowning himself. On the way there was a great commotion, caused by the escape of a lion from a strolling menagerie. The animal came galloping down the street, and people fled in every direction.

Instantly the man who was seeking death climbed a lamp post and clung to the top of it, trembling in every limb. When the animal was captured and the danger was over he proceeded to the river and plunged in.—Washington Star.

Naval Nicknames.

Curious nicknames are applied to vessels of the British navy. The Ariadne is known as the "Hairy Annie" of "Haggy Agony," the Narcissus as "Nasty Sister," the Cressy as the "Greaser," the Inconstant as the "Inkstand," the Iphigenia as the "Silly Jane," the Lucifer as the "Match Box," the Hecate as the "He Cat" or "The Tom" and the Neptune as the "Jew's Harp."

In the American navy similar nicknames have been used to some extent. The Sassacus was known as the "Sassy Cuss," the Miantonomoh as "My Aunt Don't Know You," the Wissahickon as the "Widow Higgins," the Winnebago or perhaps the Wyalusing as "We Know She Goes Slow."—Chicago News.

Eating Snails.

Colonel Newnham Davis has described the ideal conditions of snail eating. "At Prince's," he writes, "the horned thing is eaten with proper ceremony. In a silver bowl, with a silver three pronged fork as a means of conveying the alleged dainty to the mouth, the long, black gelatinous things are brought to the table very hot and swimming in a sauce in which lard and onions and garlic seem to be the principal components. Speared on the fork, the snail goes into one's mouth, and then comes one of the critical moments of life."—London Standard.

The Bilious Habit

Some people have bilious spells about ever so often until they get to be a habit.

The liver is at fault. Get the liver right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the bile will not collect in the blood until it poisons you.

There is no one organ in the human body which has so great a control of health as the liver. Hence the far-reaching effect of this treatment.

WHO'S WHO IN LEGISLATURE.

There are in the Ontario Legislature twenty-six farmers, twenty-six lawyers, nine manufacturers, five merchants, eight doctors, seven lumbermen, four insurance agents, two "workingmen," two agents, an undertaker, an auctioneer, one "gentleman," a realty agent, an accountant, a dentist, a contractor, a veterinary surgeon and a clergyman.

SHOWING THE CHARM THAT SUMMER IS MADE OF

Frocks for Sunny Afternoons

NEW YORK, August 1—

Country Club time is here, and also the time for Country Club clothes, both of the sport and dress variety. From every side come reports of the popularity of the sleeveless sport coat, sometimes worn with a matching skirt and sometimes with a skirt of white or some contrasting color. Even as riding habits, these coats have taken the place of sweaters of wool or silk. Baronette satin is used for many of the separate skirts, and with these fascinating skirts, and thin waists of Georgette crepe, silk crepe or voile. Afternoon dresses of the more formal variety are made of Georgette crepe, chiffon, or satin. With these costumes, the cape's the thing, made of satin or heavy silk, and a hat with a sheer brim, perhaps of Georgette crepe or chiffon. Then, too, organdie dresses and their accompanying organdie hats are very much the vogue for afternoon wear. Some of these dainty frocks have hemstitching in the waist and skirt, forming an intricate design, the only trimming deemed necessary. Ruffles, however, are ever dear to the heart of the summer girl, and are in no wise neglected this year. One finds them on every type of dress, from the almost-tailored morning frock to the filmiest of evening dresses. Petticoats (for we are once more indulging in these luxuries) are much beruffled. Indeed, all that is possible has been done to insure a delightful stage setting for summer, 1918.

FOR SUNNY AFTERNOONS

Only the thinnest things appeal to one as the mercury mounts, and, after all, it is the thin materials that seem to suit best one's moods. There are so many pretty new designs in the thin materials. Printed chiffons, voiles and marquisettes that delight one by their very daintiness. The big sprawly figures that seem to be favorites this season are, as a rule, in some dark color, or a decided green, blue, rose or violet on a white or cream ground. The dress illustrated here was of printed chiffon ,giving the effect at a distance of gray, for the figures were black on a white ground, made over white silk. The draped tunic is one piece, softly pleated at the waistline. As all skirts are narrow this year, this is no exception to rit measures but one and one-half yards at the lower edge. The sleeves are made of white chiffon for coolness.

Lace dresses are considered very smart, also. Sometimes the tunic is of chantilly lace, either draped on the hips, or simply gathered at the waist. The underdress is usually white, golden yellow or some other fairly light color, giving almost a fairy-like appearance to the delicate lace. Often the sleeves are quite long, and rather tight, and the neck may be of the collarless variety. Sashes or girdles of a harmonizing shade are crushed about the waist ,ending either in long fringed ends or a huge Japanese bow.

ABOUT COLOR SCHEMES.

There has been a good deal of talk about the psychological effect of the war on women's clothes, and much discussion as to the right and wrong of new clothes at all. From our Allies we are getting numerous proofs that the men who have returned from the front "on leave" notice the clothes the women are wearing. If this be the case of the men who are going "over there." Surely it is our duty as well as our privilege to dress as well as we can.

THE MUSICAL CATBIRD.

This Canadian Has Ugly Name But Beautiful Song.

The apple-blooms in the solitary apple tree in the backyard, the only survivor of the ravage of the San Jose scale, have been scattered by the winds. In their place is an assemblage of little green buttons, which it is hoped will one day develop into pippins.

From the uppermost twig of this tree, the family in the house and all the neighbors have been furnished, morning after morning, with a musical medley, the delight of all who hear it.

Poets on this side of the Atlantic have indulged in raptures over the song of the nightingale, which they have never heard but have taken second-hand from European rhymers. Deaf are they to the wonderful vocalist singing in the apple tree to whom, native Canadian that he is, has been accorded no sounding title. He is called—one may blush to write it—the catbird.

This name has been given, it is said, because of one of its cries, which resembles the mew of a cat, and this mew of the cat is the least of this bird's accomplishments. His musical matinee from the top of the apple tree lasts a full half hour each morning, and what a variety, with no number repeated!

A handsomely-shaped chap he is, about eight and one-half inches long from the tip of his bill to the longest of his tail feathers. His suit is of a dark slate color with crown and tail black, and under tail coverts chestnut. Other birds arrive in this neighborhood somewhat earlier in the spring, but do not deserve and should not receive a warmer welcome, not even the red-chested robin, who has impudence and style but small song power.

The catbird is related to the mocking bird, and that warbler may well be proud of his relative, who is better known in the north than he is.

Science has come to give this bird a name quite as objectionable as "catbird." No one need be expected to pronounce as the name of this species the syllabic monstrosity "galeoscoptes carolinensis." Certainly not, especially as the translation of these words gives to us that in English the syllable "gale" is Greek for "weasel," and from "skoptes" comes the word "mocker."

And there he swings on the topping twig of the apple tree and sings and sings, wholly careless of any of the names given to him in either Greek or English. The bird breeds in the north and winters from Florida southward.

The nightingale is a smaller bird than our catbird. It sings for the most part after dusk. Our independent Canadian bird sings at any time he chooses. He is an early riser and under the summer schedule now opens his repertory at 4.30 a.m.

The tanks used in the war may be of great value in reclaiming the country for agricultural purposes after the conflict.

Favorite Hymns.

A pastor in a large western city church took a vote upon the ten favorite hymns of his young people. Beginning with the one receiving the highest number of votes, the list was as follows: "Abide With Me," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Rock of Ages," "Lead, Kindly Light," "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "How Firm a Foundation," "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Speedy Athlete Injured.

The accident which Jack Laviolette, noted Montreal athlete, met with a few days ago while driving one of his racing motor cycles at Montreal, has ended his career as a lacrosse player, as one of his limbs has had to be amputated. Laviolette's career as an athlete has been a very brilliant one as he starred in motorcycle, racing, aeroplane, lacrosse and hockey. It was his craze for speed that undoubtedly brought his athletic career to such an unfortunate end, as speed was his middle name. He always remarked that they didn't build motorcycles too fast for him, and that he hoped to see the day that he would operate an aeroplane 150 miles an hour. Few players, if any, could travel up and down a hockey arena as fast as Laviolette. In fact, he was a sensation on the steel blades, as he skated just as fast backwards as he did going straight ahead, and it was a very common sight to see him jump clean over an opponent rather than waste the time of stick-handling around. Laviolette was equally as speedy on a lacrosse field.

The Montreal whirlwind, as he was commonly known to his friends, first came into prominence as an athlete when the old International Hockey League was organized. Laviolette played for the American Soo team along with Pitre, another famous Montreal athlete. When George Kennedy organized the Canadiens, one of the first players he signed up was Laviolette. He has been a fixture with the red, white and blue aggregation ever since. He played defence for many years. Two winters ago he tried a forward position and made good. Even last winter he played a few games, and despite his age, which is 40 or over, he delivered the goods. His genial disposition both on and off the ice and the lacrosse field made him many friends.

GIRL'S DRESS.

8819

The dainty little frock illustrated in No. 8819 is quite new and distinctive in design, and yet it is simple enough to be in good taste for the little schoolgirl. The upper section of the dress extends below the normal waistline at the sides to form the under part of the pockets. The waist bottons at the back and the neck is cut in a slight V-shape, which is relieved by a pretty round collar and a tiny silk tie. The long sleeves are gathered into turned back cuffs, but the three-quarter length may be used if preferred. The skirt is the attractive feature of the dress, for it is gathered at the high waistline at front and back, with a heading extending above the narrow belt, and the sides are cut down to form pockets.

The girl's dress pattern No. 8819 is cut in five sizes, 6 to 14 years. The 8 year size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch, or 2¼ yards of 44 inch and ⅞ yard of 36 inch contrasting material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents

The Allies Have Reached The Vesle River

French and Americans Are Advancing on a Wide Front

The German Retreat Gains Momentum as Allies Push Forward on 45 Mile Front

The Revolution of the Battle Which is Leading to Victory Happened All Within a Few Hours.

ENEMY SURPRISED

(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, August 3.—The German retreat is gaining momentum as the Allies push forward on the whole 45-mile front, from west of Soissons to Rheims.

In the centre, American troops are driving toward the Aisne up the D'Orillon Valley and are within six miles of the important enemy base of Fismes.

West of Rheims they have reached several points on the Vesle River.

East of Soissons many Germans are retreating northward along the Launoy Aux Croutes Road. French patrols have reached the Aisne near Venizel. The enemy seems to have been surprised at Soissons, as they had not time to set fire to the city.

The battle line now crosses the main highway from Fismes southward to Fere-En-Tardenois at Mareuil-En-Dole (four miles northeast of Fere-En-Tardenois and only seven miles from Fismes).

Cavalry and tanks are keeping on the heels of the fleeing enemy, inflicting heavy losses.

The evolution of the battle which is leading to victory happened all within a few hours, the capture of the Hartennes table land starting the retreat.

LONDON, August 3.—The German retreat is general on all three sides of the salient and the Allies are pressing close on the heels of the retiring enemy.

British airmen Thursday destroyed eleven German machines in an aerial fight and drove down three others according to the official statement on aerial operations issued last night. Twenty-four tons of bombs were dropped on military targets. In a raid on an airdrome six hangers and sixteen machines were set on fire.

British patrols last night pushed their way forward in Albert north of the Somme and occupied part of the German front line, the War Office announces.

Boat Torpedoed.

Despatches from an east port of Maine say that a crew of nine men of a lumber-laden four-masted schooner were landed at Grand Manan, N.B., to-day. The men reported their boat was sunk by a submarine last night while below Brier Island.

OVERLANDS NEW LIGHT CAR TO BE SHOWN AT THE TORONTO FAIR

The Willys Overland Co., announce that they will show at the Canadian National Exhibton, the new ligh car, to sell approximately at the price of a Ford.

This car is called the Wonder car, and visitors to the Fair should inspect this car, as it has created a great deal of favourable comment in the States, where it was shown at the New York and Chicago Shows.

IN TARTAN DRESS

Have you seen Scotland Woolen Mills Coy's new tartan store front, designed after the clan tartan plaid pattern in read and black squares? The effect is quite striking and appropriate as well and in keeping with its popular business name. Some good advice is tendered to the men in the Scotland Woolen Mills Coy advertisement in to-day's issue. Look for it with the black and white border. Not only are the prices of woolen materials high, but in somecases it is almost impossible to obtain some fabrics. It is estimated that over 80 per cent of the looms of this country are now being operated for government needs. The wisdom of booking orders now for fall and winter garments are set forth in Scotland Woolen Mills Coy's advt.

REMEMBRANCE DAY AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

In connection with the official call and general usage, to-morrow will be kept as "Remembrance Day" at S. John's. The subject of Canon David on's address will be "A Grateful Remembrance of Mercies and of Men."'

In the evening, the subject will be "To the End." Returned soldiers and bereaved friends will be especially welcome at these servics.

CHAUTAUQUA IN ONTARIO

After over forty years of successful work throughout the United States, where more than six thousand Chautauquas were held last year, the circuit Chautauqua, which has been called "the great traveling university," comes this year to Ontario. Nearly fifty three-day Chautauquas were held in as many towns of the Province in April and May, and nearly as many more six-day Chautauquas will be held this summer.

It is a community event in which the Dominion Chautauqua joins with the patriotic and public-spirited people of the town in treating its citizens to one of the biggest and best series of entertainments it has ever enjoyed.

Theodore Roosevelt has called Chautauqua "the most American thing in America," and by the same token it will became the most Canadian thing in Canada, for "America" means all America, and the spirit of Chautauqua is the spirit of Democracy. In the western provinces of Canada, it has met with the heartiest welcome, attracting great crowds and engendering wonderful enthusiasm.

We present this detailed program, full of inspiring music and vital and patriotic messages. The various attractions listed herein could not ordinarily be heard for less than $10.00. The single admissions to all of them aggregate $6.75.

Your local committee is offering all of these, to the limit of six hundred tickets, at $2.00 for the entire course. This is a reduction of fifty cents for the regular price of the season ticket, and after these six hundred tickets are sold the price will be advanced to $2.50.

TRYING TO LOCATE INSURANCE OF A PETERBORO SOLDIER

A member of the 1st Contingent, from Peterborough, in 1914, was Pte. P. J. Butler, afterwards of "A" Co., 2nd Batt., and who was killed in action on the first week in April, 1915.

His wife, who is living at No. 25 Smeaton Road, Southfields, S. W., 18, England, has been informed that some insurance was effected by Pte. Butler previous to his going across. She is anxious to find out if such was the case.

This paragraph is inserted in the papers to ask the several insurance agents and companies in this city, if they made any such policy. And if so to advise that fact to the Patriotic Fund office, here, and the statement will be at once communicated to Mrs. Butler.

RETROSPECT OF THE WAR

Has Cost the World 95 Billion Dollars and 31 Milion Casualties — Tide Has Turned Against the German

NOT YET EXHAUSTED

(By W. R. Plewman—War Reviewer for the Toronto Star.)

TORONTO, Aug. 3. — The fourth year of the war closes today after months of the greatest strain for the Allies that they have experienced since the first battle of the Marne, in 1914. The spring campaign opened this year with the enemy possessing the second best opportunity he ever had of gaining victory in the war. Not since the opening of hostilities has he been able to gain first rate successes on more than one front. In 1914 he gained an advantage in the west, but suffered badly in the east. In 1915 he scored great victories in the east but was held in the west. In 1915 he suffered defeats in the west, but won in the southeast thereby completing. The overrunning of Roumania in the southeast. In 1917 the eastern fronts were eliminated by the desertion of Russia with half the allied soldiersy, the Italian armies secured a collosal disaster on the southwestern front and it became probable that the British and French who had gained partial successes in the west during the year, would be fighting for their lives in the early part of the 1918 campaign. It also was evident that the Italian armies would be called upon to go through a severe ordeal after the terrible setback they suffered last fall.

New Confidence Now.

Today, we face the fifth year of war after having turned a very nasty corner. The spring campaign developed into a crisis of the first magnitude, but today mid-summer has been reached in safety, and the situation is wonderfully improved. The Teutons have suffered a severe shock on the Italian front, where, however our friends may be called upon to undergo another trial, and in France the enemy has met with the worst reverse he has experienced since von Kluck's flank was turned almost four years ago. For these reasons, we can look forward confidently to the unrevealed events of the fifth year of the combat. Our chief cause for concern still it the Italian front, although we have no particular reason for apprehension, so far as known facts are concerned, rather to the contrary, but the enemy, appears to have lost the power in the southwest, unless he is prepared to employ 100,000 German troops on that front, which we believe to be probable. The extent to which Germany may draw on Russia for foodstuffs, war materials, and man power is one of the unknown factors that enter into the outlook for the fifth year of the war, but the indications are that matters on the east will go worse instead of better for the enemy, and that the east will harm him rather than help him. The most dangerous development during the coming year promises to be the propaganda of the enemy to persuade the allied peoples to make a peace that represents a German triumph. we believe it will fail, and that the civilized world will firmly adhere to the position that the banditti now ruling Germany can obtain peace only by unconditional surrender.

Enormous Casualties

The price humanity is paying to establish civilization on a new basis is staggering. One authority estimates that the total casualties to date in dead, wounded and prisoners reach 30,000,000 of which the dead number seven million. The total of 30,000,000 is a little under a rough estimate made by the writer of the casualties of the four principal nations on both sides, which works out as follows:

ALLIED CASUALTIES.

Nation—
Britain	2,850,000
France	4,500,000
Italy	900,000
Russia	8,000,000
Total	12,250,000

ENEMY CASUALTIES.

Nation—
Germany	8,500,000
Austria	8,500,000
Turkey	1,100,000
Bulgaria	400,000
Total	15,000,000

The combined Allied and enemy casualties since August 3, 1914, thus total 31,250,000. It will be noticed that these figures show the Allies suffering 1,250,000 more casualties than were inflicted on the enemy, although the losses of Roumania, Ser-

Wrecked City of Soissons Now in Hands of French

Germans Were Driven Out Last Evening After a Hot Fight—Stiff Resistance.

POINTS PENETRATED

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 3.—French troops now hold the wrecked City of Soissons.

General Mangin's poilus swept down the slopes of Montagne De Paris last night and drove the Germans out of the place. Then they resisted the enemy rebound from the hills on the other side.

The attack on the city followed a bombardment, which, after the day's fighting, permitted the French to occupy the place firmly.

The capture of Soissons, however, was only an incident in the advance which stretched around the whole length of the rapidly straightening the salient. The Boches fell back from the lines everywhere, while Allied cavalry at several points penetrated a mile farther. Plessier and Hartennes Woods, where Prussian Guards made the stiffest resistance of any of the enemy forces, are now virtually encircled.

A remarkable feature of the fighting is the manner in which the artillery is being pushed forward with infantry, in spite of the state of the roads.

The Germans, under orders, are pillaging and burning as they retreat. In some instances, whole villages, such as Brouillet (three miles and a half north west of Ville-En-Tardenois) are afire, lighting the northern sky lines and low-hanging clouds with sinister effect.

Are Withstanding.

The Germans are unmistakably withdrawing from the whole pocket. Their generals are skillfully extricating them from the hottest hole into which any Crown Prince ever ordered an obedient army, with, or without, father's blessing.

Horse, foot, airplanes, trucks, ambulances, tanks—they are working their way northward before the avenging French, Americans and British.

Yesterday's Allied accomplishments eliminated the possibility of the Boches making a stand on the high plateau positions stretching across the salient below Fismes. Pressing home the advantage obtained Thursday, when they gained a foothold on the plateau. The German with gun positions sweeping the plain, the French, despite a terrific downpour of rain, pushed relentlessly forward all day.

APPEAL ON BEHALF OF THE SAILORS

(By F. H. Dobbin.)

We make our dates ahead. Here is one that the citizens of Peterboro are asked to remember:

The Navy League of Canada has set apart September 1st to 7th, inclusive, in which to make to the public an appeal on behalf of the Merchant Sailor. Many appeals, most worthy, have been made on behalf of our soldiers, but little has been done for the sailors. Four years the allies have been transporting men and munitions across the ocean. The Hun, realizing this, has spared no efforts to sink our transports, and as often as possible, destroy all evidences of his piracy.

That he has been defeated has been due to the incomparable seaman, who has done his part, at great personal risk and privation. It is felt that when the week of the appeal is on that recognition should be made in a practical sense, and a response such as will bring to the heart of the Merchant Sailor and his brother of the Navy, comfort and relief.

So prepare for a part to do when the campaign is announced. Meetings will be held, personal appeals will be made, all the publicity that can be had, will be utilized.

This announcement is just as a first breeze, and we want it to be borne in mind. Remember—September 1 to 7, and you are urged to do your part.

The Germans Are Retiring

Americans Continue to Advance Along Centre of the Soissons-Rheims Salient.

(By Fred S. Ferguson—United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 3.—The Americans continue to advance all along the centre of the Soissons-Rheims salient.

Cohan and other towns and villages in that region are now in our hands.

Heavily destructive artillery fire is combing the roads over which the Germans are retiring. The Boches continue to blow up ammunition dumps and burn materials as they retreat.

Cohan, six miles east and slightly north of Couloungres, the last village officially announced as captured in that district.

LARGE NUMBER ATTEND DANCE AT CHEMONG PARK

Nearly Fifty Dollars Realized for Prisoners of War Fund

Undismayed by the chilly atmosphere last evening, a large number of the young people motored to Chemong to attend the regular Friday evening dance given by the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. in aid of the prisoners of war fund, at the Chemong Park pavilion. About forty-five cars in all went out and $49.25 was realized. The music was supplied by Moher and Fitzgerald and this feature proved such an attraction the Chapter has decided to have the same music each week. With Mrs. J. G. Campazzi as chaperone those who attended were Miss Esme Aylmer Miss G. Mulholland, Mr. Gordon Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Killaly, Mrs. Fordyce Strickland, Lieut. Dick Sheehy, Mr. and Mrs. Dearle, Mr. Kerr, Miss H. Stapleton, the Misses McCarthy, Mr. Herb Rush, Mr. Breckenridge, Mr. Kyle Harstone, Lieut. Beaufort Belcher, Mr. and Mrs. Coons, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Nicholls, Cadet Hal Crane, Miss Merle Henderson, Mr. Lennox MacLaren, Miss Merrill, Miss Phyllis Dawson, Miss Hazel Eaton, Mrs. R. Hunter, Mrs. Alex. Spence, Miss Jessie Spence, Mr. J. G. Campazzi, Dr. and Mrs. Court King and Miss M. Cottingham. A number of the cottagers from the park also joined the young people and contributed liberally.

THE WEATHER

There was a decidedly cool feeling in the air this morning, notwithstanding that this is the 3rd of August. The thermometer was down to 42 degrees, and though no frost was noticed, such a condition was quite possible in localities conducive to it. Different people have been heard remarking how cool the mornings are this summer. Perhaps they have forgotten that they are abroad one hour earlier in the morning than has heretofore been their custom, owing to Daylight Saving.—W.P.

RESTAURANTS WRECKED

Stormy Scenes in Toronto Last Evening—Many Arrests Made.

REASONS ADVANCED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 3. — The Police Commissioners and the Great War Vetetrans' Association are each in session to-day, discussing last night's raids by returned soldiers and civilians on restaurants and shops in Toronoto. The police have made 16 arrests and hold two automobiles. The police of No. 1 station have 15 persons in the cells charged with disorderly conduct. The police at No. 7 station have one civilian charged with theft from a raided restaurant. Other police stations have none.

"Between the Telegram and the getting of jobs at Ottawa for the most undesirable class of men in the Association, you have the condition of affairs which we object to and which has brought about the lack of discipline which is responsible for such outrages as that of last night, which I shall bring up at the convention to-day," said Col. Pidgeon of Ottawa to the Star "I shall use every deavour to have the Dominion Association take steps to proceed against the men responsible for that outrage."

Places Destroyed.

Fourteen restaurants, a butcher shop and dance hall were wrecked by returned soldiers last night. The riot lasted four hours.

The crowd and two hundred soldiers and one thousand sympathizers spent last night raiding restaurants and other places kept by Greeks and other foreigners, a dozen or more of these places on Yong street, even north of Bloor on Queen street to the western end, and on Bloor street, were completely smashed up. The pretext for the outrage was a reported assault upon returned men at the White City cafe on Yonge street near Carleton, on Thursday night.

Places Wrecked.

A partial list of damaged restaurants follow:

$350 GRANT TO 57TH REGT. BAND

And $150 to Salvation Army Band, Finance Committee's Division

The city's appropriation of $500 for the somewhat indefinitely designated purpose of music was apportioned by the Finance committee last night, the 57th Regimental band receiving $350 and the Salvation Army band $150.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the money be divided equally between the two organizations.

Ald. Dobbin moved an amendment, seconded by Mayor Duncan, that the division be $350 and $150.

Ald. Weir refused to vote, and when pressed for a reason, said that he would not give the Salvation Army band any part of the grant.

Ald. Taylor broke the tie by voting with the amendment.

SAILORS' WEEK.

Although the calls on public generosity have been frequent and heavy, the people of Ontario will undoubtedly cheerfully answer the appeal that is to be made next month for one million dollars for King George's fund for sailors. The week commencing September 8th will be known as Sailors' Week, and will be devoted to a campaign under the auspices of the Ontario Provincial Committee of the Navy League to raise the objective decided upon by the committee. The cause for which assistance is being asked should meet with a ready and hearty response. The British Mercantile Marine's record in the present war has been marked by a sturdy heroism and an indifference to danger that have rendered the German U-boat policy a failure. Despite the fact that 15,000 members of the Mercantile Marine have lost their lives since the war began their brave comrades are still carrying on. For the dependents of the merchant sailors who have made the supreme sacrifice the only hope of assistance lies in the Navy League Fund, which provides for help for all such cases as well as furnishing better housing for Jack when ashore, and homes for the sailors in their old age.

Our sailors have earned the deepest gratitude of every citizen of the British Empire and the forthcoming campaign should be enthusiastically supported.

THE PREMIER'S TOUR.

Toronto Saturday Night adds its voice to the general demand from the press throughout Canada that Premier Borden wind up his English tour and hurry home to Ottawa. Saturday Night is more vigorous than many of the other journals in its view of the situation, as the following extract will show:

One may well pause and consider what would have happened in England, in France or in the United States at the present juncture if the Ministers in charge of the public's affairs in those lands had displayed either the indifference or the inability to master the situations as they arise that our Ministers have shown since Union Government took hold. Indecision, timidity and inaction has been the corner stone of Union Government up to this juncture. What its future will be is in the lap of the gods. When great and grave questions of public moment have arisen in the allied countries the crisis has been met promptly and expeditiously. With us we do not meet it. We just sidestep. Pass it on. Our Ministers did this in respect to the stultifying of the Military Service Act by habeas corpus proceedings. They are doing it as this is being written by stupid blundering which has disorganized and practically put out of business the entire postal organization of the country. At a period when the labour of the country should have been well organized and well led, we find our Department of Labour floundering about out of its depth.

The best we can say for our Federal Cabinet is that it is about the finest little crowd of entertainers and eaters that we have ever experienced. Food, entertainment and foreign tours are their specialty. What matters it if our Ministers left an assortment of half-baked legislation on the Statute books, or failed to keep their word with the post-office employees, so long as they can sit close to England's and France's great men and hear the trickle of soft words? What boots it if we freeze to death next winter owing to the lack of foresight in not making the fuel question a matter of national importance, so long as our Ministers can be paraded before King George, like live stock at the fall fair?

One is given to wondering what would have happened in the United States if President Wilson had followed Borden's example. Suppose for a moment he had closed up the Capitol and shut up the White House, and started off to tour Europe, there to pick up little grains of comfort in the way of sweet nothings poured into his ears. Well, if he had, there is one thing certain, the United States would not have been into the war with both feet as is now the case. And by the same token, if Lloyd George had admired himself to the extent of spending all his time in Paris, being gazed on and applauded by the populace, in place of staying on the job in London, it is fair to predict that England would have found a new Prime Minister somewhere, difficult as the task may seem.

This country is getting restive under the present administration. The people who voted Union Government into office looked for leadership. In place of which Parliament is closed off with its work half done, and our Cabinet Ministers flee the country, leaving the administration in the hands of a few, mostly has-beens, and incapable of properly administrating their own department, not to speak of taking on the work of various others. Government by order-in-council has become a menace. Sir Robert Borden should return to Canada at once. Parliament should be convened and the business of the country proceeded with. It is not at all necessary that we should stick in our oar at Cabinet Councils in London at this time. That will be all very well when peace terms are being discussed, but that time, from present appearances, is a long way off.

If it is really necessary for us to have Cabinet representation in London at this time, let us appoint some specially for the purpose. Let us choose them on the basis of looks and entertaining ability. Pick out some that can sing a song or do a vaudeville stunt, and really give the British public something for their money. For instance, we might appoint Charlie Chaplin Minister of Entertainment and send him over. In the interval let them all come home and carry on.

THE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY.

To-morow, August 4th, is the fourth anniversary of the declaration of war by Great Britain upon Germany and of the entrance of Canada into the world struggle. The four years that have intervened since the momentous fourth of August, 1914, have been the most important in Canada's history, and on the eve of the anniversary it is well to reflect upon what has been accomplished, and to realize what Canada has achieved since the world war was convulsed by the beginning of the gigantic conflict between the forces of militarism and democracy.

The outbreak of the war found Canada practically without an army. A permanent force, numbering only some 3,000 men, and a militia force whose training was sketchy to say the least. And yet the fourth anniversary of the war finds the Dominion with nearly 150,000 troops in France and with many reserves in England and in Canada; it finds the Canadian soldier, renowned through the world as a fighting man of the finest type. The first contingent, mobilized at Valcartier and rushed overseas in the autumn of 1915, has grown to a formidable army corps, the 2nd Battle of Ypres, Givenchy, Festubert, St. Eloi, Zillibeke, Courcelette, Regina Trench, Vimy Ridge, Hill 70 and Passchendeale are engagements that have proved to the Hun that the sturdy lads from Britain's greatest overseas Dominion are adversaries to be feared and respected.

It is an interesting commentary on Canada's share in the war that the enlistments of all sorts in the Canadian Expeditionary Force from the beginning of hostilities to the end of June of this year totalled 552,601. Of this number over 400,000 have gone overseas, and a large force of other troops are in Canada ready to sail. In 1914 30,999 went overseas, the following year saw 84,334 sail from Canada; in 1915 no fewer than 165,553 Canadians crossed the Atlantic; 63,536 followed them last year, and in the first six months of the present year 39,101 soldiers left these shores.

A sadder but more eloquent testimony to Canadian sacrifice is told in the official casualty lists, the total casualties in the Expeditionary Force to the end of June totalling 159,084, made up as follows:

Killed in action	27,040
Died of wounds	9,289
Wounded	113,007
Died of disease	2,259
Prisoners of war	2,774
Presumed dead	4,342
	159,084

Of the wounded and sick between 30,000 and 40,000 returned to France for further service. Between 50,000 and 60,000 have been returned to Canada, wounded, medically unfit, or otherwise unavailable.

By periods the casualties were:

From beginning to 31st December, 1915	14,495
Calendar Year, 1916	56,536
1st January to 30th June, 1918.	14,043

In addition to the enlistments in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, Canada is well represented in the allied cause, notably in the Royal Air Force, in which there is a remarkably large number of Canadians. Many Canadians have enlisted in the Navy, the Universities of Canada have furnished many officers for the Imperial Army, Royal Military College alone contributing 152 officers, while 2,000 Canadian nurses, several hundreds of doctors and veterinarians, and hundreds of motor drivers have been supplied for the Imperial Army.

In the manufacture of war supplies, Canada has taken a part that is comparable to her military effort. The value of orders placed by the British Government through the Imperial Munition Boards for the production of munitions, ships, aeroplanes, etc., amounts to the enormous sum of $1,160,000,000. Actual cash disbursements have exceeded $950,000,000; 950 manufacturers received contracts; 400 manufacturers are now in active contract relations with the Board. These contracts extend from St. John's, Nfld., in the East, to Victoria, B.C., in the West, and were placed in every Province of the Dominion with the exception of Prince Edward Island.

Upwards of 56,000,000 shells have been produced; 60,000,000 copper bands; 45,000,000 cartridge cases; 28,000,000 fuses; 70,000,000 lbs. of powder; 50,000,000 lbs. of high explosives; 90 ships built, or under construction, aggregating 375,000 tons; 2,700 aeroplanes have been produced.

An official report from the British War Cabinet pays the following tribute to Canada's munition making concerns:

"Canada's contribution during the last year has been very striking. Fifteen per cent. of the total expenditure of the Ministry of Munitions in the last six months of the year was incurred in that country. She has manufactured nearly every type of shell from the 18 pounder to the 9.2. In the case of the 18 pounder no less than 55 per cent. of the output of shrapnel shells in the last six months came from Canada, and most of these were complete rounds of ammunition which went direct to France. Canada also contributed 42 per cent. of the total 4.5 shells; 27 per cent. of the 6 inch shells; 20 per cent. of the 60 pounder H. E. shells; 15 per cent. of the 8-inch and 16 per cent. of the 9.2 inch. perial Munition Boards ninety ships, aggre gating 375,000 tons, have been In addition, Canada has supplied shell forgings, ammunition components, propellants, acetone, T. N. T., aluminum, nickel matte, aeroplane parts, agricultural machinery and timber, besides quantities of railway materials, including no less than 450 miles of rails torn up from Canadian railways which were shipped direct to France."

In helping to feed the people of the Mother country and the overseas allies, the Dominion has made a gratifying showing. Compared with prewar figures, Canada's net shipments of beef have been increased by nearly 75,000,000 pounds, while exports of pork products have been 125,000,000 pounds greater. Exports of butter have likewise increased by 11,000,000 to 12,000,000 million pounds.

Canada is beginning to hit her stride in ship-building. Through the Imperial Munitions Board ninety ships, aggregating 375,000 tons, have been built or are building for the British government, and when these are out of the way the ship yards are to be commandeered for building Canadian ships. $40,000,000 is now invested in Canadian ship-building plants.

In voluntary giving, the people of Canada have established a magnificent record, contributing over $90,000,000 for various patriotic objects. Here are some of the figures:

Canadian Patriotic Fund (to June 30, 1918, $40,149,097; Manitoba Patriotic Fund (to March 31, 1918), $3,057,042; Canadian Red Cross Society (to June 30, 1918), contributions in cash, $5,700,000; gifts in supplies (estimated), $13,000,000; British Red Cross Society (to Dec. 31, 1917), $6,100,000; Belgian Relief Fund (to June, 1918), contributions in cash, $1,571,728; gifts in supplies (estimated), $1,507,855; contributions from Canada to Y. M. C. Governments to Government of Great A. for military service, $4,574,821; gifts from Dominion and Provincial Britain, $5,469,319. To the above should be added miscellaneous gifts from various sources for many objects. This may be conservatively estimated at $3,000,000.

Canada may well be excused for feeling gratified at such achievements as these, on the fourth anniversary of the declaration of war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

To the many nationalities already under General Foch's command will shortly be added the Cuban contingent.

The reports of the air fighting during the past month indicate the ever-increasing efficiency and effectiveness of the British Royal Air Force.

The doubling of special taxes on luxuries will affect the pocket of the American people, but will not detract their attention from the important events in the Marne pocket.

Cruise of Traumerei II.
From Toronto to Trenton Through New Trent Canal

(By J. W. COMMEFORD)

Traumerei II., a 45 ft. x 10 ft. bridge deck cruiser, is arranged for one-man control from the bridge deck. The 4-cylinder, heavy duty 7 x 7 engine is self-starting, and separate 12-volt dynamo for charging the storage batteries for starting and lighting. The stateroom is forward, with 6 ft. headroom, and with a double and single berth, with plenty of drawers and lockers. The engine under the bridge deck with plenty of all around, and 4 ft. headroom. Aft the engine there is 6 ft. headroom throughout the galley, and washroom has running water and sink, and a large ice box, with plenty of lockers for pots and pans. The main saloon is 10 x 9 x 6, and fitted with two buffets and drop windows. The pit large enough to seat ten persons, is self-bailing. The gasoline is contained in two 60-gallon boilers, one under each seat, and separately fed to the carburetor. Separate awnings for bridge deck and pit. Boat davits and 12 ft. dinghy.

THE CRUISE.

Having obtained the information from the newspapers that the Trent Canal had been officially opened and was now ready for traffic as far as Lake Simcoe from Trenton, the skipper wrote the Marine Department at Ottawa, of his intentions to cruise through it, and asked for a chart, which was duly received. And armed with plenty of provisions and 120 gallons of gasoline, cast off at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 6, 1918, and headed east for Presqu'isle Light—95 miles east—arriving off the light at 11.40 p.m.

On entering Brighton Bay it is necessary to give Presqu-isle Light a good berth, and steer for the blinker buoy in the centre of the channel. Then keep the two bay lights in range until you get fairly close to the first light, then leaving it to port, steer for the east light, on the way to the Murray Canal, leaving the light close to port, and right on to the bridge lights in the canal. Two blows from the horn lets you through the first swing, which is to the south of the span. The next bridge is the canal toll office, where you must stop and make out the necessary papers. There is no fee to pay, but it is advisable to get a few extra canal papers for use in other canals, and on your way back have the papers made out and tied to something heavy and toss it on shore to save having to stop again. There are two more bridges before entering the Bay of Quinte. The harbour is well buoyed and a few miles brings you to Trenton, the commencement of the Trent Canal trip.

As regular lock and bridge keepers have not yet been appointed for the lower end of the canal, it is necessary to phone the engineer at the power house, and he will after some few hours delay, let you through the Trenton Road bridge. We started through at 3 p.m., Monday. You must then wait for him to close the bridge, and he will ride up with you a quarter of a mile to the C. N. R. railway bridge, where it takes time to locate six or seven men necessary to operate the swing. Another quarter of a mile and you pass under the C.P.R. bridge, and half a mile further you must go through a pontoon brige and enter the first lock. Here you are met by three or four lockmen, who have been telephoned for to meet you there, and they generally have to come from Frankford, some few miles further up; and after locking through, and until the regulars have been appointed, these men come aboard, and go up through the five different locks with you as far as Frankford. These locks are about a mile apart. There is a road swing bridge at Frankford. Above this bridge on the way back, great care must be taken, for if you have to stop for the bridge, as we did for several hours, hunting up the bridgeman, there are no posts or other devices to tie up to, and the cement sides of the canal run up out of the water at an angle of 45 degrees; thus bumpers are of no use, and the propellor is sure to strike if you try to make a landing. The engineer's house, which is the canal office, is built on the canal bank and the rear portion extends into the canal about ten feet, and if, as we found, the engineer is not home, you will be told very abruptly that he is out, and don't know where, and you will have to wait until he returns, no matter what your hurry. Besides, as before said, there is no place to land or tie to. It is six miles further up to lock 7, Glen Morris, and at the head a road swing bridge, and 200 feet further a swing railroad bridge, which takes four men to operate. Here you must wait until they can be procured after which it takes about a half hour to open. From this up there is a stretch of 11 miles to Lock 8 (our first stop for the night). Always keep the red buoys to starboard, and black or white to port going up. It is well buoyed all the way, some of which are in square cement piers. At Lock 8 you are met by another section of lockmen, who take you up to Healey's Falls. Locks 8, 9, 10, about a mile apart, are passed in succession. Then a double lock, No. 11 and 12, above which is a swing bridge. Then a mile further a lift railway bridge and enter Campbellford. Gasoline can be obtained at a garage, which backs up on the right hand side of the canal, 100 feet from the Campbellford road bridge, which is also a lift. One mile after leaving Campbelford locks Nos. 13 and 14 are passed, and enter Crow Bay, where there is fair fishing. Then enter lock 15, and 200 yards further on a double lock, 16 and 17, each of about 20-foot raise. This is Healey's Falls. Above is a road swing bridge. A nice run is had from here to a place called Trent River, and two bridges, from here there is another nice run of 15 miles, all turns and twists, but well buoyed up to Hastings, where Lock 18 and a road bridge are close together. For the first time you are met by a regular lockman, who also operates the road bridge; but you must apply the help to operate both the lock and the bridge. A hundred yards further a swing railroad bridge. After this the run is well buoyed and takes you into Rice Lake, where the course is up the centre of the lake, leaving Margaret Island to port, and going between it and Ames Island, leaving it to starboard, then one and a quarter miles and leave Grape Island to port, one more mile and leave Rock Island to port, two more miles and Long Point Island to starboard, one and a half miles and Potash Island to starboard. The lake is wide and open after this, but there is a submerged pier right across the lake, and the only safe passage is buoyed. Leave red buoy to starboard and white to port, and steer straight on until you pick up a small white lighthouse near the north shore. Leave it on the port side, and close by, and into a narrow, weedy entrance, but lots of water in the centre, and after just getting through, turn abruptly to the starboard, and up the Otonabee River (21 miles to Peterboro.) A short distance up is a light and two buoys. Leave them all on your port side, and continue on, and about a mile up the channel divides. Take the starboard channel; the other has a blind end. From thir on all is clear and winding, with only two road swing bridges between the entrance to near Peterborough. (Our second night we spent above the first bridge in river.) Nearing Peterboro you enter a lock, and 25 yards further a swing road bridge. After this you are free to the city dock half a mile to port, or straight into a lock. Then a 100 yards a swing road bridge and close to it a swing railroad bridge, and 100 yards more you enter the great Peterboro lift lock. (Note—Boats under five tons cannot be put through this lift lock after 2 p.m., Papers must be signed at the office in the tower. (Then nine miles to Lakefield.) One mile further up there is a bridge to pass under. (Note—If your military mast extends more than 20 feet from the water, it must be removed to pass under, and keep it down, as there is another like it further up.) After this the waterway is wide, but the navigable channel is narrow and fringed with weeds. Then through a railroad swing bridge and close to it a swing road bridge. (Note—Go slow here and sound your horn or whistle loudly as the bridge tender lives one quarter of a mile to port, and it takes some time.) Then through five locks, each about a mile apart. Then under the bridge above referred to, where your mast height is limited, and then into Lakefield, where we spent our third night. Leaving Lakefield the course is well buoyed, and Young's Point lock and bridge is the last before entering Clear Lake. Here the real part of the cruise commences and the most hazardous, as the lake is full of rocks, near to the surface. The Traumerei II. was making 11½ miles per hour, when all of a sudden she lifted up forward and suddenly keeled over until the deck was awash (and Traumerei II. has at least three-foot freeboard), then slid sideways and righted without touching the propellor or rudder. We had gone right over a "dead head," a sunken log, only about 18 inches under the water. After leaving Young's Point and entering Clear Lake, leave two piers to starboard and right on up the centre of the lake. It is nine miles to Burleigh Falls—but, oh what rocks and channels? There is a short route through the left channel but the larger to the right is the safest. The first channel buoy is red, and for the first time red buoys must be left to port instead of starboard. You must keep this change in mind from now on. Another red and white buoy to pass between three quarters of a mile further, and a white to starboard. One mile further from now on numerous islands and rocks are met, and it is two and a half miles to the next red buoy. Leave it to port—the reason being that this is the dividing channel before mentioned; and the large island on your starboard close to starboard, and between it and a smaller island and after leaving this island and turn to port, and follow around Juniper Island on your port, leaving three white buoys, one mile apart, on your starboard, and at the head of Juniper Island on your starboard is an island; leave it to starboard, and bear to port past three islands, leaving them to port, and go between the next two islands ahead, and around the larger of the two, leaving it to port, and passing between it and another island at its head, turn slightly to starboard and on to a white buoy one and a half miles up. Then follow the main shore around Hurricane Point, passing between a red buoy and a large island. Then between two small islands, and a quarter of a mile further is a white buoy, and three quarters of a mile a red buoy. Continue up the centre of the channel and pass between the main shore and two large and one small island, leaving them to starboard. After leaving the last and smaller island, leave a large island one half mile away to starboard and pass around the red buoy to the locks at Burleigh Falls. Then a swing bridge. It is seven miles to Buckhorn. The course here to Lovesick lock is between islands and is well buoyed; but after clearing the lock bear to port, and be sure to leave the white buoy to port, as the buoys again change in Lovesick Lake, and a shoal of submerged rocks are between this buoy and the shore. Pass between the next red and white buoy one half mile farther, and leave the next white buoy to port and gradually shape your course to starboard, and straight on up the main shore on your port, leaving the next five islands to starboard. Opposite the last of the five, between a red and white buoy, and bear towards the starboard shore, passing a white buoy one half mile, and continue on up the shore between it and two square cement piers, and the next cement pier to starboard, and on to Buckhorn lock and bridge into Buckhorn Lake. (It is sixteen and a half miles from here to Bobcaygeon.) The first three and a half miles is well buoyed. Red to starboard and white to port, and brings you to a point of and on your starboard called Scotchman's Point. Keep this close by, as the weeds to port are bad. After leaving here the course divides, and you have the choice of a trip to Chemong Lake, taking the course to port around the first buoy, and then southerly, leaving three grouped islands to starboard, or continue on up the lake, S. by S. W., into a channel to be found in the weed bed about three-quarters of a mile. After leaving the buoy, follow this channel between Nichols and Harrington Islands, passing three red buoys about one-quarter of a mile apart; after leaving the third to starboard or nearly due west around a weed bed, and between two islands and straight on into Gannon's Narrows, and swing bridge, to Pigeon Lake. Leave Jacob's Island to starboard, and follow around its head, and straight up the lake five miles to the lighthouse, leaving it to starboard, and into the Bobcaygeon lock. From here to Fenelon it is 14½ miles. In leaving the channel go between two cement piers and leave the light to starboard, and then four square cement piers to port, then two red buoys to starboard, and two miles to an island, leaving it to starboard, and continue on up the centre of the channel to Sturgeon Point on the north or starboard shore. Again you have the choice of going to the south past Pleasant Point and down the Scugog River, or continuing up Sturgeon Lake, keeping the shore to starboard until you pick up the lighthouse, and leave it to port and the red buoy to starboard, as there are submerged piers between the buoy and shore. Then into the channel to Fenelon Falls locks, and a swing bridge. Leave the lighthouse to starboard, also a red buoy, and northwesterly across Cameron Lake about three miles, entering between two buoys to a channel one-half mile long—then a lock, and another mile of channel to Rosedale, after which leave the lighthouse to starboard, and bear southwesterly towards Grand Island. The course is well buoyed around the Island between Long Point on the main shore, and leave the next island to port, and on to the channel buoys and lighthouse, leaving it to starboard, and enter the canal. It is five and a half miles from Rosedale to this point, and two miles through the canal to a drawbridge, and nineteen miles to Lake Simcoe, entering Lake Simcoe just above Beaverton. The courses after entering, are west to Barrie, or to Orillia, steer N.W. by N. to Strawberry Island, then N. W. by N. ½ N. and N. E. by N., into Couchiching, then shaping southwesterly into Orillia.

NOTES.

Take lots of stout line, fully 50 ft., for both bow and stern, for the locks. Also many bumpers.

Don't take the colour of the buoys for granted on the return trip, as those that were red on the up trip look white on the way down, because they face down stream and were all originally primed with white, and the current and the ice has rubbed the red off the up stream sides, and they all appear white.

You will need lots of help, plenty of time, and patience, and must not mind your boat being badly scratched in the many locks.

And have your purse open on the lower section on the way back, as regular lockmen and bridgemen have not been appointed from Frankford down, and you are at their mercy, (if they can be found at all) especially as the locks and bridges don't operate on Sunday, and you might get caught up a few locks on a Saturday afternoon. — Canadian Motor Boat.

Cramps and Pains In The Stomach
QUICKLY CURED BY DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY.

Mrs. J. Fawcett, Hopewell Hill, N. B., writes: "I am writing you of my experience with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Last summer I was taken so very sick with cramps and pains across my stomach that I sent for the doctor. He said I had summer complaint and gave me some medicine, but it did me very little good. As I was reading your B. B. B. Almanac, I saw Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry advertised, so I asked my sister to go to the store and get me a bottle, and before I had taken all of it I was a well woman, and have not had the slightest return of the trouble since. I cannot say enough for your valuable medicine, and always keep a bottle in the house."

You run absolutely no risk when you buy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, as it has been a standard remedy on the market for the past 72 years. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting it, as the cheap imitations are dangerous to your health. Price, 35c. Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EXPECTING A BIG U.S. CASUALTY LIST

Possible Soissons-Rheims Battle Will Show 10 P.C. Casualties.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.— The nation must steel itself for the shock of the first great casualty lists, according to officers to-day.

These lists, while not disproportionate to the scope of recent fighting, will be far greater than recent totals and will bring the war home to America as nothing else, these officers point out. American casualties for the entire war to the end of July totalled slightly more than 14,000 so far as announced.

Compared with the French and British, the American losses will be small. Seven divisions and two odd regiments are now engaged. Counting replacement units, it is likely that more than 200,000 Americans have been in action.

While casualties normally run only two and three per cent., it is regarded as quite possible that dead, wounded, missing and prisoners in a conflict, so serious as the Soissons-Rheims battle will be ten per cent. or more.

DON'T BE DYSPEPTIC.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

Armies

It is frequently pointed out that no comparison should be made between the Fighting Army at the Front and the Industrial Army at Home, because the former supports National Honour and the latter produces Private Gain.

This is good reasoning and doubtless if we had it to do again we should square the facts with the logic, but---

What we have to do is NOW, always now, and the "NOW" of the matter is---

Private Contractors manufacturing Munitions of War and---

Munitions of War never more urgently needed than at this very minute.

Therefore the obvious duty of the Industrial Army is to loyally back the Fighting Army, and this applies alike to the "Generals" in the office and the "Privates" in the shop.

The Fighting Army CAN'T stop to hold a Court-Martial: The Industrial Army SHOULDN'T stop to hold an arbitration but---it should arbitrate its differences because---

Both Armies have only one enemy---

ALLEGES EXCEPTIONS IN THE ENFORCEMENT OF CITY BY-LAWS

Ald. Edgar Said He Had Been Informed That Some Complaints Laid at Police Station are Lost In Waste Paper Basket.

FIREMAN TOOK A TAXI

By a motion passed at the meeting of the Finance committee last night, Chief Thompson will be asked to provide the Council with a monthly statement of persons holding business licenses who violate any of the city's by-laws or who are charged in court with any offence. This resolution was moved by Ald. Edgar and seconded by Ald. Saunders.

"I have been told that it depends upon who you are whether you are fined or not," Ald. Edgar said. "I have information that the police department refused to prosecute a certain man. The complaint was laid by another party, and a fine of $300 that might have gone to the city went to the Province."

Ald. Edgar alleged that he was told this week that dozens of complaints reported to the Department were simply thrown into the waste paper basket.

"I think the city's by-laws should be strictly enforced. Men convicted of gambling and having liquor on their premises are holding licenses, and the question arises as to whether their licenses should be renewed."

Ald. Edgar explained that he referred to business liceneses. "I'm not sure that this is the proper place to bring up this matter, but we can ask the Chief for a monthly report of any persons holding licenses as to whether anything has been registered against them in the police court, or whether any charges have been laid against them."

"It is a mystery to me," commented Ald. Dobbin, "why, since prohibition came into force that we need more policemen than we did seven years ago."

"I can't understand it," Ald. Weir remarked.

"I don't either," said Ald. Saunders.

Asks For Assistance.

Tax Collector Green informed the committee that he was swamped with work, and asked for a girl assistant whom he could train as a permanent assistant. The tax collectors in Belleville and Kingston have such assistants, and in other places there are similar clerks.

It was suggested that Mr. Green might engage a girl for the busiest months.

"There is no use getting a green girl,' he replied.

"We have a "Green" collector," City Clerk Armstrong punned.

Mr. Green stated that he had lost the service of Mr. Stacey, who had helped him for years, and Mr. Voaden, whom he had recently engaged, is leaving for Port Stanley.

"Let us know by Monday night what an assistant will cost," Mayor Duncan advised.

Hold Up Accounts.

Among the accounts presented was one for $75 for a mast and derrick irons purchased from Gerald Conroy.

Ald. Weir said that he had not been notified of the transaction.

"When I was chairman of the Board of Boards," Mayor Duncan said, "the City Engineer always got an order from me before buying material of that kind."

Fireman Called a Taxi.

Another account was from George Innis for fifty cents. Ald. Dobbin explained that a fireman took a taxicab to a fire on Chamberlen street. Chief Grange refused to certify the item, and Ald. Dobbin accordingly called the Finance committee's attention to it.

"If we pass it, we will encourage the men to use taxis," one of the members remarked.

Mayor Duncan—"Let it stand, and ask Chief Grange for the name of the fireman.

For Lighting Rinks.

The Utilities Commission forwarded a bill amounting to $54, for the lighting of the city's rinks last winter. It was believed that this probably covered the cost of erecting posts and wires, but the committee felt that the Commission should share with the Council the cost of providing the rinks, and Mayor Duncan and Ald. Dobbin will request them to recall this bill and cancel it.

A bill from the Kingan Hardware Company of $10.50 for 42 feet of rope used last winter at the Neill fire was passed. Ald. Dobbin said that he had discovered that this rope was originally loaned for the purpose of closing George and Simcoe streets to general traffic. The bill was rendered the city, and during the summer the rope was used by Street Commissioner Evans to pull up stumps at Inverlea park. "It broke in four places," added Ald. Dobbin.

SALVATION ARMY LASSES WERE JOY OF YANKEE FIGHTERS

With the American Army in France.—There is gloom in a certain regiment of Yankees, and it is not because they haven't had opportunity to whip boches.

The regiment is going to lose what the men consider their most valuable asset, the McIntyre sisters, also known as the Salvation Army girls. The McIntyre sisters, Gladys and Irene, who have made chocolate, doughnuts, pies and sandiwches for the boys of this regiment, sent letters for them, banked money, and who have been "good sisters to every fellow in the regiment," have been transferred to a new post.

The troops holding this part of the line want to adopt the McIntyre sisters permanently—and who wouldn't? When they came in the "goulash kitchens," those wheeled smoking affairs that look so good when a Yank is hungry, were nowhere in sight. The sisters served coffee in no time, and kept it up for three days. They had just 20 minutes notice that a certain large number of cups of coffee was wanted. Being efficient American girls, that was all the time they needed.

"They're good pals, not dolls," is the way the doughboys compare the rugged, lively American sisters with French girls out near the front. When the doughboy comes around, he usually is eager to work, and he's happiest who is given a job dipping doughnuts, cutting wood, or doing anything to help the McIntyre sisters.

These American soldier girls have a dugout handy to sleep in. While they were absent at work one day a shrapnel shell came through the roof and punctured the bed full of holes. There is plenty of excitement in this work, but very little time to get excited.

Food Board Flashes

In days of peace the working people of Belgium were a well-fed people, accustomed to a liberal diet of bread, butter, potatoes, eggs, meat, park, fruit and vegetables.

Now they exist on the ration allowed by the Commission for Belgian Relief. The Germans still allow food that is sent to Belgium to be distributed there in order to save themselves the expense and trouble of feeding their captives.

The effect of the meagre feeding is noticeable among industrial workers. In a workshop in Antwerp where 800 girls are employed in making over clothing sent from America, ten or twelve faint each day. The reason is not far to seek. Their usual breakfast is a cup of torrealine, which is roasted rye used as a substitute for coffee. Of all those workers 90 per cent. have not tasted any meat for a year except the small portion of bacon issued by the Belgian Relief and more often given up to the sick and those engaged in manual labour. When they do get meat—well, it is dog meat at about 75 cents a pound.

This is but one of the reasons why we in Canada are asked to save meat and wheat for export.

"FINISHED MYSTERY."

It Cost Guelph Man $100 For Having Copy.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 3. — George Strasser, who was arrested on July 15 on a charge of having in his possession a copy of The Finished Mystery, one of the text-books published by the International Bible Students' association, and which has been forbidden by the Dominion government to be in the possession of a resident of Canada, was fined $100 and costs. Through his counsel he admitted having the book, but said he had forgotten all about having a copy in his possession.

A Trip on the "Empress"

Affords a Day of Charm, Interets and Cooling Breezes to Peterboro Citizen.

Go from here to Lakefield via G.T. R. and take the steamer "Empress" of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company line, up through some of the Kawartha Lakes' scenic "wonder spots," clear round Stoney Lake, and see if you don't come back much refreshed and satisfied with one day's outing. You're back to town shortly after five o'clock in the evening, satisfied with the seven hours of relaxation from the every day routine of life.

Such has been the experience of many of our townspeople who could only afford to "knock off" for one day, to help to keep up efficiency and keeping the temperature down.

Thanks to the splendid service of the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. such opportunities are available now every day. From the start, the trip up the lakes is exhilarating to the busy citizen about this season. From Lake Katchwanooka to Young's Point, you are introduced to some fine stretches of rural scenery on both shores of the lake, as well as a birds-eye view of the crop prospects as viewed from the steamer's deck. Locking through at Young's Point the steamer glides swiftly into Clear Lake, where the first of the numerous summer cottages are erected of various unique types of architecture, and with charming vistas on either shore. Stoney Lake is soon reached, profuse in its gifts and diverse in its attractions. Few, if any, lakes possess the beauty and scenery here revealed, where Nature seems to have lavished her beauty spots — studded with 800 islands, in rocky picturesque grandeur which the imagination weaves around pre-historic lines.

Interest is enhanced by the numerous landings at summer cottages, and regular calling points, while the "Empress" glides hither and thither all round the lake—up through to Burleigh Falls and back again away on to "Belvediere," or Crow's Landing, at the head of the lake—and down through the breezy channels on the homeward stretch.

Captain Robinson has made a name for himself as an expert wheelsman. As one watches the steamer run in and back away safely from rocky points and risky landings, you cannot fail to admire the hand that steers the craft with such care and skill.

Purser Holland was asked: "How do you find the season's business, so far?" and the reply was: "Well, today's crowd is to fair average up to date." There were about a hundred passengers on board besides quantities of freight and cottagers' supplies, making the accommodation quite comfortable. The season may already be said to be half over, and while it looks as if these war times had a hand in diminishing the tourist travel, there is still a good spell of fine seasonable weather left for our townspeople to take advantage of these splendid cheap summer outings so near their own doors.

SIXTY MILLIONS IN WAGE INCREASES

Labour Will Reap Big Advantage as Result of New Agreements.

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.— The McAdoo award increasing the wages of some 150,000 Canadian railway employes, went into force Friday. At the same time the freight rates increase order became operative. It was estimated by the Railway Commission that the McAdoo award, with schedules, will mean an addition to the wages of the employes of nearly sixty million dollars. The original McAdoo schedule was responsibe for an increase of nearly fifty million dollars. The War Railway Board agreed to accept any amendments made in the United States. Such amendments have recently gone into effect, and they will add ten millions more to the Canadian railways' wage bill.

Awaiting Outcome.

There is considerable interest as to what stand will now be taken by the federated railway shopmen who three weeks ago threatened a general strike. They finally agreed to await the outcome of the negotiations in the United States. They were asking a scale of 75 cents per hour.

The McAdoo amendments announced have granted ther 68 cents per hour. Whether this will be satisfactory remains to be seen.

The order of the Government approving of the increase in rates has a clause providing that if the increase in rates shall more than compensate the roads for increased cost of operation there shall be corresponding decreases in rates. However, there is little likelihood of this occurring. The total income from freights last year of the Canadian railways was only around $215,000,000. A twenty-five per cent. increase would mean an addition of only slightly over forty million dollars.

Germany and Her Cormorants

(By Lieut. C. Vince.)

At one time the cormorant was used in England, as it is still used in China, for catching fish. A ring is put round its neck to prevent it from swallowing the fishes, which are taken from its beak by the fisherman as son as it comes ta the surface. In a short time the bird learns to bring the fishes to its master and afterwards can even be allowed to fish for him on its own account.

Germany is unfortunate with her cormorants. In the Ukraine for example they are failing, partly through their own clumsiness, partly through the astuteness of the fish to catch anything at all; while her Turkish cormorant, so far from being sufficiently trustworthy to fish on its own account. So far, from bringing the fishes to its master, is actually trying to swallow them itself.

The trouble began when the Turkish minister at Berne announced that the "Caucasus question at present forms the central point of Turkey's interest; Turkey desires the complete indepence of all the Caucasian peoples and that Transcaucasia also shall be closely united with the Ottoman Empire."

Such a policy does not suit Germany's aims at all. She is displeased, and Count Reventlow has been expressing her displeasure. She does not want Turkey to fish in these waters. She knows that she can do her own fishing there for herself.

One may say this much in sympathy with Germany that Turkey, though voracious like all cormorants has proved a singularly bad fishing bird. She has caught nothing. She has set to catch the Suez Canal, she was set to catch Egypt, she was set to catch the ports at the north of the Persian Gulf, and in each case she failed.

She has got Batum, Kars and Ardahan in the Caucasus, but they were given to her by Germany who forced them frum Russia under the Brest-Litovsk Treaty; and now, according to Count Reventlow, Turkey desires to push "far beyond their frontiere and aims for instance at taking Tirlis."

Germany must feel Turkey's ingratitude. She throws her a fish from her basket, and Turkey instead of being more ready to go on diying where Germany desires, is all the greedier to fish for herself.

But Turkey, if it is possible, is to be turned back to the troubled waters of Palestine and Mesopotamia. Count Reventlow tries to do it by explaining, very carefully and laboriously to Turkey, what Great Britain in spite of Turkish efforts, has succeeded in doing in the East.

"She has brought the largest part of Arabia under her influence and has a firm hold on Egypt, whilst a railway now connects Cairo with Jerusalem. The recapture of these territories is one of the most essential war aims not only of Turkey but also of Germany."

He goes on to say, with a truth which no one will dispute, that "it cannot serve to facilitate or hasten the attainment of this aim if Turkey were to apply her forces unnecessarily and to such an extent in quite another direction."

He adds, rather diffidently, (for cormorants are touchy birds) "We, however, are inclined to believe that it would be in our Ottoman ally's own interest if, for the present it applied its strength to the restoration of the integrity of Turkish territory."

All this, as Count Reventlow admits, is very evidently in the interests of Germany. But Turkey may doubt if it really is in hers. Why should she go on playing the cormorant for Germany? She has got nothing but trouble from her fishing. Why should she continue to struggle in the dangerous, and as they have been for her, utterly barren waters of the South, when up to the north of her Empire there is fish to be had for the taking?

Turkey appears to have asked that question and answered it. If she has answered it in the way in which Count Reventlow fears, then she has ceased to serve those German ambitions in the East, (those essential war aims) which, however unsuccessfully he has served from the beginning.

She is in fact trying to get the ring off her neck. Germany is unfortunate in her cormorants.

CLERGY QUIET GERMANS.

HELP THE GOVERNMENT TO KEEP DOWN THE DISCONTENT OVER FOOD.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2.—The services of the clergy have been enlisted in various parts of Germany to assist in keeping down the growing popular discontent over food difficulties. In the diocese of Munster, Westphalia, the official "War Food Department" has arranged for special lectures througout the diocese, at which the local priests and clergy will preside and emissaries of the deaprtment will furnish information, instruction and arguments designed to answer complaints regarding food scarcity and against the severity of punishments for small transgressions of the food regulations.

There are also many complaints in the country districts over the intricacy and inadequacy of the food regulations, and these complaints generally reach first of all the ears of the parish clergy. The Rhenish Westphalian Gazette, in an editorial approving the scheme to enlist the assistance of the clergy says:

"The last few months before the harvest will be the most trying time of all. Therefore the Food Department should remain in constant touch with the priests an benefit by their observations among the common people."

PETERBORO SIXTY YEARS AGO

In the year 1833, the project of connecting the waters of Lake Simcoe with those of Ontario by means of a canal passing through Rice Lake and the Bay of Quinte, was generally discussed and received the attention of the government. Mr. N. H. Baird, Civil Engineer, was appointed by His Excellency Sir John Colborne, to make a survey of the waters connecting those two lakes with a view of deciding upon the eligibility of the route for that purpose. He entered upon the work in 1833, and in that year completed the survey of the Trent and Otonabee Rivers. Having received further instructions, he resumed the survey in 1835, and continued it from Peterboro via the Otonabee, and back waters to Lake Simcoe. This report of his surveys was exceedingly favourable. The recapitulation of them, as interesting to-day as at the time it was first made, was as follows:

1,290 Motor Vehicles Were Registered in Peterboro County, Including City, During the Year

Less Than Four Thousand Dollars Would be Returnable to the Townships for Road Making Purposes—The County Road System and Its Advantages.

The following articles relating to the Good Roads system as applied throughout the Province with the exception of Peterboro County, treats with the scheme from a different angle The article which is presented in the form of a communication is written by Mr. W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Public Highways, and addressed to the Peterboro Board of Trade. The article follows:

Reference has been previously made to Motor vehicle revenue, and its relation to road improvement.

Motor car fees were substantially increased in 1916 in order that an income would be obtained for road purposes. Revenue from motor cars is recognized by the Government as a fund to be applied to road improvement. In this respect there is therefore no ground for difference of opinion. This money is the basis of the present exceedingly generous road laws of the Province, under which extensive obligations with respect to County road systems and provincial highways, have been and are being assumed by the Government.

THE REVENUE.

It does not follow, however, that the revenue must be spent within the year in which it is received, nor that it must all be spent during the great war crisis, when public and municipal road expenditure is everywhere being curtailed.

It is estimated that the obligations assumed by the Province under existing legislation relating to County and Provincial roads will, when normal conditions return, fully absorb the revenue from motor vehicles. If experience shows that under normal conditions a greater proportion can be paid by the province, it will no doubt be done, as it is the determination of the Government to encourage road-building; particularly in meeting possible conditions of unemployment following the war. Rather is it a strong evidence of the earnestness of the Government that out of $930,000 received from all motor sources in 1917, in addition to other road expenditures, the sum of $484,000, has been returned to thirty counties for work done in that year, in spite of adverse conditions created by the war; and it is evident that when the larger county expenditures are undertaken after the war, the motor vehicle income will not be in excess of the amount necessary to meet the obligations undertaken by the Government under existing legislation.

PRESENT NEED.

The present need is not that a large expenditure be immediately made, but that the Province and every county be prepared, by proper organization, to play its part in taking up the work at the conclusion of the war. Better roads are not only desirable in themselves, but their construction can be made to perform an important service giving employment, when the army is being disbanded. Efficient organization requires experience, and this experience can be effectively had by each county creating an organization for better maintenance of a system of County Roads until such time as circumstances are favourable to the more extended plan of construction.

It had been occasionally suggested that motor car revenue should be handed back without reserve to the local municipalities. In this case, cities, towns and villages would each claim a porportionate share, and little would be left for the townships.

It has been suggested that revenue should bereturned according to county boundaries. In that case, all the revenue from the City of Toronto would be returned to the County of York, and such adjacent counties as Peel, Halton and Ontario, the roads of which receive a disproportionately large traffic from Toronto, would be very unjustly dealt with.

THE BOUNDARIES.

County boundaries, like all municipal boundaries are purely arbitrary lines, and do not denote traffic interests any more than they limit commercial interests. Motor cars owned in the cities are used on roads throughout the Province.

The wealth of a city is drawn at least from the Province—not from within the county boundaries. And no county has exclusive claim to the motor car revenue from a city within its county boundaries.

In 1917 there were 583 motor vehicles registered from the City of Peterborough, and 607 from the remainder of the towns, villages and townships —a total of 1,290 for the county. Proportionately in the remainder of the Province, not over 380 would be owned in the townships, making an amount less than $4,000 returnable to the townships, without deducting costs of registration, number plates, and general administration of the Motor Vehicles Act.

TOTAL REVENUE.

The total revenue from the city, villages and townships in 1917, would not exceed $14,000; an amount which as indicated in a previous letter, would readily be earned by the county under the County Road System, with little more than present expenditure.

The motor vehicle fees were applied by the Province in order that they may be added to the present or an increased road expenditure. The County Road System is only a reasonable guarantee that this revenue will not be used by enterprising councils in reducing the municipal tax instead of adding it to present expenditure for improving the roads.

Provincial legislation recognizes that even motor car revenue is too small a payment by cities for main county roads; and for county purposes, the "Surburban Road System," explained in a previous letter, has been established.

COUNTY SYSTEM.

The Provincial roads are merely the leading township roads; they are not of less service to township rate-payers because under the control of the county council or provincial authorities. A county system provides for continuity of traffic as well as of expenditure. It is a focusing point for road expenditure. A great deficiency of township management has been that expenditure is not concentrated according to needs of traffic, but is scattered in small amounts in such a way that permanent work is not done. For such reasons as these, Provincial expenditure is made through county, rather than through township organization.

Primary advantages of the assistance offered by the Government, are that motor car revenue from urban municipalities is devoted to leading township roads and through the medium of the county council is united, with the expenditure being made on these roads. This concentration of expenditure and focusing of effort in proportion to traffic is essential if Ontario is ever to have an adequate system of roads such as are necessary to the rural development of the Province.

Provincial legislation is necessarily such as to meet the needs of the Province as a whole. A score of different plans might have been devised, but only one has been adopted. It has been accepted by all but one county in the Province. It is scarcely to be expected that this system, so largely accepted by other counties, will be revolutionized because one county dissents; and dissents without giving the system a fair trial.

PROVINCIAL AID.

The provincial aid now provided is substantial and does not entail any serious financial burden upon local municipalities. The system is working satisfactorily and there is no prospect that it will be materially revised; if greater aid can be given from motor car revenue, it would no doubt be granted by the Province. The counties that have organized will be best equipped by experience to make use of provincial aid.

VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES FOR THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Will Open on September 2nd Under New Management—New Improvements.

Mr. William Dineen, who has been connected with the Strand theatre, of Toronto, has taken over the management of the Grand Opera House, and will open on Labour Day, September 2nd, with vaudeville and pictures. At the present time the interior of the theatre is being redecorated, and new lighting effects and other novelties are being installed. A number of improvements conducive to the comfort of the patrons have been provided for and when completed will give Peterboro one of the finest playhouses in the country. Commencing on the date mentioned above the theatre will be open each afternoon and evening throughout the year, except when the regular road attractions are playing here.

SUPPLIES REFUSED TO MANUFACTURERS

Materials Being Cornered for War Work—Metal Markets.

The Canadian manufacturer who is not working on war orders is not faring well in some cases, and the future has not much in store for him if he has to come to the War Board asking for supplies. True, the situation is not one that has developed over night, but the drift in that direction has been gradual and very persistent for some weeks, until now in some industrial centres it is being quite marked. Only this week one manufacurer in Toronto was informed that his request for pig iron had been turned down by the War Trade Board. His lines are soil pipes, fittings and boilers for stoves. At present his firm has enough material on hand to run for six weeks, but at the expiration of that period he will be out of it if he cannot secure assistance or turn quickly to other lines that will find favour with the War Trade Board.

STEEL TRADE.

There has been a feeling in the steel trade that about this time of year there would be some steel for distribution to the commercial users. It had been thought that after a three months concentration on war work the demands would have been overtaken. Just how far this guess is wide of the mark is shown by figures given out to-day in the United States. It appears that the estimates of the requirements of the war group there for steel for the second half of 1918, will be 20 millions tons of steel while at present the mills are only producing at the rate of about 16 million tons for that period. There seems to be little prospect of bringing production figures must past the point where they now ore. From this it will be seen that there is small chance of commercial users of steel either in Canada or the United States getting any supplies his year.

FORTUNES OF WAR.

The fortunes of war bring many peculiar turns in the market. Only a few weeks ago the talk was about the great quantities of steel rails at Vancouver on order to the Russian government. This week in New York some 200 large machine tools are offered to the trade because they had not been shipped to their Russian orders. And it is also reported that agents from industrial and government quarters in Brazil are in American cities this week asking about the chances of securing machine tools for the manufacture of munitions to the order of Brazil.

The demand for pig iron and scrap is not satisfied in Ontario or any part of the Dominion. At American points it is being cornered for war work absolutely. A survey was recently taken in the United States, as a result of which some 300,000 tons of pig were taken from non-war industries and turned over to firms that were working on essential contracts. — Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News.

Four Things That Will Win The War

WHAT ARE THEY?

THE 16 Circles above can be made to spell out the names of the four chief things that are going to win the war. Our bright loyal Canadian boys and girls can help provide at least one of these things. Every boy and girl should know all of them. Can you tell what words the four magic circles represent?

How to solve it.—Each circle represents a letter of the word called for. The number of dots in the circle represents the position of that letter in the alphabet. For instance: "A" would be represented by a circle with one dot because it is the first letter of the alphabet. "B" would be represented by a circle with two dots because it is the second letter. "C" would be represented by three dots, "D" by four dots and so on. You must correcty count the dots in each circle, figure out the letter represented by its position in the alphabet and when you have them all figured out put them into proper rotation to spell the name wanted. It's not an easy puzzle but if you can solve it correctly you may win this lovely shetland pony or one of the grand Cash prizes above.

THIS WAS SURELY A MYSTIC MAGNET

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 2.—A "carry-on magnet, efficacy guaranteed," was advertised recently in German newspapers by its "inventor." The magnet was declared to have mystic powers, enabling its possessor more easily to endure the food privations of the country.

The price was 300 marks, and the buyer was privileged to inspect the magnet before paying. Those who sent in orders received a package bearing the inscription: "Contents: one carry-on magnet."

It is not on record that anyone refused to pay for it, for the "magnet" proved to be ten pounds of Thurington bacon. The ingenious "inventor" now is being sought by the police.

NEW U.S. TAX BILL CAUSES DISSENSION

Some Say it is Too Drastic—Others Not Drastic Enough.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—That the Ways and Means Committee may be carrying the idea of taxation so far as to cause serious difficulty in the economic organization of the country is the belief of not a few public men of the conservation persuasion who are watching the work of farming the new tax bill.

They believe not only that the work of the committee will result in very heavy burdens on industry, but that if continued at its present pace, it will operate to curtail consumption of commodities, and will thus bring about business trouble.

The reply is that while this reduction of consumption may be very desirable, it will not produce revenue, and so will leave the Government without the immediate wherewithal to pay its debts.

It is a singular fact that while a considerable group of observers is worrying over the extreme character of the bill, as set forth from day to day in these despatches, there is another large group which takes the view that the measure does not go far enough, and that to make it what it should be it will have to be rewritten in the Senate with a view to making it provide a real war profits tax.

A group of Radicals in the Senate has apparently pledged itself to the endeavor to make the Bill much more far-reaching and drastic than the shape in which it is now being developed. How far they will succeed in playing the old game of really making the provisions of new legislation in the upper Chamber, notwithstanding that the Constitution provides for the preparation of revenue legislation in the Lower House remains to be seen. Meantime, it is certain that preparations with that end in view are in progress.

MIGHT OF AMERICA WILL CRUSH GERMANY SAYS DUTCH WRITER.

Amsterdam, August 2. — Returning here from a trip to France, a correspondent of the Handelsblad writes a long article of enthusiastic admiration for American achievements, and concludes:

"From America issues a force against which no European nation can stand. It is a gigantic force, which is developing calmly and scientifically.

"The German people are told that the U-boats will be able to conjure the American danger, but the German people have not seen what I have seen."

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

This is the season when she who would have a lily-white complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discoloured, withered or coarsened scarf skin, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity.

An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off morning, will gradually improve even the worst complexion. There is nothing better for the removal of tan, freckles or blotches.

Wringing Hands Recently But Ring Bells To-day

Walpole's Famous Phrase Reversed is Employed to Describe Change Wrought in Few Weeks.

A VILLAGE OF THE DEAD

PARIS, August 3.—Allied troops celebrated the fourth anniversary of the war by a vigorous resumption of the offensive to the surprise of a great many who had believed the battle had entered into one of its periodical lulls.

Incidentally the official statement on the total of prisoners—more than 33,000—brings out forcibly the extraordinary change in the situation a short month has effected. On the first of July, the Allies, to reverse Walpole's famous phrase, were almost wringing their hands; now they would be justified in ringing bells.

The ground won yesterday north of the Ourcq has considerable value. It is a long spur about 600 feet high, forming the watershed between the Crise and the Ourcq and is a valuable observation point. From it the Germans prevented the Allies from seeing the Crise, while they overlooked the ground won from them on the Ourcq. The Allies stormed not only the summit, but the northern slopes of this terrain.

As a consequence, they can now manoeuvre safely in the Ourcq region. In addition, they have a view behind the great Hartennes plateau, where the enemy still clings along the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road, and that strong position, difficult of attack frontally, can now be turned from the north through Villemontoire and from the south by way of Hill 205.

The Allies also gained an important advantage on the left in the capture of Meuniere Wood by the Americans giving them a position which, according to Henri Bidou, is the keystone of the whole German line in the centre.

CIERGES, A "VILLAGE OF DEAD," IS SHUNNED BY BOTH SIDES

LONDON, August 3.—The tide of battle on the American front drifted somewhat eastward on Wednesday, all the most severe fighting occurring in the vicinity of the village of Cierges, which is some two miles southeast of Sergy, says Reuter's correspondent on the American front, telegraphing Thursday evening.

"Cierges," continues the correspondent, "has for some days been a stumbling block to our advance, and it is noteworthy that it and the Meuniere wood formed strong centres of opposition during the first German retreat from the Marne, the havoc wrought during the two retreats being curiously intermingled. One stately chateau, whose towers have been freshly damaged by German shells, has in the banquetting hall big bushes of elderberries which evidently had seeded there when the roof was blown off in 1914.

"Cierges itself is unoccupied by either side, neither having any wish to be in there, for the village is in a deep cup in which the gas lies ten feet deep. So it remains, and so it will remain while the still summer weather lasts, a village of the dead, of dead cats, rats and mice, with all the herbs and flowers that had blessed it burnt and blighted.

"Meanwhile the battle circles about it on the surrounding hills, the Americans fighting towards it up the Ourcq valley and over the high ground north of Roncheres, and down from the hills near Sergy, while the Germans, after filling the village with gas, illustrated from the crests to the north and the east what could be accomplished in a deterrent way with machine gun fire."

Davidson of Peterboro had for its object the subetitution of "O Canada" for the National anthem. Rev. Mr. Davidson who returned home last evening expressed surprise at such a statement and said it was totally unfounded. The resolution which was unanimously adopted provides for the singing of "O Canada" before the National anthem at the end of all meetings of the Great War Veterans.

COAL MEN BALK AT PROPOSAL OF FUEL COMMISSIONER

Called together by Fuel Commissioner Edgar last night, the retail fuel dealers were unanimous in their objections to any change in the fuel regulations other than those which become effective on October 1st. The dealers present were Messrs. Hicks, Wedlock, Low, Weir and McCarthy, and Campbell, representing the Trades and Labour Council.

Mr. Hicks reported that the dealers had held a meeting since last Monday night, when Ald. Edgar recommended to them the twenty-five per cent. deliveries that have been adopted in some cities of Ontario. After fully considering the situation ,the dealers concluded that it would be unwise to make the change now, anticipating by only two months the changes demanded by the Fuel Controller's Act.

Resigns on Monday.

Ald. Edgar stated this morning that at the regular meeting of the Council on Monday night, he would tender his resignation as Fuel Commissioner, following City Clerk, Armstrong's recent discovery that a member of a Municipal Council cannot legally be appointed to any of its commissions.

Ald. Edgar has prepared a full report of the Monday meeting and also of last night's conference for the guidance of his successor. In view of his resignation he felt that the wisest course to pursue would be to avoid recommendations to the next commissioner, who can judge the facts for himself. However, it is understood that Ald. Edgar was contemplating a strict enforcement of the clause that authorizes him to demand a general distribution of twenty-five per cent. of the needs of all the citizens before second deliveries are made.

In resigning, Ald. Edgar vacates the post just when he was becoming acclimatized and useful. Certainly, he never deserved the abuse which members of the Trades and Labour Council recklessly heaped upon him in the first days of his incumbency, when they demanded that he exercise powers with which the Fuel Controller neglected to equip him. It is understood that a commission of three will probably be appointed to succeed him

Y.M.C.A. Unites in Prayer For Victory and Peace on Anniversary

A telegram has been received by the local Y.M.C.A. from C. W. Bishop, National Secretary, as follows: Have received cable signed Lord Kinnaird, Sir Arthur Yapp, Col. Birks, inviting Canadian Association on behalf of English National Council to unite on anniversary of war in prayer for victory and peace. Great united meetings being arranged in England. Canadian National Council urges response to fullest extent possible. C. W. Bishop.

Special Services.

Owing to the fact that practically all the churches are arranging for special services of prayer to-morrow no meeting is being held at the Y.M.C.A. However all members of the Association are asked to bear in mind the above appeal and to unite in the various services held in the churches and to observe the day as a day of prayer for victory and peace. The victory at Vimy Ridge and other notable Allied victories followed closely after special days of prayer. Thanks giving for the recent great victories on the Marne and at the Piave river ought to have a place in our prayers to-morrow.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

IT WAS POSSIBLE TO SHOOT 800 YARDS WITH BOW AND ARROW

Attempts to Revive Archery Have Failed—Sport is Doomed to Extinction.

SPORT COMMENT

There is just one sport in which the ancients could excel the moderns, and that is archery, oldest of all pastimes. Of course, in the good old days before the invention of firearms and other improved methods of killing people, the bow and arrow were instruments of war as well as sport, and the nation that did not have an army of archers was doomed to extinction.

The record made several years ago in France by Ingo Simon, who shot an arrow 459 yards, 8 inches, while considered remarkable by archers to-day, would have made Robin Hood and his merry men laugh in derision. At the tournaments held in Sherwood Forest the least expert with the long bow exceeded Simon's record, and Robin Hood was said to have shot 800 yards.

The archery revival in America began in 1853, when the use of the longbow was taught at Kenyon College, Ohio. After a time interest in the sport died out again, but it was revived in 1877, with the organization of a club in Oakland, Cal. The American Archery Association held its first championship tournament forty years ago. Simon's record, made in France a year before the outbreak of the war, was the longest since 1794. It was made with a Turkish bow of buffalo horn and antelope sinew, over two centuries old. The longest distance with a modern yew bow at the same meet was 236 yards.

In olden days in England participation in the archery meets held on Sundays and holidays was obligatory upon all servants and workmen. Yew bows were considered the best, but, owing to the scarcity of yew, only persons of some social standing were permitted to own bows made of that wood. According to authorities, the average range of a yew bow of those days was from 320 to 400 yards.

Bowling Tournament Opens in the City on Monday Next

The stage is all set for the big bowling tournament which opens in this city on Monday at nine-thirty o'clock. About forty rinks will be present from outside points, and among the numerous trophies to be contested for are the Stratton and Gillespie cups. The visiting rinks will include Toronto, Lindsay, Orillia and many other towns.

Not Many Big Leagues Left When New Order Goes Into Force

After looking over the list of players who do not come under United States Secretary of War Baker's ruling to work or fight one finds that the major league club owners would have a knotty problem to solve should they attempt to get enough players to keep the two bodies agoing. As the saying goes, "It can't be did." There are only sixty players who are exempt, and they are so scattered that it would be almost impossible to get two good ball clubs out of the entire batch.

Some of the teams are practically wiped out by the order. Take the New York Yankees, as an example. Frank Baker, the demon slugger is, the only player who is above the draft age. All the rest have to work or fight. The Philadelphia Nationals have only Fred Luderus and C. Cravath, while Brooklyn has only Olson, Cheney and Daubert.

PETERBORO TEAM WILL VISIT LINDSAY

A team has been selected from the city league and will journey to Lindsay on Monday August 5, Scugogville's Civic Holiday. The I.O.O.F. team of Lindsay will be their opponents.

A GOOD REASON.

The huckleberry season has been nothing short of remarkable this year, and with the showers they have been the best crop in years. Hundreds of people went by cars and rigs and all brought back all they could carry. The price received was from $1.00 per pail at the first of the season, to $1.75 at the close.

NEW SESSION THIS YEAR IS UNLIKELY

Question Will Not be Considered Until Return of the Premier.

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—The usual midsummer political gossip has broken forth at the capital. There are stories of the early summoning of Parliament and the reorganization of the Cabinet. It can be stated authoritatively that the question of calling Parliament has not been discussed by the Cabinet nor has it been taken up by cable with Sir Robert Borden. Nothing will be done in regard to the summoning Parliament until the return of the Prime Minister, when the whole situation will be discussed.

Unless it is absolutely necessary the House will not be called until early in January. Past experience has shown that little business is transacted before the Christmas recess. A fall session is a real hardship one for Western and Eastern members. For Ontario and Quebec members a fall and winter session makes little difference, but for the distant members it is a great inconvenience to spend seven or eight months a year at Ottawa, especially in the present indemnity of only $2,500.

While there is no definite news as to the return of Sir Robert, he is expected back in about three weeks time. He will be accompanied by General Mewburn and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne. Hon. N. W. Rowell is on the high seas at the present time and is expected to arrive in Ottawa Sunday or Monday. He is returning on the same boat with Hon. Dr. Beland.

On the return of Sir Robert the question of Cabinet reconstruction will be taken up and it is expected that there will be some radical changes, although any gossip at the present time is the only sheerest guesswork. The reconstruction of the C.N.R. Board will also be left until the return of Sir Robert.

"GERMANS LIVING IN LITTLE HADES"

STOCKHOLM, August 3.—Conditions in the Ukraine before the assassination of Field-Marshal von Eichhorn were such as might have been expected to lead up to some such outbreak of violence, judging from the description of them by Zeta Hoeglund, leader of the Swedish Socialist left, in an interview in The Politiken of Copenhagen.

Hoeglund, who gave the interview before the Eichhorn assassination, had just returned from a lang visit to Russia, and his account is largely a report of conversations which he had with Russians from the Ukraine. They declared, he says, that the Germans there were "living in a little Hades"; that guerilla warfare was constantly in progress, fighting occurring daily, and many persons were killed, while occasional battles took place, lasting several days.

The peasants in one section of the Ukraine have an army estimated to number 25,000, Hoeglund reports. These men he describes as filled with hatred for the Germans and awaiting an auspicious moment to begin hostilities. The peasants pursue the policy of burning their grain and destroying their cattle and acting similarly with regard to other of their possessions rather than have them fall into the hands of the Germans.

The Austrian troops in the country are declared to be at daggers' point with the Germans, and to have supplied the peasants with arms, including artillery. Hoeglund's informants considered the disturbances that had occurred to be only a forecast of what might be expected at harvest time when the peasants, it was predicted, would do everything possible to prevent the Germans from securing their crops.

Gray-Dort Automobiles

The Duffus Garage has taken over the distributing agency for the Gray-Dort automobile in this section, and have already made arrangements to commence distributing cars.

People who require a car of the quality and price of a Gray-Dort with its splendid reputation, will be pleased to know that they can get with it the usual first class Duffus Garage service which is universally and favourably appreciated throughout this district, and when the new Duffus Garage is completed, will no doubt be able to give customers every convenience, attention and accommodation.

There will be no necessity for customers leaving their cars out in the weather while being repaired or while transacting business while in town.

The Gillette Razor's Four Years of War Service

THE Gillette Safety Razor has passed through four years of war service with a clean bill of health.

It went into the front line with the first troops, and it is still on active service, never having missed a day.

It is the proud record of the Gillette Razor that it has more users than have all other razors put together in every regiment under the Allied flags.

Under the severest conditions it is possible to impose, the Gillette Razor has supplied all the comfort and luxury a soldier derives from a clean shave. It has been his companion in many a shell-hole, dug-out and water-soaked trench.

It has gone with him to billet and reserve camp; it has shaved him in hospital and has accompanied him to "Blighty". Whether its owner has been on leave, invalided home, or finally pensioned off, the Gillette has never failed to offer the daily luxury of a perfect shave.

For more than four years it has been in action—day after day; month after month,—and it has never appeared on a casualty list, or been "invalided home".

An occasional oversight on the part of friends at home, or the uncertainty of the mails, has sometimes deprived a soldier of the new Gillette blades he prizes so highly. But the Gillette itself, so often mentioned in "despatches" home, has come through with flying colors,—a powerful factor in the maintenance of morale.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

PEARS ABUNDANT PEACH CROP POOR

REPORTS INDICATE LITTLE CHANGE IN APPLE SITUATION DURING JULY.

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—The report of the fruit division of the Department of Agriculture issued yesterday says that the only change in the apple situation that occurred during July was a slight falling off in prospects in British Columbia, and the development of apple scab in Nova Scotia. Neither of these changes is very serious nor do they greatly upset earlier calculations. While practically no contracts have been made there will be a fairly strong movement of Novia Scotia apples westward to meet the demands of Ontario, Quebec and prairie markets. With an anticipated shortage of five thousand cars in the Western States and a slightly smaller crop in British Columbia than in 1917, the demand of the Western market for Eastern apples will be increased. The report states that there was little change during the month in the Niagara peach situation. The total crop will not exceed fifty per cent. of normal and a continuance of dry weather may further reduce the yield. The quality is good. The crop is practically a failure in other parts of Ontario. The yield in British Columbia, both of peaches and apricots, will be fairly large considering the frost injury and the number of trees removed.

In spite of considerable injury from blight there is every indication of a good crop of pears in British Columbia, about 50 per cent. larger than last year. Reports from Niagara are quite variable, but the total crop will not greatly exceed fifty per cent. of normal. There is less than twenty-five per cent. of a normal crop in Burlington district.

SHOTS KILL TWO IN HOTEL.

ITALIAN SECTIONMAN AND GIRL EMPLOYED IN POST OFFICE DEAD AT TIMMINS.

TIMMINS, Ont., Aug. 3.—Guests at the Hotel Goldfields here last night about eight o'clock investigating the cause of two revolver shots one right after the other, found the bodies of a man and young woman on the settee in the hotel parlor. Both were shot through the head and were so covered with blood as to be almost unrecognizable. Chief Wilson and Drs. McInnes and MacLaren were summoned. It was found that the man was beyond hope of recovery, and though the doctors worked for hours to save the girl, she, too, died about ten o'clock. Papers on the dead man proved him to be Orichie Delle Donne, an Italian employed on the T. and N. O. section at Connaught. The girl was identified as Irene Leverton, clerk at the registered lettered wicket of the post office.

The French Forces Have Crossed the Aisne River

Number of Important Positions Captured—Situation Revert to Where it Was in September, 1914.

THE STORY OF BATTLE

Paris, Aug. 3rd. — Throughout last night the allies continued to advance towards the Vesle river, the War Office announced to-day. East of Soissons, the French have reached the Aisne between Soissons and Venizel. The crossing of the Aisne east of Soissons virtually compels the evacuation of the Vesle line. It is a dangerous menace to the line of the Aisne as the direction in which the French crossed is pointed directly towards the important heights at the western end of Chemin des Danes, which are less than five miles north of Venizel.

PRISONERS TAKEN.

Paris, Aug. 3.—Many prisoners were taken by the French at Soissons which was occupied at 5 oclock Friday evening, one hour after the Germans had been driven from the suburbs. Those of the garrison not captured escaped by fleeing northward.

Friday's splendid success is but a link in the chain of victories which have followed one after another since General Foch launched his counter offensive on July 18. Rarely in the war has a plan been followed out with such clock like regularity.

STRATEGIC MASTERPIECE.

This allied victory is hailed by many as being really equal to the first victory of the Marne, as a strategic enterprise. What the consequences of yesterday's victory will be, cannot yet be gauged, but that it will be far reaching already appears certain to the commanders.

The enemy cannot hold the Vesle line it is believed, but must retreat to the Aisne, since by the capture of Soissons the allies are able to debouch on the other side of the river and take him in the rear. The enemy appears to be therefore waiting on this, and also of the necessity of going back.

According with practice, he has already set fire to bases at Fismes and Braisnes and a dozen other villages.

The German retreat began on Friday morning after the fall of the Tardenois line brought about by the storming of the Hartennes plateau by troops on General Mangin's right.

The French on the east entered Ville en Tardenois, and advanced on both sides of the Ardre valley.

The Americans in the centre marched towards the Vesle, down the Orillon valley, while the French went into Crise, taking in the rear the previously impregnable redoubt of Buzny. Little by little the movements quickened. The Dorgmans-Rheims road was left three miles below and Gueux Poilly, Vezilly, Goussancourt and Coulonges were passed, and the forest of Ensles cleared out and Arcy wood was but a mouthful.

On the west we carried Maaz et Violaine, Chacris and Septmonts. By mid-afternoon the allies were even solid on the heights on the south of Crise, that is to say, south and southwest.

The fall of Soissons, which the Germans were obliged to evacuate, irrevocably seals the fate of the battle—it was the pivot of the whole German line. Even admitting that the Germans left could cling to the narrow plain below Vesle, the Aisne right wing could not have remained in the air, as its only support was Soissons plateau and Nearest Shares of the famous Chemin des Danes.

Thus it is held here, and the situation will revert to where it was at the end of September, 1914.

THE WAR REVIEWED

bia, Belgium, and other small powers are not included. These would swell the total by another million, At least two or three million casualties represent unwounded prisoners. The dead probably total eight millions, the disabled eight millions, the less seriously wounded, ten millions, and the prisoners, five millions. The British casualties so far this year reach half a million.

It has been reckoned that the loss of potential lives due to the decline in the birth-rate during the war, reaches more than twelve millions.

The cost of the war in money also passes the comprehension of ordinary mortals. The expenditures of both sets of belligerents totals 147,000,000,000 dollars, made up as follows:

Allied Expenditures.

Britain	35 billions
France	20 billions
Russia	22 billions
United States	12 billions
Italy	6 billions
Total	95 billions

Enemy Expenditures.

Germany	32 billions
Austria	17 billions
Bulgaria and Turkey	3 billions
Total	52 billions

From one-half to one-third of the national of the larger nations in the war excepting the United States has been used up in the struggle. The interest Germany will have to pay yearly on her war expenditures exceeds her entire pre-war dbt. Even in the case of Canada the yearly interest equals the revenue of the Dominion for the year 1900. Some economists declare that after the war the world will spend one-third of its time working to pay off its war debts.

A Costly Lesson.

Viewed from any angle, the world's experience with war during the last four years should harden the reason to go on with the struggle until an end is made once and for all of militarism, and the habit of settling international disputes by wholesale slaughter. Justice is not to be had in that way. Absolute justice may not be meted out by a league of peace any more than it is meted out by our national law courts, but at least it would approoacah nearer to perfection and be less of a reflection on the humanity and intelligence of mankind. Allied peoples should not tolerate in high public offices, men who will not work earnestly for universal disarmament, the compulsory arbitration of of international disputes and the maintenance of order by a police force representing civilization as a whole.

WEDDING BELLS

MONTGOMERY—FITCHETT.

At the home of Mr and Mrs. Edward Montgomery, Blackstock, a very pretty, but quiet wedding took place at 2 o'clock, Wednesday, July 31, when their only daughter, Amy Ethel was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Mr. Ralph A. Fitchett, of Manchester.

The bride was unattended and entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, while Miss Greta Le Barr, of Peterboro rendered the wedding march by Mendelssohn. The bride looked very dainty and pleasing in a frock of pale grey georgette and taffeta with the customary veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a large bunch of bridal roses.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Gomm and witnessed by only the immediate relatives friends of the bride and groom. Friends were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Peterboro, Lindsay and Calgary, Alta.

WARNED IN TIME.

A significant, if amusing, incident occurred the other day at one of the American training camps. A soldier happened to notice that a comrade failed to salute the General who commanded the camp. "Say," said he, "don't you know that was General G—— you just passed without saluting?" The recruit was much concerned about his error, and took the first opportunity of going to the general's headquarters. "General," he confessed, "I failed to salute you. I am sorry, but that doesn't excuse me, and now I have come for my punishment."

The General looked at him for a moment, and then a smile wreathed his face. "Thats all right this time," he remarked, "but for goodness sake don't fail to salute any of the young Second Lieutenants or you'll get sent to the guardhouse for life!"

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humors. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamiltons Pills today.

WYNNE FEELS FINE IN MORNINGS NOW

Eats More at One Meal Now Than He Formerly Ate in Three Days

"Although I was always prejudiced against medicines of all kinds, I will make affidavit at any time that Tanlac has entirely relieved my stomach trouble and made a new man of me." said George W. Wynne of 102 Margueretta street, Toronto, the other day. Mr. Wynne is an old army man having served with the British forces in India, Egypt ,Africa and other foreign countries and has lived in Toronto for the past ten years.

"Up to two years ago," he continued, "I had always enjoyed good health, then my stomach went back on me and I had trouble ever since till I began taking Tanlac. I lost my appetite and got so that I was actually afraid to eat, for I knew it meant hours of misery afterwards. Although I confined myself to the lightest diet and would take only a bite or two at the table, the little I did manage to force down would ferment and fill me up with gas till I felt as tight as a drum and could hardly get my breath. My food would feel like a lump of lead in me and I would suffer agonies all through my stomach and side. Gas would press up around my heart and rise up in my chest till I felt like I would choke. I was so weak and rundown that it was all I could do to drag myself off to my work, and many a time after starting off I felt like turning round and going back home. I was in this awful condition for two long years suffering untold misery all the time. I wouldn't take anything, for I had no faith in medicines, thinking that time would do away with my troubles, but I got steadily worse instead.

"I had been reading so much about Tanlac that I decided at last to lay aside by prejudices and try a bottle or two. Well, sir, before I had finished my first bottle I felt so much better that I kept on with it and have been feeling fine ever since. My appetite is so great that I actually eat more at one meal, now than I use to eat in three whole days. I can eat anything I want, too, and nothing hurts me at all. I haven't been troubled with gas or bloating since I started on Tanlac and never feel a bit of pain in my stomach or side like I did before. I get up in the mornings feeling fine and well and go to my work with the life and energy of a man half my age. I will gladly tell anybody how much Tanlac has benefited me and my wife will substantiate every word I have said.

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike ,in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd. ,in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

MAY SCRAP ROAD.

St. Thomas May Abandon Street Railway.

There is a strong possibility that the St. Thomas Municipal Street Railway will scrap its road and instal steel truck one-man cars, run by storage batteries without rails, in order to overcome the heavy deficit that seems inevitable this year. The move was brought about at a meeting of the Street Railway Committee, when twenty of the motormen and conductors waited on them and demanded an increase from 29 cents to 35 cents per hour with the option of having them quit on August 7. The committee decided to offer the men 32½ cents per hour, which was not accepted. In consequence of this decision on the part of the employees, the manager was instructed in the future to fill any vacancies that may occur with women. The adoption of the new type of car will be looked into immediately.

SMITH-WHITE CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE.

Twenty years ago Thursday, 1899, Solly Smith and Tommy White fought a 25-round draw at Coney Island. This was a battle for the featherweight championship of the world, as Smith had won that title the previous year by whipping George Dixon, in San Francisco. Solly, who was a Los Angeles boy, wasn't a particularly brilliant champion, as during his brief reign he was held to draws by both Tommy White and Eddie Santry, both of whom were Chicago lads. About two months after the White bout Smith took on Dave Sullivan at Coney Island, and lost his title in the fifth round, when he broke his arm and was unable to proceed. Within a year after losing his honours Smith was defeated by Oscar Gardner and knocked out by Joe Bernstein. Tommy White was a veteran when he fought Smith, and he had previously fought draws with almost all the champs and near-champs. After failing to take the title from any of these boys, he tackled Terry McGovern three times, but Tommy was given such lacings that he quit the ring.

Kicking a man after he is down is one way of making him get up—but it isn't always safe to do it.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

MODEL HUSBANDS.

Perhaps every married woman in our community thinks she possesses a model husband, and we should be sorry to say anything that might be the means of dispelling the delusion. We feel sure no two women weigh mankind in exactly the same scales. What one woman may regard as virtues another may regard as faults.

A model husband in our opinion is not a man who alone brings wealth to his home; nor one who endows his wife with a fine social position; but one who gives to his wife the best of himself; who appreciates her virtues and pardons her faults.

A model husband is one who will share every hardship or sorrow life may bring to his wife, and sweetens suffering with his words of love and sympathy and when age and infirmities rob her of her personal charms and wrinkles take the place of dimples, his love is likely the holly that blossoms in the winter of adversity.

A model husband does not allow his selfish nature to accord to himself all the blessings which come with a well kept home, and permit his faithful wife to bear all the burdens; he does not fret and fume if a sick child disturbs his peaceful slumbers, declaring urgent business duties on the morrow will demand his attention and he cannot lose sleep, yet can spend several nights at the club or lodge each week and never complain of heavy eyelids.

A model husband prefers the society of his wife and children to that of club, opera or dance, and when his wife shares in these recreations they are a pleasure to him, when she is absent they cease to amuse.

A model husband is not only tender and kind, he is manly and brave. It is a pitiful sight to see a strong, well-balanced woman yoked to a pigmy of a man who never had an inspiration higher than his stomach; who whines when he is hungry and grunts when he is fed.

A model husband must be a honest man; not only honest with his fellow men, thus keeping his commercial reputation above reproach, but honest in paying his obligations to his family. When he allows vice and dissipation to rob him of his manhood and self-respect he cheats his wife out of her legal rights.

A model husband is not necessarily the outcome of circumstances, but they are natural products. A kind, loving son will become, after marriage, a model husband. A selfish, arrogant son will grow into a tyrannical, unreasonable husband because he loves himself better thany anyone else, and his wife will always occupy a second place in his affections; when their opinions clash, and the happiness of either party is in the balance it will be surrendered, or there will be a friction in the household.

A model husband delights to bring happiness to the heart of the one he calls wife and never forgets to cherish and protect the atom of humanity the law made his own. His marriage vows are not made on Thanksgiving to be broken on Christmas.

A model husband is not necesarily one of the kissing kind, who never enters his house or leaves it without kissing his wife, and then amuses his associates by saying his wife would rather have a kiss than a dollar, and as a kiss has les commercial value it suits both parties.

The radiant face, the noble form, the lady-like courtesy , the helping hand are jewels of rarer worth than diamonds.

"VICTORY MOTHERS."

War mothers who have united their win-the-war efforts to best aid their sons in training here and fighting "over there" have been asked to change the name of their organization to "Victory Mothers."

A Cleveland (O.) man who suggests the change believes "Vctory Mothers" will mean more to the boys and the mothers themselves than "War Mothers." He forgets that all mothers, even she who has not been permitted to give as on to her country's cause, are working and hoping to be Victory mothers. This includes the young mother with her babe in her arms and the grandmother whose sons long ago passed Uncle Sam's military age line.

Every true and loyal mother in all America is a Victory Mother. One just naturally thinks of a boy who may never return. One cannot keep from his mind that service flag in the window when he thinks of War Mothers.

Therefore, let us continue thinking of those who give their sons as War Mothers, and of all mothers, including those with stars—blue and golden—in their service flags as Victory Mothers.

And let us not forget that the sons of War Mothers have gone from their side, and for that reason War Mothers should have first call upon our sympathy and assistance.

Sympathy and encouragement are the spurs to greater deeds. One grain of sympathy can be compared to a grain of mustard seed, but one seed planted and replanted will be enough to finally spread over the whole field. A living seed once fell from a flying bird's beak into a crevice of a rock. It grew and multiplied until finally it burst the rock in twain. This is a scientific fact, a real happening. Be not selfish with your words of encouragement and sympathy. There is nothing can be more valuable.

It is always the unclean person charges others with uncleanness. Pure minds have no room for impure thoughts. Shame him who tells you of evil in many persons.

The Woman Who Changed

Mr. and Mrs. Babcock Accept George's Invitation

CHAPTER CXXXVI.

To my delight, Mr. and Mrs. Babcock were to visit us. That is, Mrs. Babcock was coming with her husband and they would spend the two days they were in town, with us.

"Shall we give a little dinner for them?" I asked George as soon as we heard that Mrs. Babcock was surely coming.

"Yes—a small one. We'll ask Canfield and his wife; the Roberts and Bert and Geraldine Ross. Canfield and Hobert are on the board, and will appreciate meeting Mrs. Babcock, and you will feel more comfortable if we have Bert and Geraldine."

"I certainly shall! What a nice party we will have. Just ten of us. I will make out the menu and let you see it. What shall we do the first night?"

"Nothing, I think. You must remember that Mr. and Mrs. Babcock are not as young as you are. I think we will dine quietly, then have some music afterward. You can ask Merton Gray to drop in and help out, if you like. He might be willing."

"Certainly I will — if you like," I replied, flushing a little as I always did when his name was mentioned. I often thought of Merton Gray and his declaration of love for me. I was so happy, that he had continued to be my friend even after I had told him it was impossible for me to care for anyone save George. Yet, at times, I felt a sudden embarrassment when his name was mentioned, especially if George spoke of him.

Merton Gray Accepts.

After George left, I called Merton up.

"I am going to ask a favour," I said after we had talked a moment.

"It's already granted."

"Mr. and Mrs. Babcock of Chicago, business friends of George's, are to spend a couple of days with us. They are very musical. Would it be asking too much for you to drop around, Wednesday evening, and help me entertain them?"

"No, indeed! I shall be delighted to do so. Shall I bring my violin?"

"Please do!"

Ever since I first met Merton Gray, he had been so willing to do anything to give me pleasure, that it is no wonder I liked him. That he was considered rather a lion, and that hostesses vied with each other to secure him at dinners or other social affairs, of course did not make me less pleased that he never refused my invitations. It would not have been natural.

They were to arrive in the morning, and I proposed that I go to the station in the car and meet Mrs. Babcock.

"He may want to go directly to the office with you, and it may please her to have me meet her," I said.

"It surely will," George replied. "She is just the kind to appreciate such an attention. That she is so much older than you are, is all the more reason for a little extra thoughtfulness."

Again Helen Pleases Her Husband.

That was all George said about my offer to go to the station, but I knew by his manner that I had pleased him by proposing it. And, as always, when I knew I had accomplished that once seemingly impossible thing, I was happy. So I went singing about the house, consulting the cook, talking with James about the service, and making up my menu.

I had determined to have a very simple dinner, the first night they came, when we were to dine alone, but the next night, when we gave the dinner party, as finished a dinner as I could possibly give.

I fussed an hour in the guest room, although Annie always kept it in perfect order. I carried some little things from my own boudoir to make it more homelike, and put a couple of late magazines beside the reading lamp. Before I went to the station, the morning of their arrival, I would put fresh flowers in the vases, and then it would be complete.

I was very proud of my beautiful home, nowadays. At first I had not cared so much for it, as it was associated in my mind with my efforts to be a social success; with my failure to please George; with my need for instruction, and my rebellion. I had often told Evelyn that I would rather live in a little cottage and not be a society woman at all, than to have my lovely home and have to be thinking all the time whether I could live up to it. She would laugh and tell me to wait a while—and some day I would be proud of my home—proud to be its mistress.

She had been right. I was proud of my lovely home. It was neither quite so large nor so elaborate as Mrs. Babcock's, but it was delightfully complete in every particular, thanks to George. My servants were well trained, my cook an unusually good one. So I had no worry on any score save that of my own ability to prove entertaining; and to decide the menu.

HIS LUCKY ESCAPE.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

(Copyright, by American Press Association.)

Strolling down to St. Mark's square on my arrival at Venice, I stood looking at the pigeons hopping about after the grains of corn fed them by tourists. There among the others was my chum, Billy Humiston. I noticed at once that he didn't look chipper at all. After a fire of questions between us I asked him what was the matter. He confessed that he had fallen in love with an American girl whom he had seen at a window on the Grand canal. She hadn't seen him, and the only thing he knew about her was her name, which was Hamilton — Dora Hamilton.

"I know her well," I said. "You have a fortune, why should you not win her?"

"I don't want my fortune to win her. I want to do it myself."

After a long conference I proposed to Billy to get himself up as a gondolier, take the lady out on the water and do the trick in that fashion. Billy was mighty well pleased with the idea, and I planned the whole thing for him. I recommended "my gondolier" to Miss Hamilton, and she invited me and a couple of girl friends to go with her the next evening on the Grand canal. At 8 o'clock—it was still daylight—Billy, in a beautiful white suit, jaunty straw hat with blue ribbon streamers and a blue gondolier's sash and neckwear, pushed a chartered gondola to the steps of Miss Hamilton's hotel, and our party got aboard. Billy looked so funny that it was all I could do to repress a smile. He didn't dare look at me for fear I would betray him. We all got aboard except Miss Hamilton, who stood on the steps of the hotel.

"Do you speak any English?" she said to Billy.

"Leetle," replied Billy.

"How much for the first hour?"

"Done lira" (two lire).

"Done lira! You robber! The tariff only allows you to charge one lira and eighty centesimo."

"That will do," said Billy, coloring a little.

"And the second hour?"

"The same."

"The same! The tariff is half for the second hour."

Billy knew better, for he was familiar with the tariff, but he agreed to the reduction. Miss Hamilton stepped aboard, and Billy shoved the gondola out into the canal.

"Gondolier," said Miss Hamilton, "pull up to that float over there." Billy obeyed; but, not being an expert paddler, other boats crowded in ahead of him.

"What a stupid gondolier!" remarked Miss Hamilton. "He doesn't look as if he knew enough to keep from falling overboard." Then, checking herself, "I wonder how much English he understands."

By this time Billy was very mad. It was still light enough for me to see an ominous scowl on his brow.

The surroundings were certainly entrancing. The lion of St. Montee perched on its pillar. The doge's palace and the other buildings of the group about it, illuminated as they were; the lighted floats, the shimmer on the water, all combined to produce an effect not to be seen in any other city in the world.

"What a place for lovemaking!" I exclaimed.

It was too dark for me to see Billy's face, but I heard an indistinct growl.

"Gondolier," cried Miss Hamilton, "don't you keep us out over two hours and charge for a third; I know your tricks."

"Would the signorina like to go to the hotel?" asked Billy in broken English.

"It will take that time to reach the hotel."

"No, it won't. If you don't get us there within the time, it's your lookout. I only pay for two hours."

"But I can't keep you here till the time is up and then take you a mile to the hotel without beginning another hour."

"I only pay for two."

Billy was very angry and bound to get us ashore as soon as possible. He rowed us down toward the hotel at a rapid pace. When we reached the steps but five minutes remained of the two hours to be paid for. We rose to disembark, but Miss Hamilton stopped us.

"We don't get out of this gondola till time is up," she said.

So we sat still, waiting for the time to pass. Miss Hamilton remarking that it was just as pleasant there as being out in the middle of the canal. When her watch marked the exact time of the expiration of the two hours she permitted us to leave the gondola. She paid the amount of the legal hire, less half that of the second hour, and when Billy asked for an extra tip she walked away without a reply.

"The signorina might carry a stop watch," called the gondolier as we disappeared.

I saw Billy before retiring, and if ever a man was cured of a passion he was. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed. "That girl would get my soul out of my body and fry it on a gridiron for dinner. Non gracia (no thanks). I'm not as much in love as I thought I was."

A few days later I found myself cut by Miss Hamilton. She had found out that she had missed catching a fortune and that I had arranged the gondola party. That was quite reason enough for her to blame me for the whole affair.

Daguerre.

The inventor of the process of photography was Louis Daguerre, born at Cormeilles, France, in 1789. He was first employed painting scenes for the theatre, and while thus at work he discovered the method of representing night and day by the illumination of a transparent canvas painted on both sides. This was in 1822, but as early as 1814 Niecphore Niepce had made some experiments of photography on metal. In 1826 he and Daguerre became partners, but in a few years the former died, leaving Daguerre to develop the remarkable art. The French Government gave the medal of the Legion of Honor to the inventor of the daguerreotype.

Two Story Lake In Mexico.

One of the wonders of Mexico is the salt producing lake near Salinas station on the Tampico division of the Mexican Central Railway, 72 miles west of San Luis Potosi. It may well be termed a two storey lake, for at times there is a lake of fresh water overlying the salt lake. A water tight roof of green mud separates the fresh from the salt water. For a large part of the year there is no fresh water lake there. The sun licks it up soon after the rainy season is over. The salt secured from this lake goes all over Mexico. The lake has been worked about 65 years. The whole town of 5,000 people makes its living from the salt.

Giving Birds a Chance.

If man's instinct as a hunter could have been diverted from birds to insects the history of economic affairs, and especially of agriculture, would have been very different. But he has continued killing birds, not merely as a sport, but often for greedy traffic, long after the need to do so passed away. The time has come when governments must take serious thought for the protection of bird life in order that plant life on which human sustenance depends may not be jeopardized and destroyed.

Anxious to Please.

"So you are expected to do a kind act every day?"

"Yes," replied the Boy Scout.

"How about to-day?"

"Well, the teacher has been having a little trouble with me. Don't you think I might stay away from school and give her a rest?"

And on Washday, Too!

Early Croziers.

The earliest mention of the use of a crozier is of one carried by Ataldus, archbishop of Reims, who died A. D. 933. An ancient Saxon or Norman font in Winchester cathedral has a very old representation of a bishop with a crozier, probably the earliest example to be found in England. A crozier of rude shape is cut on the tomb of Bartholomew, bishop of Exeter from 1161 to 1184.—London Graphic.

ELECTRICITY.

And the Terms Energy, Pressure, Intensity and Quantity.

What is electricity?

The question was put directly to Dr Charles Proteus Steinmetz, the famous expert, in the hope that he—than whom no one knows more about it—might be able if not to tell what it is at least to give a definite idea of what it may be. Dr. Steinmetz replied:

"Electricity is a loose term, used indiscriminately in referring to all matters electrical.

"To give it definite meaning one must know whether reference is made to electrical energy, electrical pressure electrical intensity or electrical quantity.

"Electrical quantity (represented in the electrical current) is generally assumed by scientists to be a substance with atomical structure, the unit of which is the electron.

"Electrical pressure is meant in referring to the voltage. Electrical intensity is the voltage per unit length.

"Magnetism is a similar term, which does not mean anything to the scientist. Two pieces of steel may have exactly the same structure as far as science can determine, and yet one may contain magnetic quantity and the other be without it, or the two may contain the same amount of magnetic quantity and have different magnetic intensity. Quantity times intensity equals energy.

"There may be the same quantity of water in two pipes and different pressure, or there may be the same pressure and different quantity. If water the liquid, water pressure and water power were all loosely called water we should have the same confusion that the words electricity and magnetism suggest to the scientists."

"Is there such a thing as electricity?" he was asked.

"I cannot state positively that electrical quantity is a substance," Dr Steinmetz replied, "or that there is such an atom as the electron. I say simply that this is the most commonly accepted theory."

POE AND "THE RAVEN."

His Comment on the Tinkling Footfalls and the Bird's Shadow.

In a letter written on Dec. 15, 1846, to G. W. Evelett of Phillips, Me., Edgar Allan Poe, in commenting on his famous poem, "The Raven," said:

"For the purpose of poetry it is quite sufficient that a thing is possible, or at least that the improbability be not offensively glaring. It is true that in several ways, as you say, the lamp might have thrown the bird's shadow on the floor. My conception was that of the bracket candelabrum affixed against the walls, high up above the door and bust, as is often seen in the English palaces and even in some of the better houses in New York.

"Your objection to the tinkling of the footfalls is far more pointed and in the course of composition occurred so forcibly to myself that I hesitated to use the term. I finally used it, because I saw that it had, in its first conception, been suggested to my mind by the sense of the supernatural with which it was at the moment filled. No human or physical foot could tinkle on a soft carpet—therefore the tinkling of feet would vividly convey the supernatural impression.

"Your appreciation of 'The Sleeper' delights me. In higher qualities of poetry it is better than 'The Raven,' but there is not one man in a million who could be brought to agree with me in this opinion. 'The Raven,' of course, is far the better as a work of art—but in the true basis of all art 'The Sleeper' is the superior. I wrote the latter when quite a boy."

A Fond Mother.

Called to the bedside of a fond mother's baby boy, the doctor diagnosed the ailment as acute rheumatism. The mother responded quickly:

"Acute rheumatism. I might have known it; everything he does or says is just as cute!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Fifteen Hours in Durance

By SUSAN CLAGGETT

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The train for Winchester and points south pulled out on time, although even then the tracks were deep with the snow that had been falling steadily for 24 hours. Because of the storm her friends had endeavored to persuade Louise Cochran to remain in Washington, but she had laughed at their prophecies that unpleasant things would happen and had wished them good-by with apparent lightheartedness.

In reality she was apprehensive. She dreaded the delay to which she might be subjected. She was in haste to reach Staunton, at which place she would still be 12 miles from home, and the prospect of the long drive over country roads late at night did not appeal to her.

But she made herself comfortable, looked about, taking an inventory of the passengers. Seeing no one whom she knew, she applied herself to her knitting with an occasional glance out of the frost-rimmed window while the train kept on its way with ever-increasing slowness. There was a pause now and then for some passenger to alight. Then the train would start on again with ever-diminishing speed. Finally it came to a dead stop, apparently miles from anywhere. The worst had happened. They had run into a drift and were stalled. And this occurred before they had reached Winchester, not many miles from Washington.

It is one thing to be snowed up with plenty of warmth in the coaches, another when the thermometer gets down to zero and there is no heat. Something went wrong with the steam. The passengers were the usual crowd, some among them making light of the discomfort, others grumbling, but in the end the women took out their knitting and the men, having found several packs of cards, settled down to seven-up or poker.

But after several hours one and all snuggled down into their wraps, and accepted the inevitable. It was cold, horribly cold, and everyone was hungry. Louise had divided her lunch between two little girls sitting near her. Between hunger and cold she was feeling very forlorn, when a familiar voice said to her:

"Even if you are not on speaking terms with me, Louise, I think for the moment you had better call a truce. Stand up, please, while I put this around you."

Her teeth were chattering, but she managed a "N-no, I am c-comfortable, thank you."

"Don't be silly, girl," Robert Lee said roughly. "My coat cannot hurt you. Stand up or I will pick you up. Surely you do not want everyone in the car craning their heads to see what the fuss is about."

"T-that is the t-trouble with y-you," Louise chattered. "Y-you always t-try to make m-me do things I don't want to."

"I pretty generally have my way," the young fellow said grimly, his jaw taking a set look. "When I don't, things are bound to happen. Will you stand up?"

She did not move, and he stooped over, slipping his arm behind her shoulders. She shrank from him and the boy—for he was little more than a boy in spite of his six-feet-two—drew back, his face white. Then he took her hand and drew her to her feet.

"I must say," he muttered, "I had no idea you could act so foolishly. I know you have quarreled with me, but that is no reason you should freeze to death when I can make you comfortable." He drew the coat well about her, then seated himself. "What is it all about? Your ring is in my pocket with a note that I haven't been able to make anything of. After you are warm you are going to give me an explanation. Here's some chocolate. Nibble on it and perhaps your disposition will improve." He pushed the package into her reluctant hand, closing her fingers upon it.

"I saw you when we left the Union station, and if it had not been for this confounded storm I would have left the train without speaking to you, but now, believe me, there will be a perfect understanding between us before we are out of this."

The warmth of the fur-lined coat was having its effect, and without consciously doing so, Louise was taking little bites of chocolate, thereby finding a comfort she had not known before. She looked at the big fellow and remarked casually:

"It is very good of you to take this trouble. I did not appreciate how cold I was, nor how hungry." Here she bit into the chocolate with every evidence of enjoyment. "Do you always carry sweets about with you?"

But he was absorbed in the contents of a note he had taken from his pocket and did not answer. When at last he raised his head there was a curious contraction of his eyes and a bulldog set to his chin that bespoke something of that animal's tenacity.

"What made you write this, Louise? When I saw you a week ago there was no friction between us, and last night this reached me out of a clear sky. What is the meaning of it?"

"Are you sure you don't know?"

"My conscience is clear." He looked at her steadily. "There is no use fencing for time. You had some motive that is beyond me. I must be stupid, for I am completely in the dark." For a moment his anger got the better of him. "I thought you different from that crowd of butterflies back there," nodding his head in the direction of Washington. "It seems, however, that I am mistaken."

"Butterflies!" Louise exclaimed indignantly. "Butterflies, indeed! Every one of the crowd is at work, and hard at work, at that. Do you think it easy to spend all night at Union station meeting troop trains and to stay there until six o'clock in the morning handing out coffee and sandwiches to men who have had nothing to eat for hours and hours and—"

"The uniform is becoming," he retorted in an ugly tone. "I saw you in yours."

"To say nothing of the strain upon one's sympathy. Only last night Marion Harland cried like a baby over an old man and his wife who had come for a glimpse of their boy who they had heard was on his way to Camp Gordon. Did they find him? No. Instead, they were told his company had left suddenly for France. The boy was in the engineers. If the girls were butterflies do you think they would have been moved over the sore trouble of those two old people?" Her voice was steady in its wrath. "Would butterflies go day after day to surgical dressing rooms; would they care for three Belgian children and knit and knit, and knit?"

"Hysteria," he returned stubbornly. "There are a great many in dead earnest, but there is also a certain number that have gone into the thing for excitement and effect. But this is aside from the matter in which I am interested. Why did you write this note and send back your ring?"

Of what he said she caught but one word. "Hysteria! Oh! You great brute." Two angry tears rolled down her cheeks. He saw them, although she had quickly turned her head.

Leaning forward he took her resisting hand firmly in his.

"We do not seem to be getting anywhere, Louise, just further and further from the thing that means everything to me, to both of us. In spite of my bewilderment I know you think you have some good reason for what you have done. Leave the others out of it. Dear, I am very unhappy."

But she harked back to something he had said. "Where did you see me in uniform?" she asked, abruptly.

"At the station two nights ago."

"And you did not speak to me?"

"Unfortunately, I could not. I was with the general."

"I did not see you." There was an edge to the tone that caught his attention.

"That would not be surprising in the crowd."

"You were not in the crowd when I saw you. There were but two, you and—"

He took her hands now and forced her to to turn toward him. "You saw me? Did you see who was with me?"

"I saw a woman's head against your shoulder. That was enough."

"Was that why you returned your ring?"

"Wouldn't you call it a sufficient reason?"

"Appearances are often deceptive," he said slowly. "I thought you trusted me."

"Against the evidence of my own eyes?"

"Yes, and because you say that you believe me unworthy of trust."

"If conditions were reversed, what would you think?"

"That would be an entirely different matter," he returned shortly. "Often situations arise that place a man in a position in nowise touching the loyalty he owes the woman he loves, and I love you, Louise."

"You will not explain?"

"I cannot, dear. You must accept my word that there was no disloyalty."

She turned to him impulsively. "I would have given everything I possessed to get that letter back. I begged the carrier to give it to me, but he wouldn't. He looked sympathetic and said: 'Sure, if you've quarreled with him, miss, you'll have to write another. This now belongs to him.' I was furious. And I was heartsick and started home to have it out with myself."

"That was what I was doing. I was given a week's absence and was on my way home. I have a dandy plan to prevent future complications. What do—"

Here the conductor interrupted, looming big in the dim light. "Pretty bad, captain," he said in passing, "fifteen hours of it. But we will be in Winchester soon. They have dug us out from the other side. A terrible storm."

"A blessed storm," Robert Lee answered, as his hand sought and held the one deep in the pocket of his coat.

"Heh? What?" For a moment the conductor looked on in amazement, then a smile of understanding spread over his face as his gaze rested upon the flushed countenance of Louise Cochran. "All in the point of view, captain," he said, as he passed on. "All in the point of view."

The Book of the Dead.

The ancient Egyptian "The Book of the Dead" is probably unique among books, inasmuch that it was intended for use not in this world, but in the next. It consists of a collection of prayers and exorcisms composed of various periods for recitation by the soul during its passage through hades and was indeed regarded as a safe conduct through that region. For this reason the Egyptians, who themselves entitled it Per-em-hrn, "to go forth from day," buried a copy of the work, or portions of it, with their dead.—Westminster Gazette.

Test For Silk.

If silk splits or cracks it is a sign that its fabric has been weighted. There is a simple and a sure test by which the quality of the material may be determined. A bit of the silk and a match are all you need. Light the match and apply it to the fabric. If it holds its shape the silk is adulterated with some of the various minerals so used. If it runs together in a puffy mass the silk is pure.

German Buyers Corner Hides.

According to an article in the Buenos Aires Herald of October 10, 1917, entitled "Three Countries Want Hides," at a moment when British and American hide buyers are seeking Argentine hides they find the market boosted to extraordinary prices by a very keen and active competition on the part of German buyers, who are taking all the dry cattle hides they can find, offering higher prices than their enemy competitors.

Held Him to the Rules.

An old soldier on leaving the army wrote to his colonel in the following terms:

"Sir—After what I've suffered, tell the army to go to blazes."

Imagine his astonishment on receiving a reply in the usual official manner:

"Sir—Any suggestions or inquiries as to movements of troops must be entered on army form 122 X. Y. Z., a copy of which I am inclosing. Yours etc."—London Telegraph.

The Gallant Eighth.

My brother wrote me about a dinner some of the soldiers gave for two visitors at camp, members of a famous Canadian regiment, who were home on sick leave.

The Sergeant had been carefully coached about giving the toast, but became flustered, and this is what he made of it:

"Here's to the gallant Eighth, last on the field and first to leave it."

Silence reigned, and then the Corporal came gallantly to the rescue:

"Gentlemen," he began, "you must excuse the Sergeant, he never could give a toast decently; he isn't used to public speaking. Now I'll give a toast: Here's to the gallant Eighth, equal to none."

SCHOOL GIRL TELLS OTHERS

How They Can Find Relief From Periodic Sufferings.

Nashua, N.H.—"I am nineteen years old and every month for two years I had such pains that I would often faint and have to leave school. I had such pain I did not know what to do with myself and tried so many remedies that were of no use. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and decided to try it, and that is how I found relief from pain and feel so much better than I use to. When I hear of any girl suffering as I did I tell them how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me."—DELINA MARTIN, 29 Bowers St., Nashua, N.H.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, therefore is a perfectly safe remedy to give your daughter, who suffers from such painful periods as did Miss Martin.

The reason so many girls write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice, is because from their 40 years experience they have a store of knowledge which is invariably helpful.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

WHALES IN THE HUDSON.

They Gave the Dutch Colonists a Scare in the Winter of 1646.

In 1646 the colony of Rensselaerswijk had a very hard winter of it indeed. On the 25th of November the North river was closed and remained frozen for four months. A very high freshet followed, which destroyed a number of houses in the vicinity, nearly carried away the fort and inflicted considerable damage in the colony.

This, however, was not an unusual thing to the colonists, who in Holland had been accustomed to equally hard winters. Much worse was the appearance of a sea monster that they had never seen in their native country.

"At the same time as the freshet," says Antonie de Hooges, secretary of Rensselaerswijk, "there appeared before us a certain fish of considerable size, snow white in color, round in the body and blowing water out of his head. What it portended God the Lord only knew. At the same instant this fish appeared we had the first thunder and lightning this year." The public astonishment had scarcely subsided when "another monster was seen, estimated at forty feet in length, of a brown color, having fins in his back and ejecting water in like manner high in the air."

This fish "which had first ascended the river (the North river) stranded on his return to sea on an island some forty miles from the mouth of the river, near which place four others grounded this year."

AUTOMAT BEATS MAN.

Mechanical Chess Player Can Make Competitor Keep to the Rules.

Is the day near at hand when science will be able to create a human being? This question may well be asked when one considers the latest invention of that king of automat inventors Senor Torres y Quevedo, member of the Spanish Academy of Sciences. Senor Torres caused a sensation some thirty years ago by inventing a machine which would solve algebraic equations. Then he invented a balloon which would direct itself and could attain a speed as great as the fastest Zeppelins.

The latest product of this wonderful laboratory, says a Paris dispatch, is a machine which plays chess and which seems actually to accomplish the work of a human brain. Senor Torres thus describes his own invention:

"It is true that the game which the automat plays is not very complicated, but, nevertheless, for its opponent to win he must know how to play. The automat uses the white king against the castle and the black king. Its game is won in advance, but it must follow a certain course which leads it up to the finish.

"When the automat's opponent moves the black king the automat begins by seeing if the movement conforms with the rules of the game. If not it protests by lighting a lamp. If the move is according to the rules the automat, taking into account the position of the three pieces decides what is the best move and then makes it. Thus the game continues until the automat has checkmated the black king.

If the automat's opponent should make a mistake, as I said before, the automat protests by lighting a lamp. But it will tolerate only three mistakes. Then all its lights go out, and you may move your pieces as much as you want—the automat has finished. If you wish to begin a new game you invite the automat by a special movement to play another game. If it accepts it will turn out all its lights, place its pieces on the board in their original positions, then wait for you to make the first move.

"The old automats, the most celebrated of which were those of Vaucanson, imitated the appearance and the movements of man. To-day this idea has been abandoned, and intricate machines, which look like nothing but machines, have taken their places. The self directing torpedo is a good example of an automat. The difficulty does not lie in the work of its helmsman, but in the determination of the movement to be executed. The machine deduces this movement from indicators by purely mechanical means. This, as in the calculating machines, is the brainwork of the man that the machine accomplishes.

"It is not to be denied that automats can have sensitive organs (monometers, thermometers, compasses, etc.,) permitting them to recognize the circumstances which determine their movements, but science refuses to admit that they can possess the analogue of a brain. But I believe I have shown that this possibility theoretically does not offer the least doubt. Automats can be made as complicated as one may wish."

THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Those Who Are and Are Not Eligible to the House of Commons.

The British parliament consists of the king (or queen regnant), the lords spiritual and temporal and the commons. The crown virtually appoints the lords spiritual, and the peerages of the lords temporal have been created by the crown, but the members of the house of commons are elected.

Every male British subject of full age and sound mind is eligible unless he is a peer, a member of the clergy of the Roman Catholic church, the Church of England or the Church of Scotland, a judicial officer, a holder of an office under the crown which has been created since 1705 or a pensioner from the crown.

A member of the house of commons holds office until the dissolution of parliament by proclamation under the great seal. The king summons parliament to meet and prescribes the time and place of its meeting, prorogues and dissolves it and commands the writ for the election of members to the house of commons. The present statute law exacts the meeting of parliament once in three years, but the annual voting of supplies has superseded obsolete statutes.

In addition to the general elections held after the dissolution of a parliament, there are byelections, occurring when a seat has become vacant by the death of a member, by his succession to the peerage or by his acceptance of office under the crown.

Mazzini Loved London's Fogs.

What feature of London has the strongest appeal for the foreigner? Mazzini loved above all things else the London fogs.

"When you look up," he wrote, "the eye loses itself in a reddish, bell shaped vault, which always gives me, I don't know why, an idea of the phosphorescent light of the inferno. The whole city seems under a kind of spell and reminds me of the witches' scene in 'Macbeth' or the Brocksberg or the Witch of Endor. The passersby look like ghosts. One feels almost a ghost oneself."

And years after he had left London for Italy he writes to a friend, "I think very often under these radiant skies of the London fogs and always regretfully."—London Spectator.

Did His Part.

A little boy of five was invited to a children's party. The next day he was giving an account of the fun and said that each of the little visitors had contributed either a song, a recitation or music for the pleasure of the rest.

"Oh, poor little Jack!" said his mother. "How very unfortunate you could do nothing!"

"Yes, I could, mother," replied the young hopeful. "I stood up and said my prayers!"

He Drew the Line.

THE FIRST QUARREL.

By CLINTON C. FLAGLER.
[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

"Dearest, sweetest Ethel—Oh, that I had you with me this minute that I might rest my head on your bosom and feel your dear arms about me! Oh, how I need your comforting caresses! Why will girls separate themselves from their own loving girl friends to place themselves in the power of a rough, harsh, ungenerous, irritating, annoying man! To what a situation have I awakened! Married but three weeks, I have discovered that my husband, instead of being the kind, considerate, devoted creature I thought him, is brutal—positively brutal. Oh, how it pains me to confess it even to you, my own true, best and only friend!

"It all came about in this way. On our wedding trip Bert received a telegram calling him back to the city on business. We had been traveling three weeks of the honeymoon and were to spend the fourth week with mamma before leaving my home forever. When Bert's telegram came I told him that we could have but one honeymoon and he should not permit business to interfere with it. He replied that the matter in question might influence our future comfort, since it was of great importance. He positively refused to disregard the summons. Then I told him that he could do as he pleased. I would carry out the arrangement we had made and go home. He asked if I considered it a proper act for a wife to leave her husband for the fourth week of the honeymoon. That's just how reasonable men are! As if I were leaving him, not he leaving me! What do you suppose he said to me?

"'If you're going to commence running off to your mother at the end of the third week after marriage, you'll probably keep it up so long as she lives.' Could he have made a more horrid speech? I just walked out of the room and left him. The same afternoon I came home he went to the city. Mother had gone away for the day when I arrived and I must wait till evening for her return. Since I can't tell her of my frightful treatment I must tell it to the one I love next best. Do write me by return mail, giving me that sympathy of which I stand so much in need. Your loving MOLLIE."

The next day Albert Goodwin comes home from business, opens the front door of the house prepared to receive him and his bride, puts his hat and cane in the hall closet and goes upstairs, sighing heavily—goes into a bedroom where he is surprised to find his wife.

"Why, Mollie!"

No reply.

"What has brought you home? I thought you were not coming for a week."

"Well, mamma, she"—

"She, what?"

"She sided with you about our little disagreement."

"Little disagreement!"

"Yes. I feel perfectly satisfied now that mother thinks I should be here with you."

"Oh, it's your mother's view of it that has converted you."

A few gulps and a burst of tears. Young husband clasps wife in his arms. She pillows her head on his shoulder, and he kisses away the big drops. An hour of exquisite happiness, and the couple go down to dinner. When coffee is served there is a ring at the doorbell, and the postman leaves a letter for Mrs. Goodwin. She scans the superscription, frowns and lays it on the table unopened.

"From home?" asks the husband.

"No. It's from Ethel Beech."

"Your bosom friend! And you lay it by to finish your dinner with me. That's lovely of you."

"Oh, I can read it at my leisure."

"Come, sweetheart, this is all a sacrifice for me. Read your letter. I'll look at the evening paper."

He takes up the paper. She opens the letter, reads a few lines, tears it in bits and throws it into a waste-basket. This is the letter:

"My poor, dear suffering Mollie. Can you doubt that if I were with you in this, your great life's disappointment and affliction, I would take you to my heart. Who ever heard of a man allowing business to separate him from his wife during the honeymoon? And how selfish in him to grudge you a week in that home where you have been born and reared by loving parents before leaving them to live with a comparative stranger! I hope that by this time your mother is with you, that her arms are about you and she is sympathizing with you in your misfortune. Do write me what you intend to do. Will you get a divorce?

"I must tell you how beautiful my new pink silk looks. I hunted all over town for a shade of trimming to match and at last found it at D.'s.

"Goodby, precious. How I pity you, poor dear. I hope your mother will keep you with her always and you'll never have to go back to your ungenerous husband. Your loving

"ETHEL."

"Ethel been saying anything unpleasant?" asked the husband, surprised at the tearing up of the letter.

"Well, Ethel, she"—

"She what?"

"She hasn't any experience in matrimony at all. She doesn't understand how married people feel about some things."

"Oh! These people called me home on a fool's errand. If you like we'll spend that week in your home after all."

"No. We'll stay here. The house is lovely, isn't it?"

RECORD FOR ALL NATION..

Late Sir Benjamin Stone "Snapshotted" All Over the World.

Sir Benjamin Stone, dean of photographers of public events, who has just died at the age of seventy-six in England, represented East Birmingham in Parliament for fifteen years. At a complimentary luncheon given him by members of the House of Commons he once was called "photographer-in-chief to the Speaker and the House of Commons."

From youth he was a great traveler and his difficulty in purchasing scenes of the places he visited was what turned him into a photographer himself. As long ago as 1868 he began a pictorial record of the life of the nations. He interested others in this work, and the immense stores of photographs in the British Museum are the direct result.

In the course of the sitting of the first sitting of the First Parliament of which he was a member he took a picture of every member and of officials and journalists as well.

On the occasion of the Coronation of King Edward, Sir Benjamin took about 300 photographs, which were very useful to the officials who prepared the ceremony when King George succeeded.

Sir Benjamin's most amusing traveling experiences was when he went to Brazil to photograph the eclipse of the sun. He stayed for a time at Sears, and while he was there a revolution broke out. The governor had become unpopular and the soldiers rose and "fired" him out. Sir Benjamin made arrangements with a photographer to get pictures of the incidents, and the way the soldiers posed for the camera was quite like comic opera. They had placed cannon across the streets wherein the governor's palace was situated, and when they were ready to begin the attack they all stood up and posed for the picture. When the governor had bolted and they had secured the battered palace, they sent back for the photographer to come and take more pictures.

Another adventure was in China. He had been "taking" a temple, when he noticed that a large crowd had gathered, so he turned round in order to get a picture of the mob. There was a great murmuring, which grew into a hubbub. He asked the guide what the matter was, and he replied, "They say that you have taken their spirit from them."

"Nonsense," Sir Benjamin retorted, "I have taken nothing from them." "Haven't you got their likeness in your box?" the guide inquired, and when this was admitted he remarked triumphantly, "Then, how can you say that you have taken nothing?" It was an opportunity for blackmail not to be missed, and the photographer had to distribute large sums before he was allowed to depart in peace.

Strictly Logical.

Prof. Sudbury, who was extremely nearsighted, went to the barber's, sat down and allowed himself to be shaved. When the artist was done with him he did not move, and for awhile nobody disturbed him. But other customers began to arrive, and the chair was needed. The head barber, suspecting that his learned patron had fallen asleep, asked his boy to wake him. The professor heard him.

"No, my good man," he said, "I am not asleep. The fact is I am frightfully nearsighted. When I took my glasses off just now I was no longer able to see myself in the mirror opposite. Naturally I supposed I had already gone home."

THE FRENCH ARMY CAPTURED FIVE HUNDRED CANNON

Germans Make a Stand on Line From Ypres to Rheims

Prussian Guards Made Stubborn Fight But Were Defeated With Heavy Loss

Only a Few Enemy Troops Remain South of the River Velse—Big Gun Emplacements Uncovered.

PURSUIT CONTINUES

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The Allied pursuit of the Germans continues, and the latest reports are that only a few enemy troops remain south of the River Vesle, says the Havas Agency to-day in reviewing the situation. French patrols have crossed the Vesle at Bazoches and Jonchery, west and east of Fismes respectively. Allied troops hold the entire southern bank of the Vesle between Fismes and Rheims. A stubborn resistance was made by Prussian and Bavarian Guards between Mulzon and Champagny, but they were forced back, suffering heavy losses. Both banks of the Vesle now are under heavy artillery fire from opposing armies. The Germans, it is believed, will try to stop at an intermediate position between the Vesle and the Aisne, but probably they will not attempt a definite halt before the Aisne is reached. The enemy has suffered serious losses in men and material. Enemy dead are scattered along the roads leading north. A large number of platforms for 380 millimeter guns have been found in the old Marne pocket, further indicting that the Germans intended to stay there.

Adverse Weather.

The question is being asked in Paris whether the German withdrawal north and south of the Somme, after that from the Marne, does not indicate a change in German tactics in order to obtain effectives for a new offensive elsewhere. It is also asked if the Petrograd movement will not result in an extensive withdrawal similar to that from the Somme in March, 1917.

There was a lull in the battle along the Soissons-Rheims front last night, and the breathing spell extended into this morning. The Germans are being favoured by weather conditions which have transferred the Vesle river bank into swamps and morasses, and they are making a stiffer stand here than was anticipated.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The name of Herbert Togan, of Peterborough, Ontario, appears to-day among the list of United States' troops killed in action. The list is the longest given out here to date.

Awarded the Military Cross

CAPTAIN A. H. S. HUYCKE WAS WOUNDED THREE TIMES.

Captain A. H. S. Huycke, a younger brother of His Honour Judge Huycke, who has been with the Royal Army Medical Corps since shortly after the commencement of the war was wounded three times on May 28th and has been recently decorated with the Military Cross with an extra bar for conspicuous acts of bravery under fire performed in the course of his duty.

RETURNED TO DUTY.

Captain Huycke, who is a McGill graduate in medicine, formerly had a very extensive practice in British Columbia and enlisted at the beginning of the war. He has been on the French and Flanders Front for the last three years. The information received indicates that Captain Huycke is again back at his former post of duty, and has recovered from his wounds.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:—

There are a few reasons why cottons are scarce. "A 12-inch gun disposes of half a bale of cotton with every shot fired."

"A machine gun in operation will use up a bale in three months."

"It takes more than 20,000 bales a year to provide absorbent cotton to staunch the wounds of the injured."

GERMANS OPENLY ADMIT THEIR STRATEGIC PLANS HAD FAILED

COPENHAGEN, August 5.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff received the German dorrespondents, according to advices reaching here, and openly admitted that this time their strategic plans had failed. They asserted, however, that the Germans were still masters of the situation and that the territories given to the enemy were thus disposed of according to plans. If the battles were on German territory, they explained, it would be painful to give up villages, but the progress of the enemy, they declared, was without importance and would not affect the result of the world war."

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The Germans began a long range bombardment of Paris to-day with small results.

In several instances during the recent months the Germans signalized the opening of a new offensive with the renewal of a long range bombardment of Paris. Although the Allies in the recent advance have uncovered emplacements for long range guns, the guns themselves were not there, but had probably been returned to the forest of St. Gobain, where they are probably now operating, safe for the present at least from the menace of the Allies' offensive.

HONOURS FOR MISS DORIS RATHBONE

WON THE DOMINION SILVER MEDAL FOR VOCAL WORK.

Miss Doris Rathbone, a pupil of Mr. J. H. Renwick has won the Toronto Conservatory Dominion Silver Medal for the highest marks in Vocal Intermediate. She was highly congratulated by Dr. A. F. Vogt of the Conservatory. She was formally a member of Murray street Baptist choir.

68 Attended the Braundport Service

The Sunday service at Braundport yesterday morning at 11 o'clock was attended by sixty-eight campers who came from camp up and down the river covering a distance of three or four miles. Mr. George Robertson of George Street Methodist Church and Mr. R. C. Braund, conducted the services which have become a regular feature of the Sundays on the river. A solo by Miss Ivy Beer, yesterday was greatly appreciated.

PETERBORO GIRL HAD STRENUOUS TIME ON THE FARM.

Miss Smith of the H. P. Kennedy, Limited staff, returned to business on Thursday after spending a strenous three weeks with her parents on their farm near Peterboro. Miss Smith says that she believes that the farmerettes are doing a lot to assist the farmers, but that she has had more than enough. Milking five cows every morning and evening may be considered good exercise, but that she prefers the work of an accountant.—Farm Journal.

Fishing Vessels are Torpedoed and Sunk—Pirates Have Now Been Busy for Several Days—Crews Allowed to Land.

VESSEL BLOWN UP

Canadian Press:

CANADIAN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 5.—Auxiliary fishing steamer McLaughlin, owned here, reports having been chased into port by a U-boat, which finally gave up the chase after sighting a larger steamer in the offing. Some tons of fish for Canadian markets have been sunk, with various fishing vessels in this vicinity lately.

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The tank steamer Jennings was sunk by a submarine off the Virginia coast yesterday. This indicates that at least two German submarines are operating off the Canadian and United States coast now.

OTHER BOATS LOST.

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 5.—Saturday afternoon there were further developments in the activities of German U-boats in the Bay of Fundy, which have been continuing for four days, when three fishing schooners bound from Boston to the Banks were blown up and sunk forty miles west of Sea Island.

These schooners were the Muriel, the Roy Roy and the Annie M. Perry. Their crews, set adrift in dories, all managed to reach the Nova Scotia coast, and are at present in Yarmouth. The submarine lay in sight off Seal Island until Sunday morning, when it submerged.

This triple sinking followed immediately after the burning of the Dornfonten of St. John on Friday afternoon by probably the same submarine, which seems to direct its attention to the destruction of the smaller fishing vessels.

The Muriel Blown Up.

The Muriel, with Captain Eldredge Goodman, left Gloucester on Friday for the Bank. Saturday, shortly before noon, when she was lying forty miles west of Seal Island, the submarine was sighted four miles off. Two warning shots were fired across her stern and she was hove to. Half an hour later the submarine came within a hundred yards of the schooner and ordered the crew into the dories; some of them were taken aboard the submarine. Its Captain sent several sailors to the Muriel, who placed a bomb amidships underneath her keel. Fifteen minutes later there was only wreckage floating upon the water.

The crew of the Muriel were placed in their boats and reached Yarmouth shortly after daybreak yesterday. Thirteen of their number belonged to towns along the southern shore of Nova Scotia.

At 3 o'clock of the same afternoon the submarine ran down the Annie M. Perry, Capt. James Goodman, and blew her up in the same way as the Muriel. The crew took to their dories and reached Woods Harbour yesterday morning.

The Rob Roy Third Victim.

Two hours later the U-boat, at a distance of five miles, fired a warning shot across the bows of the Rob Roy. Captain Freeman Crowell. When the enemy craft drew near, the crew of the Roy Roy were told to hurry into their boats. Then their vessel was blown up. About eleven of them spent the night on Seal Island and the remainder reached Clark's Harbour. They are all in Yarmouth at present.

Boasts of Sinking Six on Friday.

According to the men, the sumbarine is 200 feet long. It is neat and clean, painted black along the top. It is equipped with four guns, two fore and aft. As it lay off Seal Island it was brilliantly illuminated by a light which seemed to be suspended from the mast head.

The Captain boasted of his accomplishments to the crew of the Muriel. He said that on Friday he had sunk six schooners, and that he had orders to destroy all that he met. The direction which the submarine took on leaving Seal Island could not be ascertained.

GERMAN AGENTS

HARBIN, August 5.—General Semenoff, Commander of the Anti-Bolsheviki Siberian forces operating against the Bolsheviki and Austro-German forces east of Lake Baikal, has been forced to retire from the town of Manchuria on the border between Trans-Baikal and Chinese Manchuria for a distance of ten miles. The people are fleeing from the town of Manchuria to Khailar on the Trans-Siberian Railway sixty miles to the eastward. Indescribable confusion reigns in that region. It is reported that German agents are buying large numbers of cattle in Mongolia. The Chinese are said to be ignoring the Bolsheviki and Austro-German prisoners who cross the frontier.

Tickets For the Chautauqua

Tickets for the Chautauqua concerts can now be procured at Oak Hall Clothing Store, Smith's Shoe Store, and Barrie's Fur Store. The price is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children. A ticket entitles the holder to attend every one of the eighteen concerts. After six hundred tickets are sold the price will be advanced fifty cents on all adult tickets, so that it will pay to be in the first six hundred. The admission for single concerts will be afternoon fifty cents, children twenty-five cents, and evening seventy-five cents, children thirty-five cents. Children are those from six to fourteen. Buy a season ticket now. It will pay.

There seems to be some doubt about the date. The Chautauqua will be in Peterborough from August 16th to 22nd. A tent for three thousand people will be erected at Central Park.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

Canada Carries off Palm for Quick Shipbuilding.

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—Canada now holds the record for speed in wooden shipbuilding on the American continent. The feat was accomplished by the Quinland & Robertson Shipbuilding Company of Quebec in the construction of the "War Seneca," a wooden steamer. The vessel was launched on June 13th and a dock steam trial was made yesterday — just forty-eight days later — by turning over the main engine and auxiliaries under steam. This is six days better than the previous best made in the United States which is said to have been fifty-four days.

This boat was built for the Im-C—68 Attended.

Thirty-four Persons Injured in Clash Between Police and Toronto Mob

GEN. PAU PAYS GENEROUS TRIBUTE TO FIGHTING QUALITIES OF ALLIES

NEW YORK, August 5.—General Pau, the one-armed hero veteran of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, and the gallant Commander of the French farces which protected the retreat of the Belgian army at Antwerp in the early days of the present struggle, reached New York last evening with the members of the French Mission. He is a man of striking appearance, athletic in bearing beyond his years, rugged and stern in countenance, with clear, piercing eyes.

"When do you look for the war to end?" was the inevitable question.

The one remaining hand was thrown up "I know not," he replied, "but"—and a grim smile played about the veteran's lips—"we win, this time."

"What do you say concerning the Canadians, General?" he was asked.

The ever-moving hand now smothe his chest. "The Canadians — comrades—gallant fighters—gentlemen! What more can be said? The soldiers of France are proud to be associated with them."

As to the military significance of the present situation General Pau naturally declined to comment. "I repeat," he said, "be the struggle long or short, we—France, Britain, America, Canada, Italy—the allies—we win, this time."

General Pau intimated that he would possibly visit Canada before he returned to France.

Allies Occupy Russian Port

Soviet Troops Have Fled From the City—No Losses.

KANDALASKA, Russian Lapland, Aug. 5. — A revolution against the Bolsheviki and in favour of the allies has occurred at Archangel, the Russian port in the Arctic. The Soviet troops have fled from the city.

After the revolution had been brought about, an allied detachment was landed at Archangel, occupying the railway station and the telegraph office with insignificant resistance.

Apparently there were no losses to the allied forces in their movement.

DOWLING IS EMOTIONLESS

SENTENCE OF EXECUTION READ OUT IN PRESENCE OF COMRADES—AFTERWARDS IS COMMUTED.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Lance-Corp. Jos. Dowling, of the Connaught Rangers, who was landed on the coast of Ireland from a German submarine three months ago, heard without emotion Friday the sentence of the court-martial that he be executed. The sentence was read aloud to the prisoner on the parade ground at the London Tower, in the presence of the troops quartered at the Tower. The King, acting on the recommendation of his advisers has commuted the sentence to imprisonment for life. Dowling was found guilty on charges of aiding the enemy.

If precedent is followed, Dowling proobably will be released after serving twenty years, provided his conduct has been good.

GERMANS WANT METALS.

BUT COPPER STATUES, IN BERLIN ARE ONLY THIN SHELLS.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3.—The search by German military authorities for copper and brass to be used in making munitions has disclosed that most of the supposedly copper statues in Berlin are nothing but extremely thin metal shells, similar to some of the trophies presented in pre-war days by the Emperor. It has been decided that it will not be worth while to dismantle the statues because of the small amount of metal to be obtained.

The large copper figure of Berolina, a female figure, representing the city of Berlin, on the Alexander Place is the first Berlin monument to be taken down for melting.

GERMANS SICK OF THE WAR.

GLAD AMERICANS ARE ARRIVING—HOPE THERE WILL BE A DECISIVE BATTLE SOON.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, August, 5.—German soldiers generally welcome the news that more soldiers are arriving in France, believing that the faster they arrive the sooner there will be a decisive battle or a definite peace move, according to a sergeant of the 4th Prussian Guards division who was captured near Sergy.

The prisoner told the correspondent that the German soldiers were sick of the war, and they believe now that Germany is bound to lose. The capitalists, however, insist on continuing the war at all costs.

SOCKS ARE NEEDED AT THE FRONT

Mrs. Simons, Orpington Road, of Browntown, has received the following letter from Pte. J. Wiltshire, who is overseas:

Sunday, July 14, 1918.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to say that I have received a pair of socks with your address in it. I can very well use a pair of socks, I have a pair, but they are full of holes, and I have worn them for a long time. I would like a parcel with something to eat in it if you cared to send it to me. We are about half starved over here. I come from Romaine street, Peterborough. This is some country over here. It is raining nearly every day. The roads are excellent; they are just like pavement. I have been over nearly three years and I think it is pretty nearly time this war was ending, don't you?

Well, this is all for this time, so I will close for now. I remain, a friend.

Mob Melted Away Before Thin Line of Police, Whose Clubs Fell With Deadly Effect—Investigation Ordered

QUIET TO-DAY

Canadian Press.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—This is Toronto's Civic Holiday and the city is comparatively quiet after the riotous demonstrations of the week end. Returned soldiers to the number of several hundred gathered at the City Hall at the invitation of Mayor Church to appoint their committee to formulate and present to the police commissioners tomorrow their grievances against the police and the administration of the alien enemy regulations. They will demand more strict enforcement of the latter and the dismissal of several policemen whom they allege to have been too violent and abusive on Saturday night. There were prospects of further demonstration today when one of the audience in the soldiers meeting declined to remove his hat when the National Anthem was being sung. The police arrested the man and avoided further scenes.

PITCHED BATTLES

For the first time in many years Toronto's streets were on Saturday the scenes of pitched battles between the police and mobs of rioters. During the night and early hours of Sunday morning serious clashes occurred in more than a dozen places in the downtown district of the city, and several times the rioting returned soldiers and their small army of supporters were badly defeated and forced to make a hurried retreat. The streets indeed presented an unusual spectacle during these frequent frays. The numerous victims stretched senseless upon the roadway, with their restwhile comrades fleeing — with hand upstretched above their heads —before a thin line of blue-clad officers ,whose clubs fell with deadly effect, was reminiscent of photographs in Petrograd streets during the tumultuous days when the Bolsheviki broke lose and overwhelmed law and order.

No Shooting.

A fortunate feature of the unfortunate affair was that, although there were plenty of fights, no one was reported to be seriously injured, and contrary to the general rumor, which circulated about town yesterday, there was no shooting, nor did blood flow in any serious quantities. Some idea of the rioting may be gleaned, however, when it is stated that four determined attempts were made to storm police stations, and that within a small space of not more than a hundred feet of Court Street, no less than 150 of the rioters were stretched senseless upon the pavement after a brief but effective engagement with the police.

THE CASUALTY LIST.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, AUGUST 5TH, 1918.

THE DEFAULTER'S CHANCE.

The results of the experiment of the government in offering immunity to all deserters and defaulters under the Military Service Act who report for duty before August 24th will be awaited with interest. The offer is made in the belief that many young men who failed to report through not properly understanding the requirements of the Act would be glad to do so now if they were not afraid that they would be severly punished. A period of grace has therefore been established, and all defaulters who report for duty before the date announced will not suffer by reason of their failure to do so before. After August 24th, however, it is announced that deserters will be rigorously pursued and "punished with all the vigour and severity of the law." People who employ, harbour or assist defaulters under the Military Service Act are also warned that they will be held strictly accountable for their conduct.

"O CANADA."

His friends who know how sincerely Rev. Canon Davidson was interested in the matter, will be glad to learn that he has been successful in having his resolution providing for the singing of "O Canada," at all branch meetings of the Great War Veterans' Association, passed by the Dominion Convention. Canon Davidson introduced this subject some time ago before the local branch of the Veterans, and asked that it be brought before the convention in Toronto. The selection of Canon Davidson as a delegate made it possible to launch his own resolution, and it was accepted. The intention is not to do away with the use of "God Save the King," at the close of meetings, as erroneously reported by one Toronto evening paper, but to add the Canadian National Anthem to the closing ritual.

Canon Davidson believes that one of the most important duties of the Veterans of the Great War is to foster a sturdy national spirit in Canada, and is convinced that the singing of "O Canada" on every public occasion should be encouraged.

A REGRETTABLE EPISODE.

The cause of the returned soldier is hurt and not helped by incidents like last Friday night's raid in Toronto, when thousands of dollars damage was done and a large quantity of foodstuffs destroyed. There was no occasion for such disgraceful behaviour. If a waiter in one of the restaurants had assaulted a returned man, which it is alleged was the cause of the riot, there was a proper channel by which justice could be sought. There are police courts with magistrates ready to punish men who commit such offences, and there was absolutely no need of the returned men taking the law in their own hands. But having done so, the justification for the attacks made upon other restaurants, the wilful destruction of property, the heedless spirit shown, is hard to find. As usual with affairs of this kind, the outbreak presented a fine opportunity for thieves and crooks to line up with the rioters and take advantage of the confusion to ply their trade, with the result that in addition to damaged property, the rioters left a trail of rifled cash registers behind, while goods were carried off in large quantities. The veterans will probably have to stand the blame for all these outrages, although not guilty of the thefts that were committed during the riot.

Canada is grateful for what her soldier sons have done overseas; every Canadian should be anxious to see that the men who have come back get a square deal and their rights. But the returned men cannot be allowed to be a power unto themselves. Riots of this kind should not be tolerated, and the Great War Veterans' Association can do a very useful work in using its influence to see that all returned men are warned that incidents like last Friday's destroy the confidence of the public and arouse feelings that should be absent.

"GREY DAY."

(New York Sun.)

Several correspondents have written to the Sun on the subject of England's day, which will be celebrated, we believe, with appropriate services next Sunday. Yes this very day is an anniversary upon which every Englishman must look with pride. It was on July 30, four years ago, that Great Britain made its reply to the impossible proposals of Germany: that England stand aside and let the brute have its way. In all England's' history there is nothing clearer or cleaner than the answer sent by Sir Edward Grey to Berlin:

"His Majesty's Government cannot for a moment entertain the Chancellor's proposal that they should bind themselves to neutrality on such terms.

"What he asks us is in effect to engage or stand by while French colonies are taken and France is beaten, so long as Germany does not take French territory as distinct from the colonies.

"From the material point of view, such a view is unacceptable, for France, without further territory in Europe being taken from her, could be so crushed as to lose her position as a great Power, and become subordinate to German policy.

"Altogether apart from that, it would be a disgrace for us to make this bargain with Germany at the expense of France, a disgrace from which the good name of this country would never recover.

"The Chancellor also in effect asks us to bargain away whatever obligation or interest we have as regards the neutrality of Belgium. We could not entertain that bargain either."

If Edward Grey had never written another line, the message we have quoted would be enough to make safe his place in history.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Desultory fighting" is a Berlin description of the German retreat. The Hun war correspondents are probably moving eastward too fast to tell much about the situation.

The returned soldiers in their rioting on Friday night in Toronto damaged more food in a few minutes than the Food Board regulations will save in the same restaurants in the next couple of months.

A few years ago opponents of the Laurier naval policy said Canada could not build ships. And yet we read that Canada now holds the continental record for speed in wooden ship-building.

Latest reports from overseas indicate a possibility of Mackensen being substituted for Ludendorff in the German line-up.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

FOCH AND BOCHE

(Philadelphia Inquirer)

Foch rhymes with boch, but it will be noticed that he doesn't attempt to reason with him.

HIS AMUSEMENT

(Macon Telegraph)

Still another amusing feature of the situation is the crown prince once entertained the idea of starting a world war just for the fun of it.

THE WAY OF A WOMAN

(Vancouver Sun)

A man is to be hanged in St. John, N.B., for beating his wife to death. Some men never know when to quit. If he had beaten her within an inch of her life she would have got up as soon as she was able and gone to court and sworn that she got her injuries by tripping over the cat and falling down the cellar stairs.

THE NECESSARY END

(Buffalo Express)

The defeat of Germany by arms is coming as certainly as night follows day if the issue is to be forced that far by Germany. The single path open to Germany short of defeat by arms is a revolution in its form of government, the overthrow of their ambitious and intriguing. If there were such a revolution, the entente allies would change their attitude towards Germany. The one would necessitate other, though there would still remain many important phases of the economic problems developed by the war to be worked out. Whether the Germans do it themselves or force the allies to do it for them, the Prussian military rulers are to be destroyed. That is the inevitable end.

SEEING THINGS

(Hamilton Herald)

To judge from the kaiser's boast that his submarines are winning the war because they are attacking the transports which carry American troops over to France, Wilhelm would seem to have reached the stage where he "sees things."

A Dry Town.

(Houston Post.)

They say one of the English tanks will be sent to southern cities during the next Liberty Loan campaign. It will be useless to send any tank to Houston, as there is nothing here to put in the old tanks we have.

Perhaps Before That.

(New York Sun.)

A Belfast firm has built an 8000-ton steamer in fifteen days. At the end of the war it may be possible to sail tomorrow on a ship that today isn't.

Germany's Guilt.

(D'Nation of Luxemburg.)

The real responsibility for all this shedding of Luxemburg blood falls upon the Germans, who, on August 2, 1914, violated the railway treaty, and proceeded to transport soldiers, munitions, and war material through our country. "Not Kennt Kein Gebot." The Allies can make the same claim. Even if they rain hundreds of bombs upon us, so that not a stone remains standing, we really cannot protest or complain. It was not they who threw our country into the misery of war.

Prussian Egotism.

(Vancouver Province.)

There is less excuse for the German misconception about the Americans because they had previously admitted their parallel blunder about the British armies. Contempt, first for the British armies, and then for the Americans sprang from the same cause a feeling that only a militarized nation, in the grip of a military caste, with an hereditary aptitude and taste for war, can successfully make war on the modern scale. They knew nothing about the fighting power of aroused democracies. But they are learning, with most of the lesson yet to come.

The Thunder of the Drums.

(Detroit News.)

Pietro Mascagni, the celebrated composer, once told how the opening chorus of "Cavalleria" was composed the night of February 3, 1889, when his first child was born. That son, Mimi, is now, or was recently, driving a motor truck for the Italian army; and a second boy, Dino, became a private in the engineer corps blowing up Austrian barbed wire barricades. On a visit to the young soldiers, Mascagni saw his first battle. "This is indeed music," he wrote "It seems as if all the big drums in my orchestra had been multiplied by a million and suddenly gone mad."

SINGLE MEN DON'T SHARE

Must Have Dependents—Otherwise New Bonus Won't Apply—What Took Place at Ottawa Yesterday.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—In addition to the bonus of $100 given last year and the $150 more now promised the letter carriers, W. H. Alderson, who represented the Board of Trade on the Ottawa delegation, expressed confidence that the men would receive additional increases which would bring their salaries up to almost the amounts asked for. It would be necessary for the men to carefully present their case.

The new bonus will apply to both permanent and temporary men stated Mr. Alderson. It was anticipated that the only single men to receive the new bonus would be those with dependents. The Government took the attitude that single men should be at the front.

While Mr. Alderson said that the men would be satisfactorily dealth with by the Government, he remarked: "There are some things I might say that would not sound good about certain members." He referred to Cabinet Ministers.

THE NEW BRITISH SOLDIER

(By Lieut. J. B. Merton)

It was a letter that carried home to England the character of the man who wrote it; quite a simple letter, simply expressed, and written in that quiet sincere manner that one has come to look for from men who are fighting in France. They never strive after effect. They say what they are thinking, as they would say it if they could speak instead of having to write.

He told her that his socks fitted him like gloves, that the mittens were first-rate, and the cake a real treat! Stanley was down at the base with a bit of shrapnel in his arm, and young Tom was engaged to a girl in his village; the weather kept fine, and he had all he wanted, including plenty of cigarettes; he would like another writing tablet when she had time to send it; there was really no news. And then, tucked away at the end of the letter was a vague sentence about tough fighting, and plenty of Germans to kill.

He wrote those letters of his as often as he could, because, he said, it must be hard for the women waiting at home in those days. He had very decided opinions of his own, and he thought it wrong to 'pile on the horror' of the life out in the trenches, and equally wrong to treat it as a joke, and say it was all great fun and no discomfort. He knew that she had a strong imagination, and so he gave her as little as possible to feed it on. If a trench was taken after a bitter fight, he merely referred to a scrap.

He was a man who had no delight in war as an occupation and oh that account he hated so much the more those who had brought it on the world. His philosophy of life was just to do what his instinct and his conscience told him was right. He had put his hand to the plough, and nothing on earth would turn him back. If he longed at times for the quiet life at home, and the uneventful days when the hours ran evenly by, he saw quite plainly that the things he craved must be bought. It was his small shop and his little children, and his wife who were threatened. Accidents of geography and birth had saved them, that was all. The small Belgian shops, the little children and wives, they had all suffered. Something had to be done to save the women and children and homes of the world. He possessed a sample of all three, and must fight for them.

"A country worth living in is worth fighting for." Those words written large on a poster in the Tottenham Court Road, had burnt themselves into his brain. He felt that it was just what he would have said if he had had the gift of words.

I have called him—"He", preferring to give him no name; but everybady has recognized him. You meet him every day in every street. His method of speech has taken hold of the minds of quite staid old people. His mannerisms have gripped us more than any Oxford manner; his jokes are by-words; he has added words and phrases to the dictionary. And all that he has done, he has done simply and uneffectedly, without a touch of self-consciousness.

CARS TOO SPEEDY.

Hiawatha Cows and Chickens Grow Nervous Dodging Fast Ones.

Hiawatha is a popular resort for autoists from Peterborough and other places, but they are not likely to remain popular with the natives if careless speeding continues much longer. Some of the bigger cars shoot through the hamlet like crazy things, occasionally bumping a cow or squashing a hen. The Indians are usually most hospitable, but just now they are looking for tomahawks for the next driver that turns down the lake road on one wheel. Otherwise they can come as often as they like.

Central Park a Yellowstone Until Keepers Found Bruin

Rocky Mountain Bear of Uncertain Temper Played at Large for More Than Three Hours, Finally Being Discovered When Horse Scents Animal In Wooded Section.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—For more than three hours persons who strolled about Central Park or lounged on the benches were in imminent danger of an encounter with Jim, one of the largest Rocky Mountain bears in captivity and an animal of uncertain temper. During that time six keepers of the Central Park menageries whirled around the park in commandeered automobiles seeking a clew to the whereabouts of the escaped animal.

Jim finally was found in the wooded section adjoining the bridle path at a point opposite Seventy-first street. His presence was made known when a horse ridden by a groom employed by Otto Hauter suddenly bolted and became unmanageable. Keepers hurried to the point from which the horse shied and there found Jim, looking very much bewildered and apparently glad to recognie some one he knew. He was roped and lifted into the automobile and the trip back to his cage was without incident.

The first knowledge of Jim's escape came to the keepers at about ten o'clock yesterday morning. Muff and Ruff, two Russian bears, who live in an adjoining cage, saw nim creep out of the top of his cage at a point where he had forced back three two-inch bars. They yowled lustily, and when the keepers arrived they at first were unable to understand what was the matter. In Jim's cage there is a small cave, in which he frequently rests in summer. As a result the keepers, after puzzling over the symptoms developed by Muff and Ruff, went away Another uproar brought them back, and the discovery of the bent bars in Jim's cage started the pursuit.

Fifty or more persons seen about the park were warned by the keepers of the bear's escape. When Jim was finally interned, with suitable language and ceremony, the park was emptier than usual.

"FOUR YEARS OF WAR" SUBJECT OF AN INTERESTING ADDRESS IN PARK STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

Mr. Joseph Wearing Was the Speaker—Things to Remember

"THE GREAT NATION"

At Park Street Baptist Church yesterday morning, Mr. Joseph Years of War". He first indicated Years of War". He fiYrst indicated something of the colossal sacrifice which had so far been made. The most precious sacrifice of all being the bright promising young manhood which was the hope of the nation's future and the loss of which cannot possibly be repaid. "But," said the speaker, "this is the true greatness of all ages that men, not all men, not many men, but that some men should give their best efforts, should give their all that generations yet unborn might gain some advantage from their unrequited efforts." Mr Wearing then pointed out that we had reason to hope and believe that the tide of battle is beginning to run in our favour. As soon as this is certain we are likely to hear calls for peace from Germany and she will try to put the blame on the Allies for the continuance of the war. It is then that we should bear in mind, what we have learned about the German people during the last four years.

These are some of the things we should bear in mind:

Things to Remember.

1—That in their treatment of civilians in occupied territory the Germans have been as unhuman and indecent as the followers of the bloody Duke of Alva.

2—That in their methods of warfare the Germans have violated every written and unwritten law affecting nations, showing themselves foes unworthy of our steel.

3—That in their treatment of prisoners of war, Germans have shown that they have lost all feelings of humanity and are worse than barbarians.

4—That in their dealings with neutral countries, Germans have shown themselves to be people without honour who cannot under any circumstance be trusted.

5—That in all their speeches, newspaper reports, diplomatic communications, etc., the German statesmen, editors and teachers, have shown themselves to be utter liars and the truth is not to be found anywhere in Germany today.

Must Continue.

"The importance of remembering these things," said Mr. Wearing, is because this war must continue until the German people show unmistakable signs of repentance and a change of heart! Words will not be sufficient to show this. Repentance can only be shown by withdrawal from all occupied territory (Germany must get back within her original borders); by full recompense to Belgium, France and Serbia; by handing back to France the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine stolen from her during the war of 1870; and by disarmament as a future guarantee of conduct. Until Germany is willing to do all this, she is the same Germany that has been revealed to use during our four years of war.

A Bright Side.

Mr. Wearing also pointed out that the four years of war had shown a bright side to the horrors of war. The bright side also revealed some things we should bear in mind.

1—The British people instead of being a decadent race were never so virile and so great.

2—The Empire to which we belong has been proved to be indissoluble by any crisis no matter how severe. The ties which bind the Dominions to the Motherland have been made stronger by the vicissitudes of war.

3—The great nations of the world can wholeheartedly unite in friendly cooperations. Who would have thought it possible four years ago that British and Americans would be fighting together under a French commander?

4—The world has found its soul. Liberty will not perish from the earth because the world is prepared to pay the price to keep it burning.

In Conclusion

In conclusion the speaker showed that the principles for which allies are fighting are the fundamental principles of our Christian religion. We fight for the love of our fellowmen everywhere and we have not the Germans as a people but their beastial, devilish nature and we intend to fight until this nature is changed.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, August 5.—The Associated Press war summary to-day says:

Weakened by the defeat suffered on the Soissons-Rheims front, the Germans apparently are preparing to assume the defensive on the front from Ypres to Rheims. While continuing their retirement toward the Aisne, the Germans have given up good defensive positions in Picardy east of Amiens. The movements north and south of the Somme have been only local in character, but they are an indication that the German command is aware of the danger of an Allied attack north of the present battlefield. Between Soissons and Rheims, the Vesle virtually has been cleared of enemy troops, and Fismes, the important base in the centre, is in the hands of the Americans. West of Rheims the French have made important gains, and in the region of Soissons the French are north of the Aisne.

Resistance Stiffening.

The enemy resistance apparently has been growing stronger from Fismes east to Rheims. However, the Vesle is in flood, and as large swamps line its course west of Rheims, it is possible the resistance may be due to the inability of the Germans to move to the north bank. The high water cut off many German units elsewhere, and these fought until they were killed or hopelessly surrounded. Allied troops having flattened out the Marne pocket have not advanced so rapidly during the past forty-eight hours as in the previous forty-eight. The leading units keep in close touch with the Germans, but it is probable that heavy artillery will have to be brought up if the Germans persist in trying to hold the Allies off at various points along the Vesle.

Food Board Flashes

Are you in the "sensible buyer" class or are you one of the great crowd of indifferent buyers who leave selection to their dealers?

The sensible buyer does her buying at first-hand—and not over the telephone. She goes out with her basket and picks what she wants. She encourages the cash and carry system and she believes in the groceteria. She buys what is in season. She does not let herself be beguiled by the thing that looks tempting. She encourages the fish store all she can because fish spells conservation of meat. She studies the commercial page as religiously as she does the woman's page because there she finds the market prices.

She adds the final touch to sensible buying by steering clear as far as possible of wheat products, of beef and of bacon. By such means she is becoming not only a sensible but also a patriotic buyer.

LOOK LIKE TOY BOATS

BOW AND STERN OF AEGEAN CARGO CARRIERS ARE INDISTINGUISHABLE.

When Saint Paul was shipwrecked in the Aegean Sea the chronicler of the incident wrote that "fearing lest we should have fallen upon rocks they cast four anchors out of the stern and wished for the day." The British inspector-general of communications in Mesopotamia liked to refer to this, and he read somewhere once that because anchoring by the stern is against all nautical procedure this passage engaged the earnest attention of the wise men who made the King James version of the Bible, and there was much discussion about it.

The wording of it was regarded as either a mistake in the original translation or a slip of the pen on the part of the writer. But the subject having been referred in all solemnity to certain savants of the East, was immediately dropped when it was learned that many ships ply up and down the Aegean coast and on the inland waters of the ancient and unchanging world behind it that are identical as to bow and stern and can anchor either way.

They are exactly like the toy boats you make for your little son out of sheets of note paper. You use a match or toothpick for a mast and a square bit of paper for a sail, and there you have it— an exact replica in miniature of the boats one sees all up and down the Tigris or lying a anchor before the Mesopotamian towns and cities. It takes one of these boats a month to take the journey from Basra to Bagdad, but there are hundreds of them, and they creep up and down, day after day, an endless chain of slow but sure cargo carriers.—Eleanor Franklin Egan in the Saturday Evening Post.

NEW THEATRICAL ALLIANCE.

Klaw & Erlanger, Dillingham, Zeigfeld Join in Productions.

NEW YORK, August 5.—Klaw and Erlanger, Charles B. Dillingham, and Florenz Zeigfeld, Jr., have announced their formation of a new alliance which will embark upon the production of plays and the management of stars on a large scale. The first player to pass under their direction is Raymond Hitchcock, who has been an independent producer for the last two years, and with his production of "Hitchy-Koo," will come under their direction on September 2.

MAJOR SHARPE DROWNED

CASUALTY OFFICER OF M.D. NO. 3 FEARED LOST — CLOTHES FOUND ON BANK OF RIVER.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 5.—It is believed Major W. J. Sharpe, casualty officer for M.D. 3, was drowned early on Saturday morning about half a mile beyond Kingston Junction in the weeds of the Cataraqui River. His clothes, cane, cap and watch were found neatly folded, and a towel nearby led to the conclusion that he had been bathing and had gone beyond his depth. Major Sharpe was a captain in the 21st Battalion, later returning to be bombing instructor at Barriefield Camp in the summer of 1916. He had been in control of the casualty office since the first of the year, and was a popular staff officer with all ranks. His wife and two small children survive.

FIRE CAUSED BY HOT ASHES LEFT IN WOODEN BOX

Hot ashes was the cause of a fire on Sunday morning at 9:30 at the home of Mr. J. Moyce, 27 Lafayette avenue. The ashes had been put outside in a soap box near a bin containing a ton of coal. The bin caught fire and the conflagration spread to the kitchen and the roof which was soon a mass of flames. The fire brigade was called out and extinguished the blaze. The damage will be slight.

MEN'S NECKTIES SOON TO BE OF GAYEST COLOURS, SAYS HABERDASHERY AUTHORITY

Frank E. Fehlman, Who Is Conducting Salesmen's School at Astor Hotel, Declares Women Employed In Stores Are Compelling a Marked Change In Styles.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Every one might just as well get out the yellow sun glasses or other dimmers and prepare to wear them! Not that the rays of Old Sol are to be any more blinding, but that the colors of men's neckties are to be made brighter and brighter and more varied as long as the war lasts. This was the word given out by Frank E. Fehlman, who is conducting the third annual training school for retail salesmen at the Astor Hotel.

"You see," he said, "store owners are employing women nowadays as clerks in the men's furnishing goods stores as well as in the women's stores. And if there's anything a woman likes it is a bright colored tie. They've given me all sorts of reasons for it. It's just natural. They say, colorful ties add life and 'pep' to a man's appearance. And I think they are right about it, too. Of course, they always like the colors to blend, but they want straight out and out high colors.

"I predict that within a short time you will see one of the greatest arrays of ties going up and down Fifth avenue and Broadway that you ever saw. Women generally have their way, you know, when they're dead set on anything."

GEORGE EHRET ON WAY TO NEW YORK FROM GERMANY

WASHINGTON, D.C., August 5.—George Ehret, brewer, of New York, whose estate, estimated to be valued at $40,000,000, recently was taken over by Alien Property Custodian Palmer, was reported to be returning from Germany to institute proceeding for recovery of the property. The case is analagous to that of Mrs. Adolphus Busch, widow of the St. Louis brewer, who now is seeking recovery of her estate, which was seized while she was in Germany.

Mr. Ehret went to Germany before the United States entered the war, and his friends assert the trip was made necessary by reason of his declining health. His property was seized by the government on the ground of his German residence, as residence and not citizenship is the determining factor in such cases.

Their Poker Game Only for Charity

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Even in their relaxation from knitting sweaters and such things, the women of Rockaway Beach, L.I., devote their time to Red Cross work. This was learned when Gazella Lestowitz, Minnie Levine, Lena Sherman, Sbella Stein, Rebecca Wolfe and Grace Stein were arraigned before Magistrate Doyle in the Jamaiac Court, charged with disorderly conduct.

The six women, as explained by a policeman who took them to court had disturbed neighbours by "shouts, laughter and back slapping" while playing poker on the porch of No. 25 Waverly avenue, Rockaway Beach. The policeman further explained to the court that he found eighty cents in the "kitty" and $5.60 on the table in front of the women.

"I'm surprised," said Magistrate Doyle. "This is the first case I have known of women playing poker. At all the women's card parties I have known prizes were played for."

"We were playing for the Red Cross," gasped one of the women, and the others chimed in with supporting testimony.

"It was for a good purpose, so I'll have to discharge you," said the Magistrate.

His Blond Wig and Polka Dot Gown Not Enough Camouflage

Enemy Alien, Arrested While Posing As a Woman, Will be Interned

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—When Emil Picht, who is forty-two years old, a German and lives at No. 237 East Seventy-eighth street, was arraigned in the Harlem Court on a charge of disorderly conduct he was released upon the application of the department of Justice and will be interned as an alien enemy. The charge upon which Picht was brought to court was appearing upon the streets in the attire of a woman.

When questioned by Chauncey G. Holcome, special agent of the Department of Justice, Picht said he came to the United States for the first time in 1911 and that after a three months stay, he returned to Germany. His second trip to this country was early in 1914 and he has remained here since then.

Picht at the time of his arraignment was dressed in a blue polka dot silk dress, wore silk stockings and pumps, a blonde wig, earnings and carried a mesh bag containing powder and rouge. He testified that he had served seven years in the German army and that his rank at the outset of the war would have been lieutenant if he had been in military jurisdiction.

Arrested at Medison avenue and Eighty-sixth street on Sunday, Picht told the policeman who made the arrest that he had dressed himself as a woman for the purpose of trapping a man who had insulted a woman friend of his at that street intersection a few evenings before. He would in no circumstances divulge the name of this woman so that his story might be checked up.

The probation officer who searched Pitch's rooms declared that he found there twenty-two complete changes of cosly women's apparel.

Lone Bandit Robs Express Car and Flees With $20,000

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Aug. 5.—An express car on a westbound Chesapeake and Ohio passenger train passing through here early, was robbed by an unidentified white man, who bound and gagged the express messenger. The safe was emptied of all valuables.

When the train reached Staunton the express messenger was untied and told of the robbery. He said er the train left Charlettesville and held him up at the point of a pistol. After tying him securely, he said, the robber took his keys and opened the safe. No estimate of the value er the train left Charlottesville and reports of the holdup reaching here.

Although express company officials refused to discuss the robbery, later reports reaching here said the robber got away with not less than $25,000 in valuables.

A considerable amount of currency was in the safe, it was said, representing the payroll of a Western concern. The money was taken, but packages of bonds were not disturbed.

JOCKEY MUST GO TO WORK, TOO

U. S. government officials are rounding up jockeys within the draft age. Notice has been served on Joe Notter, J. McTaggart, Vincent Powers, Barrett Haynes and G. Corey that they must either find essential employment or don a uniform. These young men are in a quandary just what to do, as the majority have dependants and a small salary in a factory, they claim, is not sufficient to support themselves and families. "I am willing to do most anything," said Notter, "to help the good cause, but I am all at sea just what kind of a job I can get."

He is slightly over four feet in height and weighs about sixty pounds. In going down to Kingston he expressed the hope that the military authorities would take him on as an orderly, but he was formally discharged and returned to Peterborough the following day.

Ken. Williams is Dead at Ottawa

OTTAWA, August 4. — Kenneth Williams, one of the greatest football players Queen's University has ever produced and a fine all-round athlete, died here this afternoon after a week's illness. Death is said to have been due to spinal meningitis.

The Late Capt "Ken" Williams was in his 31st year and is survived by a young widow and by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Williams of Kingston, two brothers, Lieut. "Jack" of the 38th Batt., who returned last year from France wounded, and Leo, who is now overseas. The remains will be taken to-morrow at noon to his former home in Kingston for interment. His brother "Jack," also a noted football player, was with the unfortunate young officer through his fatal illness. Captain Williams had been attached to the local headquarters staff since his return from England two years ago.

The late Capt. Williams achieved fame as a backfield player for Queen's University in the Intercollegiate Football Union. He figured in many memorable games against University of Toronto with Queen's University teams and also played a few games for St. Patrick's of Ottawa when they were represented in the Ontario Football Union. He became a phenomenal punter and won many great games for Queen's University by his remarkable boot work. He went overseas in 1915, but of late had been on Col. Clarke's staff of the Canadian Mechanical Transport Department. He was well known in Toronto and Montreal, having been employed for some time in each city.

ST. THOMAS CAR MEN THREATEN TO QUIT.

DEMAND INCREASE FROM 29 TO 35 CENTS, NOT CONTENT WITH 32½ OFFERED.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 4—A meeting of the street railway employees and Alderman Pearson, Chairman of the Street Railway Committee, was held in the City Hall this afternoon at the request of the employees, who threaten to lay down their jobs if their requested raise to 35 cents an hour is not forthcoming.

Their demand was dealt with at the committee meeting Thursday evening, and the members decided to meet the employees half-way, giving them 32 1-2 cents per hour. The men, who were previously getting 29 cents per hour, were not satisfied with this adjustment, and issued an ultimatum they they would quit on August 7 if the full amount was not granted them.

Chairman Pearson promised to call a special meeting of the committee, and in the meantime the employees consented to go back to work over Monday, at least St. Thomas Civic Holiday.

GRANDMA'S SUGAR BOWL.

It was Big and It Held a Lot of Sugar.

Of course you remember in the good old days when you went a-visiting down to grandma's on the farm, how there were loads and loads of good things to eat. Life was a real joy then, with three meals a day, and every one of them a feast. More than likely the table was in the kitchen, and how big and long it was, almost like a hotel table of those times, and there was need of its being long, with all that crowd gather around it. There was grandpa at one end, and grandma at the other, with the boys lined up at the tables, and "Lizbeth Ann" and the "Raggedy Man," and the company from town, and everybody.

There were mounds of "mashed" potatoes and sweet ham and brown gravy, and four kinds of preserves, and— everything good. Midway in this lavishness was a half-way station where the sugar bowl and spoonholder stood. Of course you remember the spoons, old, thin, silver spoons, with tiny tooth marks on them, and in faded script the initials, "B. A. J." Betsy Ann Jones; that was grandma before she married grandpa.

As for the sugar bowl, it wasn't one of these latter-day skimpy receptacles, with a cluster of fake "gooseberries" hand-painted (?) on the side, nor a near-fern leaf cut in glass. No, ma'am, it was a sugar bowl worth having, as big as an urn or the boys would scoop the sugar into their cups! "Lizbeth Ann," as she washed the dishes, would grumble and complain that "them men never stirred their coffee."—Omaha World-Herald.

Girls should never flirt in public until after they have a strong hold on the art.

Military Objector Gets 20 Years

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 5.—Private Earl S. Robinson, whose mother resides at No. 1 West Ninety-third street, New York city, originally sentenced to life imprisonment by a court martial, will have to serve only twenty years at hard labor in Fort Jay. Major General Hugh L. Scott to-day commuted the sentence. Robinson will forfeit all pay and at the expiration of his sentence receive a dishonorable discharge from the army. Robinson was one of the "conscientious objectors" passed upon by the special board named by President Wilson a month ago. The board characterized Robinson as having a religion of his own.

Robinson was drafted from Monmouth county. He gave his occupation as a farm hand, though his mother is wealthy. It was generally believed at that time that farm hands would be exempt from the draft. He was ordered to Camp Dix, where he refused to do militaty duty, don a uniform or obey orders. The court martial followed.

POOR COAL OUTLOOK.

St. Thomas Can't Get Order Filled; May Develop Peat.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 4.—Despite the fact that nearly $25,000 has been appropriated by the City Council for the buying of all kinds of fuel, and the establishing of a civic fuel yard in order to relieve the scarcity which seems inevitable this winter, it seems unlikely that the project will become a reality on account of the scarcity of coal at the present time. Orders for several cars of both bituminous and anthracite have been in for some months, but no deliveries have been forthcoming, nor are any promised.

In consequence, Mayor Horton is using every effort to get a company for the development of the several peat deposits under way before the cold weather sets in. Several samples of the new fuel have been given a trial in the city, and are reported to have proved very satisfactory, burning very similarly to soft coal.

BARREL OF WATER FOR $310

The Champion Profiteer Found-in a Man in Minnesota.

Vaso Ondulajivich is a war profiteer de luxe, if a charge preferred against him the other day has any foundation, says the St. Paul Pioneer. He is alleged to have fraudulently sold a barrel of water for $310 representing it to be whiskey. Vaso is accused of inserting a small spigot in the barrel and drawing from it a pint of liquor in the presence of the prospective pruchasers. The liquor was passed around and everybody commented on its general excellence Then a big party was aranged and a collection taken to purchase the barrel of "liquor". While the $310 was being raised, it is charged, Vaso filled the barrel with water. The party gathered and the barrel was tapped. To the dismay and disappointment of all, it yielded only many gallons of water, for which there was no immediate need.

Town Clerk Living Example of Efficiency of Modern Surgery.

Mr. Thomas Morris, Town Clerk of Oshawa, left the fore part of the week for Manitoba to spend a month or so, recouping his health, with his sons who reside there. Mr. Morris is a living example of the miraculous operations modern-day physicians are able to successfully perform. Five years ago next October he was operated on in Hamilton Hospital for cancer of the stomach. Nearly half of this vital organ had to be removed to eliminate the cancerous growth. When it was sewed up again it was found a new exit to the intestines was necessary as the position the stomach was left in as the result of the part being removed by the operation, did not allow it to empty itself. Therefore a new opening was made and the intestines entered thereto, nature's avenue being closed. Mr. Morris was kept alive by injecting food in liquid form, for weeks, until the remodelled stomach healed. With this improvised stomach, about half its normal size, he has been living for five years, and performing his duties.

HOW HUNS KEEP SECRETS WHILE UNDER ANAESTHETIC

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, Aug. 5. — Brought to an American dressing station on the banks of the Ourcq, a wounded German captain kept repeating "one, two, three" monotonously, but with an earnestness indicative of his concentration. An inquiry to a nurse elicited this explanation:—

"Oh, all these German officers do that."

"You see," said the nurse who was administering ether preliminary to an operation upon the German officer under the anaesthetic. It is like under the anaestthetic. It is like talking in your sleep. The Germans know this and every officer we get goes under the ether while counting. The result is that, instead of talking and giving information, they keep right on counting."

PARIS—Reports from Switzerland say that the epidemic of Spanish grippe in that country has grown to alarming proportions. Entire families have died from the disease. Funerals are being held at night, and relatives are forbidden to follow the bodies to the grave. The bodies of the dead turn black.

The epidemic is thought to have emanated from Austria or Germany.

THE TSCHAIKOWSKY QUARTET

Chautauqua Week Attraction.

THE TSCHAIKOWSKY QUARTET

Four disciples of Tschaikowsky (Chy-koff-ski), one of the greatest composers who ever lived, form this organization. Two violins, 'cello and piano make up the instrumentation—the ideal combination for effective presentation of great music. Each player is an artist, a real interpreter of music, and the leader a master musician who makes every program noteworthy.

Mr. Leon Wellman, the director of the Tschaikowsky Quartet, graduated with highest honors from the great musical conservatory of Moscow, Russia, and later completed a special course on composition and conducting at Petrograd. He won fame in England as a conductor and player, directing in both London and Manchester.

Mr. Frederick Blair, the 'cellist, is one of the leading American 'cellists. He was born in Hartford, Conn., and for some years has been Master of Chamber Music and Instructor in Violincello playing at Smith College.

Mr. Henry Levine is one of the most eminent Boston pianists. He is a native of that city.

Mr. Edward Kowinski was born of Russian ancestry, and studied at the Conservatory of Warsaw. He played in the Warsaw Philharmonic Orchestra, under Hellmesberger, and was later bandmaster of the Fourteenth Donnish Regimental Band at Bendin, Poland. Since 1905, he has been one of the first violins of the Boston Opera House Orchestra, of seventy-five players.

BREAK UP YOUR OLD MEADOWS NOW

The old meadow has been giving you: Hay, half a crop; weeds, a full crop.

In autumn plough thoroughly and as depely as the plant food will allow.

Proceed as follows: Plough shallow roll and harrow, disc-harrow and cultivate at intervals. Keep down all growth till autumn.

The new meadow will give you: Hay, a full crop; weeds, few or none.

Grain sown on land prepared as above will give a full crop. Fall or spring ploughed sod will give half a crop.

Clover and timothy sown on land prepared as above are usually a success. Fall or spring ploughed sod are usually a failure.

CORNWALL FIRM PENALIZED.

Messrs. William Borthwick and Cevrier Brothers, of Cornwall, have been prohibited by the Canada Food Board from purchasing or selling flour for a period of fifteen days from Aug. 1st. This action was taken because the parties named were not conserving in the distribution of flour and did not take sufficient precaution to prevent illegal exports of flour from Canada.

BIG LOSS IN GRANARIES

Bad Weather and Mice Destroy Much Grain.

Concrete Structures Best — How to Make Old Granary Efficient— Flush Ewes to Increase 1919 Lamb Crop — Great Shortage of Fall Wheat Seed.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

No hard and fast rules can be laid down for the erection of a convenient and efficient granary. Each problem requires a knowledge of local conditions and requirements. Granaries, in the majority of cases, are built in enclosures on the barn floor, and constructed with too little regard for strength, durability and convenience. These structures should be located immediately over the feed room, each bin having a chute with a controlling slide, or a canvas distributor to convey the grain to the hopper of the grinder; or if the grain is intended for market, to a sack placed on the scales below the chute ready to receive it. To facilitate emptying the grain, the floor of the bins should be sloping.

The important consideration in the construction of granaries and bins for loose grain is to be sure that the structure is designed with sufficient strength to prevent bulging of the sides and springing of the floor, for grain, owing to its enormous outward thrust, corresponding somewhat to that of water, has a tendency to burst the sides unless well braced or supported. Timber construction requires frequent repairs to prevent decay and general depreciation from use. It is always liable to climate conditions. The boards will crack and shrink in the summer when the bins may be empty, and when the new grain is dumped into the bins an enormous quantity promptly disappears into the cracks and crevices and through mice holes, entailing considerable loss to the farmer, to the consumer and to the nation. Thousands of bushels of grain are, in this way, annually lost to the producers through sheer indifference to the condition of the granary. Yet this preventable waste may be easily remedied and made secure by lining the bins with sheet metal.

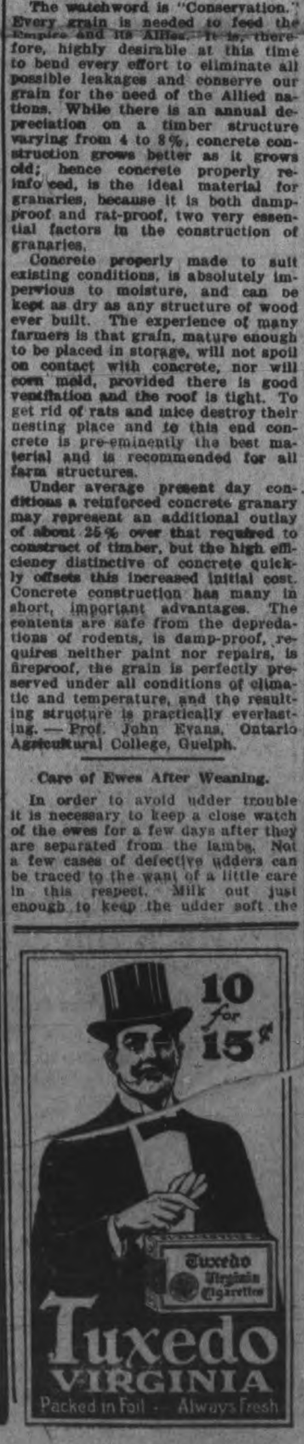
The watchword is "Conservation." Every grain is needed to feed the Empire and Its Allies. It is, therefore, highly desirable at this time to bend every effort to eliminate all possible leakages and conserve our grain for the need of the Allied nations. While there is an annual depreciation on a timber structure varying from 4 to 8%, concrete construction grows better as it grows old; hence concrete properly reinforced, is the ideal material for granaries, because it is both dampproof and rat-proof, two very essential factors in the construction of granaries.

Concrete properly made to suit existing conditions, is absolutely impervious to moisture, and can be kept as dry as any structure of wood ever built. The experience of many farmers is that grain, mature enough to be placed in storage, will not spoil on contact with concrete, nor will corn mold, provided there is good ventilation and the roof is tight. To get rid of rats and mice destroy their nesting place and to this end concrete is pre-eminently the best material and is recommended for all farm structures.

Under average present day conditions a reinforced concrete granary may represent an additional outlay of about 25% over that required to construct of timber, but the high efficiency distinctive of concrete quickly offsets this increased initial cost. Concrete construction has many in short, important advantages. The contents are safe from the depredations of rodents, is damp-proof, requires neither paint nor repairs, is fireproof, the grain is perfectly preserved under all conditions of climatic and temperature, and the resulting structure is practically everlasting. — Prof. John Evans, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Care of Ewes After Weaning.

In order to avoid udder trouble it is necessary to keep a close watch of the ewes for a few days after they are separated from the lambs. Not a few cases of defective udders can be traced to the want of a little care in this respect. Milk out just enough to keep the udder soft the day after the lambs have been weaned. After two days' time they are again milked out. Some ewes do not need any more attention after the second milking. Such ewes may be marked to indicate that they are dry. Three more days should elapse before the next milking is done and this method followed until it is certain the entire flock is safe. In conjunction with the method outlined above the ewes should be separated some distance from the lambs, and be on scant pastures until all are perfectly dry. This is a good time to go over the flock and cull out all undesirable members. Non-producers and those with broken mouths and poor udders should not be retained. A good deal of the success of the subsequent lamb crop will depend upon the treatment the ewes receive from time of weaning until after they are bred. They should have good pastures and be given an opportunity of putting on flesh. This is what is commonly called "flushing." Nothing is better for this purpose than rape pasture. It is usually from six weeks to two months from date of sowing that rape is ready for pasture. If rape pasture is not available new seeding or second crop of clover will serve fairly well. Stock should not be turned on rape or fresh clover for the first time when the leaves are wet from rain or even dew, in order to avoid trouble from bloating.— J. P. Sackville, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.



Colliding With a Planet.

Our small earth is not absolutely safe from collision with bodies in space, but is safe from collision with any planet in the solar system and with the sun. To be hit by a planet either the earth or the planet must leave its orbit. This is impossible, and it is also impossible that the earth can leave its orbit and fall to the sun. The earth is being hit by millions of meteors daily, from the size of pin heads up to the largest, several hundred tons in weight.

Fyfe after his arrest declared they were playing in the home of Jerry Shurick, No. 115 Amsterdam avenue. A revolver, according to Fyfe, was on the table. He said it belonged to Mr. Shurick. The boy asserted he picked up the weapon and pointed it at Carr. He never dreamed it was loaded until there was a loud report.

Carr fell with a bullet in his right temple. He was rushed to Knickerbocker Hospital, where he died.

U-Boat's Crew Blanches With Fear as Depth Bomb Sends Tremors Through Submersible

Captured Captain of British Merchantman Tells of German Dread of Allied Offensive Measures—Harnessed to Cart and Made to Draw Mail at Prison Camp.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Sensations experienced in German submarine while depth bombs were being discharged overhead were described recently by a British merchant ship captain who was a prisoner for fifteen days on board a U-boat.

In a interview the English commander, captured by the Germans after his vessel had been torpedoed related how the depth bombs shook the undersea craft and created consternation among the sailors. In one instance the faces of the Germans became white with fear and all stood trembling after the first shot, which was not near enough to destroy the submersible. All were expecting a second discharge.

The English commander reached his native land after having been imprisoned for a month at Bradenburg, where, he said he and other ship officers at times had been harnessed to carts which were used to haul mail and packages from the post office to the prisoners' camp.

Seven vessels were torpedoed by the Germans while the British captain was on board the U-boat. Previously the English officer had been in command of a merchant vessel which also had met its fate at the hands of a submarine crew.

TELL OF DREAD OF DEPTH BOMBS.

"On the third day after I had been taken prisoner," said the captain, "just after the midday meal, I gathered that the submarine was about to carry out on attack on a convoy which had just been sighted. The U-boat approached submerged for some distance and torpedoed a large steamer. Our whereabouts apparently were detected, I was told, by an allied light cruiser, for we dived rapidly to a great depth.

"Hardly had the submarine reached an even keel when we heard and felt a tremendous explosion, which caused the U-boat to vibrate from stem to stern. It was a depth charge from the cruiser.

"The effect on the crew was evident All stood trembling with faces blanched with fear, not attempting to speak, expecting a second charge, the result of which might mean the destruction of the boat and without the slightest chance for us to escape.

"There is no doubt in my mind of the mental attitude of the crew, for it was not the first experience of the men with a depth charge, and they had learned from others in the service what terrible weapons depth bombs were in the hands of skilful seamen.

"For some moments we waited; engines were stopped and all means were taken to prevent giving indication of our position. Minutes seemed like hours in such a situation. I'll admit that I was turning over in my mind whether I should see my family again. No additional explosions took place, however, and after remaining some eighteen fathoms deep for a long period we continued our voyage.

U-BOAT TREMBLES UNDER SHOCK

"A few days later we had another experience with depth charges, or "wasser bomben," as the German sailors call them. A sailing vessel had just been sunk by shell fire when two allied destroyers were sighted, and down we went. By the microphones the propellers could be heard and as the vessels came nearer we in the submarine could hear the thudding quite distinctly. To and fro the destroyers went searching for us. Evidently they picked up a clew, for there were two explosions ahead, but not so near us as that from the cruiser, but quite close enough to cause the submarine to tremble and then roll about as though in a heavy sea."

Prison camp conditions in Germany were described by the British captain as being deplorable.

"Although we were merchant ship captains imprisoned at Bradenberg we were made to suffer various indignities," he said.

"We were compelled to harness ourselves to carts which we had to draw through the streets to the station or post office in order to fetch our parcels and any commodities to camp. It was at this camp also that I saw three hundred Russian soldiers working, all of whom were in the last stages of tuberculosis. The poor fellows could not get enough to eat, and they would eagerly scrape discarded tin cans in the hope of finding particles of food. I have even seen German soldiers do the same thing. We were glad to search the cinder paths at any opportunity in anticipation of finding bits of coke or coal with which to cook our food."

The captain said his ship was torpedoed without warning, and that after he and all his men were afloat in lifeboats the submarine appeared on the surface and he was taken prisoner, the mates and seamen being permitted to start in the direction of land. Describing the submarine, the

By JANE PHELPS

Mr. and Mrs. Babcock Arrive

CHAPTER CXXXVII

The morning we expected them, our guests arrived. Their train got into Moreland very early, so I dressed to meet Mrs. Babcock before I went down to breakfast. Then, after we finished, I ran up to the guest room, arranged the freshly-cut flowers which had just been delivered, and hurried down to go to the station.

To my surprise, George was waiting for me.

"You have been so thoughtful, I rather imagined you might like me to ride to the station with you," he said when I expressed my surprise.

"Indeed I shall! it will be ever so much nicer." I told him. I knew it was my reward for doing what pleased him. That was his way.

We chatted quite gayly, on our way, but as we neared the station some of my old fears as to my ability to play hostess arose. I gave them utterance, and, to my surprise George only laughed at me.

"Nonsense! you will carry it off all right," he said, just as we reached our destination. We had scarcely no wait at all, and before I had time to worry or think any more about my own short-comings, the train was in, and we were welcoming them.

AN APPRECIATIVE GUEST.

"This is so kind of you," Mrs. Babcock said, regarding my meeting her, "So early, too. I surely did not expect such consideration."

George heard, and fairly beamed. Altho he rarely praised me himself, I had noticed that he was pleased when others did.

Mr. Babcock went directly to the office with George; Mrs. Babcock and I drove home, altho I had told the chauffeur to take us thru the prettiest part of the town. There were some beautiful homes in Moreland, and as it was a lovely bright day, they showed to good advantage.

"What a charming place," Mrs. Babcock said in her low cultivated voice, a voice that George had said was like music.

"Yes, it is a pretty place," I replied, then mentioned the names of some of the residents who occupied the handsomest places. Some of them were familiar to her, and she asked several questions, showing her interest. She wasn't going to be a bit hard to entertain, I thought, as we reached the house.

I went up-stairs with her, altho Annie was to wait upon her while she was with us. She was so pleased with my little preparations for her comfort and seemed to know that I had attended to them myself, for she said:

"This is charming! and you have made it so homelike. I am going to kiss you, my dear, may I? We have talked a great deal of you, since you were in Chicago. You are very like our darling girl."

"I am so glad!" I replied as I raised my face for a kiss. "And I am also happy that you and Mr. Babcock like me. I am young— and make many mistakes, but I want to please."

I don't know why I should have spoken as I did. Something in her manner made me want to tell her that I was trying to make myself into a woman who did things in the right way.

"My dear, you please without trying. Don't think of yourself as being obliged to put forth undue effort to please people. Just be your own, sweet, natural self."

A COMFORTABLE FEELING

"That's the way mother talks to me! But, you see, Mrs. Babcock, I had always before lived in a country town; city ways and city people were so new to me, that I have felt I must be thinking of what I did and what I said continually."

"Perhaps, at first, that may have been, in a way, necessary. But it is so no longer. You have nothing to fear by comparison with city women of your own age. You should not think of comparing yourself with those who are older in years and in experience."

It gave me such a comfortable feeling to listen to her. But I soon left her, and sent Annie to help her unpack the small steamer trunk— the only luggage they had brought.

"She's just lovely, Mary!" I said to the cook, as I went into the kitchen a moment. Mary was still my confidant in any household matters, altho I was not so in need of her as when I was first married, or when I had been unhappy.

"She looks nice," Mary returned, by which I knew she had been peeping when my guest arrived. "She's old, tho."

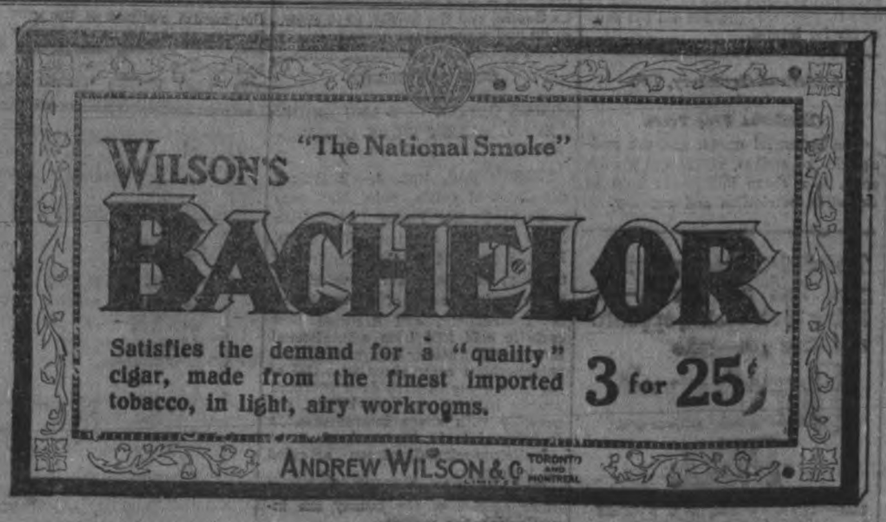
"No, not old, but of course older than I am. I want everything particularly nice, every single meal, while she is here. She has a wonderful cook," I added, so putting Mary on her mettle.

"Huh"— she sniffed, "I guess we can give her as good as she gets at home."

I smiled as I left the kitchen. I knew there would be nothing served to my guests which was not as perfect as Mary could make it. A little flattery mixed with praise of some dinner I had attended always brought the response:

"I'll take a back seat for no one, when it comes to cookin'." Then she would take particular pains.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—It was reported here that Herbert Hoover, American Food Administrator, and his party had a narrow escape in a German air raid on Boulogne, when a bomb blew in the windows of their private car.



Ancient Music.

Exploration in Bible lands has led to the discovery of a wealth of materials throwing light upon the arts and crafts which are referred to in the Old Testament. The discoveries relating to music have a charm all their own, and excavations at Nipper show, among other things, a shepherd of 6,000 years ago sitting on the grass with a lamb on one side of him and his dog on the other, lazily plucking at the strings of a leathered-covered lute. Prof. Garstang unearthed three actual instruments of Beni Hassan—a large harp, a pair of long reed flutes and a timber drum—all found in tombs dated between the age of Abraham and that of Moses.

Beating the Bakers.

"Oh, I am almost tired to death," said the woman who spends half her time addressing club meetings. "Our political economy club has been in session all day passing resolutions and drawing up petitions demanding a law regulating the price of bread. Only think! Three dollars' worth of flour costs, when baked into bread, $13. It's outrageous. We'll soon all be bankrupt. The bakers must be made to feel the power of the law. You should have been at the meeting."

"I couldn't come, I was too busy," said the calm faced woman.

"Busy on a club day? What at?"

"Baking bread," said the calm-faced woman.

Origin of the Word Academy.

Academus was a wealthy Greek of Athens who lived several hundred years before the birth of Christ. Among his possessions was a beautiful grove, where young men used to congregate and listen to the teachings of wise men, such as Plato and Socrates. This developed into the school of modern times, and these modern schools take their name "academy" from the old Greek Academus. The real meaning of the word academy is a school for boys.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Sour Gassy Stomachs and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little bisurated magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach, which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

HOW TREES EAT.

They Seem to Digest Their Food Before Absorbing It.

Every gardener knows that a tree can be fed and made to grow with increased vigor. If proper nourishment in the form of humus, nitrogen, phosphate, etc., be placed about its roots the tree will absorb this food and grow rapidly and strongly.

But how the tree feeds is somewhat more difficult to explain. In all probability the tree digests its food first and consumes it afterward. Certain it is that the average tree has no means of consuming food as a whole, as members of the animal kingdom absorb it. It is well known that the larvae of certain insects digest their food first and consume it afterward. Observation would indicate that this is exactly what the tree does. The tiny rootlets act on the substances in the earth, dissolving and breaking them up so they can be absorbed through the root pores. In order so to be taken up the chemicals must be in liquid form and devoid of all waste.

The end of each root is armed with a horny substance with which it can burrow through the hard soil in search of food. When food is found it is dissolved into a liquid and absorbed by the root fibers. From the root the food is carried by the sap to all parts of the tree.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Working Overtime.

Mr. Griffin had spent an anxious afternoon at the office and hurried home at an unusually early hour.

"How do you feel, dear? What did the doctor say?" he questioned his wife as she lay on a couch, her eyes half closed.

"'Oh, he asked me to put out my tongue," she murmured.

"Yes?"

"And after looking at it he said, 'Overworked'."

Mr. Griffin heaved an audible sigh of relief. "I have perfect faith in that doctor, Mabel," said he firmly. "You will have to give it a rest."

The Distinguishing Mark.

"My wife has a twin sister who looks so much like her that you would not be able to tell them apart."

"I suppose it has become easy for you to do so?"

"Yes, but it wouldn't be if my wife showed the same respect for me that her sister does."

It is harmless.

The car was crowded, and while collecting fares the conductor had stumbled twice in two minutes over the feet of Willie Smith, and, seeing that the aforesaid Master Willie was quite the smallest passenger on board, he had a nasty suspicion that on each occasion a foot had been put out deliberately to trip him.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Empty House

By Fannie Barnett Linsky

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The little brown car had swung with a soft humming sound down the smooth road, and its sole occupant was sitting with her hands in her lap, looking dreamily out at the landscape and the rows of houses that they passed. Many a one passing by on the sidewalk might have envied the lovely young woman who sat there, so slender and aristocratic, in the little brown car, but she herself was not even conscious of the looks, whether envious or admiring, that were cast in her direction.

If, as the poets say, "the eyes are mirrors of the soul," then it was very apparent that Elaine Hargrave was not happy, for the sad, far-away expression on her face told its own story.

As the machine turned the corner of the street, however, she began to take more interest in her surroundings, and she watched carefully the houses she passed.

Suddenly she leaned forward and spoke to the chauffeur.

"Stop, Jacques," she commanded, sharply, "at the house 'To Let.'"

The brakes ground sharply, and Elaine stepped out at once. She looked again and drew in her breath quickly. A wave of crimson flooded her face. The chauffeur wondered at the sudden order, for they were already late for dinner, and he did not think that his mistress could possibly want to look at this empty house.

The glory of a perfect spring day was over all the out-of-doors. It seemed a day to tempt anyone to remain in the open, and drink in to the full the beauties of bountiful nature, but evidently this did not attract the girl, for she mounted the steps of the house at once.

She looked around at Jacques after she had rung the bell. "Wait till I come out," she said.

A slovenly-looking woman suddenly appeared in response to her ring. She was as dusty looking, somehow, as the house was, and quite as dejected looking; but Elaine scarcely saw her as she spoke:

"I want to see the house," said the girl. "I suppose I can go in?"

"Well, it's gettin' pretty late, mum, and I don't think as you'd be seein' much," replied the old woman.

"You can give me your candle," said Elaine, quickly, as she slipped a coin into the not over clean hand, and with a little gasp, the woman yielded.

The front door was opened and Elaine went through the passage and glided upstairs like a ghost, the woman promptly returning to the lower regions, whence she had come. Lighting the dirty candle from a gas jet burning in the passageway, Elaine went from one room to another with quick, nervous haste. Her face was quite colorless, but her eyes burned with a feverish light that made her seem very different from the brilliant lady of fashion that most people knew as Elaine Hargrave. Here she was but a girl; and face to face with memory, a memory that was still alive after three years of bitter struggle—the struggle of trying to forget.

For today was the third anniversary of what was to have been Elaine Hargrave's wedding day, but that wedding never took place; and on the third anniversary of "what might have been," as Elaine expressed it herself, and just home from travels that had taken her into the faraway corners of the world, the girl had become possessed with the desire to see the place that once she had expected to call "home."

She stopped for a moment in her flitting from room to room and looked about her. Here, but three short years before, she had planned to come as a happy bride, and here she had left the man she loved after their bitter quarrel, called him "Puritan" and "Prude," because he would not countenance the ways of her "set." How empty and false were the ways of that very same set, she had come bitterly to realize, just as in her heart of hearts she had come to respect all the more the man who would not bow down to them. And how empty was her heart as well!

She could see him plainly, if she but shut her eyes for a moment, as he stood before her that day so long ago, so tall and proud and good to look at. She had always taken such pride in his good looks, all the more so because he had not belonged to her "set," but had come to the city unknown, and had worked up to an enviable position. She could almost hear again his earnest voice as he remonstrated with her on that last fateful day in this house.

"I know that I do not belong to this 'set' that you seem to think so much of, dear," he said, "and perhaps that is why I find it so hard to accustom myself to the things that they do, but I am certain that I have too much regard for the woman who is to be my wife to want to see her follow in the footsteps of people whose chief aim in life seems to be to attract the attention of others. You are made for better things than this, Elaine, dear. Won't you be guided by me in this thing and give these people up? Please, dear, for my sake?"

She recalled now how she had flung away from him, although in her heart she had known even then that he was right, but some perverse spirit seemed to urge her not to give in; how she had refused to do what he asked of her, telling her "that she would live her life without him, and that she realized now that it was a mistake to expect an outsider—a plebeian—to understand the ways of her kind of people." Even now, after three years, Elaine still winced as she thought of those hasty words of hers. How she must have hurt him—and all the time she was hurting herself as well; and he had let her go on without a word of protest, in the end gravely agreeing with her, and saying that he would never ask her to come back again. And he hadn't. And they never met nor wrote.

Elaine's eyes were opened now, but of course it was far too late to give in and acknowledge herself in the wrong. Three years of time had rolled between them, the bar of passionate words on either side keeping them apart.

She started once more on her pilgrimage through the rooms. First the dining room, with the familiar paper, which she herself had selected. He had not been so well-off then, and had insisted upon living in the style that his own earnings would entitle them to—but he had worked hard to give her as many as possible of the luxuries that she had been accustomed to.

"So small a thing to mean so large a loss," murmured the girl to herself. She had read those words somewhere, and now they came into her mind. She stood for a time looking out through the clouded windows. Great tears welled up in her eyes and poured down over her face—as if the barriers were suddenly let down to allow tides of memory to flow in and engulf her.

She had never allowed herself to think in this way before, but the spirit of love seemed to have come back to the dusty little room from which he had flown three years before. For her time passed unheeded.

Darkness fell. Outside, James felt very cross. The idea of anyone spending so much time looking at an empty house! He folded his arms and went half asleep. Down in the basement, the care-taker, having finished her supper, came up, and, forgetting all about her visitor, or, thinking that she had surely gone away long ago, closed the door and went home.

And Elaine dreamed on—for how long, she knew not. But suddenly she awoke to reality with a start, to notice that it had grown very dark outside, and that there were footsteps coming through the hall. Then came the sound of a voice that seemed familiar.

"Hold the light low there, please. I wish to see all the rooms. There, thank you; that's better."

Elaine had crept to the door, and was listening with a white face. She had a glimpse of the two men as they passed the door — one, evidently the night watchman, holding the lamp, and the other, the man she had sent away three years before.

"So he, too, has not forgotten," thought Elaine, bitterly.

She wondered if she should speak—make her presence known — but each time she tried to her courage failed her. She looked again. Yes, there he was! Standing in front of the open fireplace. Once more she peered through the open door. "How changed he was," she said to herself. "How much older and graver."

Her face was still wet with the traces of her recent tears, but she did not even know it as she went up and tapped gently on the wall between the two rooms. He turned round suddenly with a great start. Then he came to the door and opened it wider. Elaine walked into the room.

All the light from the lamp seemed to shine on the slender figure, standing there so erect and proud. The girl's face was white and strained, but her blue eyes shone like twin stars. The man started back with a little cry of unutterable astonishment.

"Elaine! Good God!"

"Listen," she said softly, her hands outstretched. "Let me humble myself while I can. I need you, Richard—I want you—you and the little house."

"Elaine—Elaine—" The man could but whisper her name, for the sudden sight of her seemed to have dazed him. "Elaine—why did you come?"

Quite suddenly all the fear and pride seemed to die out of the girl's heart. "Because I loved you," she whispered softly. "Because in the old empty house I came to understand that I could never be happy without you. When I stood in the little room that we had planned together"—her voice broke—"Richard, forgive me—"

She was in his arms, sobbing out the words she could not speak, and his arms were around her as he murmured: "It's for you to forgive me, dearest. My little girl! And I thought that you did not care!"

She clung to him, even as he held her, as he kissed lip and brow and hair. He could not let her go. He would never let her go again. "My dearest," he whispered, "not for long will it be the Empty House."

His Choice of Professions.

A rich New Yorker decided that his indolent son must go to work. The father acquired his wealth by hunting for oil in Kentucky and is self-made. In his ultimatum to the leisure-loving son, he told him to have on his desk the next morning the professions he would like to follow—and the father would select the one for which he thought the son best suited. Here is the list the son turned in:

Hammock demonstrator. Night watchman at police headquarters. Floorwalker in a bird store. Head waiter in the Automat. Director of the vacation season at sing-song. Ringmaster at a merry-go-round. Window cleaner in Grant's tomb, and cheer leader in the hall of fame.

A Poor Showing.

Corns Lift Off
Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus off with fingers.

No humbug! You truly can lift off every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses on bottom of feet without one bit of pain.

A genius in Cincinnati discovered freezone. It is an ether compound and tiny bottles of this magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Apply several drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with the fingers. You feel no pain while applying freezone or afterwards.

Just think! No more corns or calluses to torture you, and they go without causing one twinge of pain or soreness.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle of freezone on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

Munitions Workers

Eternal vigilance and unfaltering effort is the price we must pay for victory.

If our efforts are not equal to or greater than our enemies' we shall become their prey.

We are forced to recognize a considerable "slackening up," man for man and woman for woman, in Canadian munitions production.

The high motive which animated and stimulated the munitions worker a year or more ago is seemingly dying away. The work has become too much "a matter of course."

This attitude must be conquered. Munitions labour was never so vital. Its effect upon the morale of our Armies was never so potent.

Catastrophe would actually follow a continued slowing up of munitions labour.

Put the old fire and enthusiasm into your work.

THE MAID HE WANTED

By CORA ASHWORTH.

[Copyright, , by American Press Association.]

Joseph Miriam, bachelor, woman hater, advocate of single life for men and lax divorce laws, having tired of his bachelor sleeping quarters and meals at his club, decided to keep house. Having rented a comfortable furnished dwelling in a desirable location, he advertised for a girl to do cooking and light housework. He was not used to advertising for servants and wrote a very poor hand. The slip he handed in at the newspaper office was hurriedly counted by the receiving clerk, stamped for the "Situations Wanted" columns and put through the composing room mill. It ended with the words, "Apply at No. —, Clermont street, between 5 and 6 o'clock p. m."

The next afternoon Mr. Miriam went from business to his domicile expecting to see a mob of servant girls besieging his front door. He was disappointed. No one was there. He went in, sat down, took the evening paper from his pocket, read and waited. At half past 5 there was a ring at the bell. He opened the front door, and there stood a young woman. Miriam thought her well dressed for a servant, but remembered that many a servant in her street clothes might easily be mistaken for a lady.

"I've come about the advertisement," said the girl.

"Come in."

She entered the sitting room and seated herself in an easy chair. Miriam, somewhat surprised at this want of deference on the part of a servant for a gentleman, remained standing.

"I'm afraid," he said, "you won't do."

"Won't do!" exclaimed the girl in evident surprise.

"What I want is a girl so ugly that she'll never be a temptation for me and can't, therefore, get me into her clutches. I don't wish any woman about me except to cook and take care of the house."

The girl stared at the speaker without making any reply for a time, then took from under her glove a slip she had cut from a newspaper and read it carefully.

"You intended to advertise for a girl," she said.

"Yes, a servant girl who would know her place and not sit in the parlor while her master stands before her like a manservant before his mistress."

The girl sat surveying the advertiser with a curious expression on her face. At last she said:

"You are one of the most sensible men I ever met. It's every woman's object to get all out of a man she can. If you get an attractive woman in here she might snare you. Indeed, she might fall in love with a handsome man like you, and that would be dreadful."

"You, a woman, say this?"

"Only a woman knows a woman."

A beautiful smile overspread Mr. Miriam's countenance. "I'm sure," he said, "that if I gave you the situation you're so honest, so sensible, that you would. I've half a mind to try you."

"You have made a little mistake," the girl interrupted. "I have called to secure the place for a maid I have had in my service for several years and whom I can heartily recommend." And, taking out a card on which was engraved "Miss Clara Sturgis," she wrote on it her address. Mr. Miriam stood gaping at her in astonishment. "If you will come to my house this evening," she added, "I will show you the maid. She is a good girl and homely as a Dutch meeting house."

She rose, extended her hand graciously, smiled sweetly and withdrew. Miriam saw her out at the front door and watched her go down the street. When she turned a corner he went back to his sitting room and exclaimed: "Well, I'll be jinged!"

For the first time in his life he realized the loneliness of a house without a woman.

The same evening Mr. Miriam stood again in presence of Miss Sturgis in the coziest little reception room he had ever seen. A bright fire was blazing on the hearth. The lady invited him to sit by her before it and began to talk with him in a sympathetic way about the servant problem. She told him that the maid about whom she had spoken to him had accepted a situation, but he could call again in two or three days. She would recommend another—one who was pitted with smallpox and suffered with bleared eyes. Then she kept him an hour, delighting him with her intelligence, her womanly interest in him. Indeed, an especial charm she seemed to find in him.

Mr. Miriam had fallen into the very trap he had wished to avoid. Miss Sturgis was renowned for making any man she wished fall in love with her. She kept Mr. Miriam calling on her with a view to securing a servant for him and in the end simply made mincemeat of his heart. Then when he asked her to be his wife she stared at him in blank surprise and exclaimed:

"Why, I thought you wanted a servant!"

Mr. Miriam went away crushed. For months he shut himself up—without a maid—and never smiled. Then he told his trouble to his sister-in-law.

"Joe," she said to him, "you're a fool. The lady would never have taken all the trouble to snare you if she had been indifferent to you. Try again, and keep trying."

Mr. Miriam did try again, but in a different way. He secured a dummy. This had the desired effect. Miss Sturgis sent for him under pretense that she had at last found a maid for him. He went and found the maid he wanted.

The pleasure of giving is often spoiled byt he wrench it costs to let go.

A regular girl never thinks her photograph looks like her unless it doesn't look like her.

U-BOAT'S CREW BLANCH

British captain said:—

"She was a fairly large craft, of recently numbering, having three torpedo tubes two in the bow and one aft, and carried ten torpedoes. She was also armed with a gun for shell fire just forward of the conning tower.

"My first meal abroad the U-boat consisted of a stew made with stringy meat, probably horse flesh, supplemented by small portions of sausage, with black bread. As the voyage progressed this bread became mildewed and uneatable and then some bread of lighter color, which had been kept in hermetically sealed receptacles, was served, but was even more unpalatable than the black bread. The coffee was made of burned barley and acorns. The commander and officers of the U-boat fared as the lower ratings, but were able to supplement their allowances with tinned ham and other canned food."

As the submarine was forced to keep below the water's surface a great deal of the time life oh board was anything but pleasant.

"The boat sweater and all spare clothing became saturated with moisture, while the atmosphere often became foul and breathing difficult," he asserted. "While we were submerged the crew would start the gramaphone. The machine supplied music which was played triumphantly when the U-boat got another victim. Really, the sinking off any innocent merchantman caused that crew as much joy as if the members had sunk a war ship.

REJOICE OVER SINKINGS

"One night there was more than the usual amount of rejoicing and the gramaphone's liveliest airs were played. The Germans had torpedoed an oil tanker which, according to the commander sank in thirty seconds. I could not help wondering at the mentality of men who could rejoice at such a thing, knowing that without giving them the slightest chance of defending themselves or escaping they had sent innocent sailors to their deaths.

"The next day we seemed to be out of the tack of steamers, and I went into the conning tower and saw the officers amusing themselves by shooting at gulls or empty bottles.

"By this time the subamrine evidently had reached the extreme outward point of her voyage, and we started on our return trip to Heligoland. Three Norwegian ships were stopped for the purpose of obtaining fresh food. Soon after this there was much excitement when it was ascertained that there was a British submarine in our vicinity. By listening the crew could hear the enemy submarine in our vicinity. By listening was going to attack us. We submerged and eventually dodged the British vessel.

"The U-boat was equipped with powerful wireless apparatus ,and each evening, providing the weather and other conditions were favorable, the German commander remained on the water's surface in wireless communication with his base."

The British captain finally arrived in Heligoland, and afterward was transferred to Bradenburg. Eventually he was taken to Switzerland and released, reaching England on June 19.

And now the captain is getting ready to go to sea again.

FLAVOR EXTRACTS SCARCE

IMPORTATIONS FROM FRANCE, ITALY AND SOUTH AMERICA STOPPED.

The Flavoring Extract Manufacturers' Association, in session recently at a New York City Hotel, declared that there is already an acute scarcity of lemon, vanilla and orange flavoring extracts becauee of decreased importations, says Tavern Talk of New York.

"Before the war most of these flavors came from Italy, France and South American countries," said F. B. Beers, head of the Organization. "Now that all importations from these countries have been stopped the only way we can get vanilla is by rail from Mexico. The cutting off of the orange and lemon oils we formerly bought from France and Italy has created a problem.

"The sugar and alcohol shortage has had to curtail production largely, and higher prices for flavoring extracts have resulted."

GO-CARTS WEAKEN MINDS

Cause Displacement of Children's Vertebrae, Says Boston Osteopath.

Go-carts and perambulators are often a cause of feeble-mindedness in small children, according to Dr. Raymond W. Bailey, of Philadelphia, in an address before the National Osteopathic convention at Boston. He said that these often cause a displacement of the vertebrae, but that such cases usually can be cured.

He stated that no baby should be placed in such a position that it must be forced to support its own head by muscular effort until such time as it does this naturally, and even then it should not be subjected to motion. No baby should be put in motion, supporting its own head weight until well along toward the twenty-fourth month, he said.

Any go-cart or other conveyance, except a carriage where the infant may lie with its head supported, he believed dangerous to infants.

My grandmother gave it to my mother, she to me, and I to my baby. For summer complaint it has no equal. I never miss a chance of telling my neighbours about it. Germans May Not Be Able To Hold The Present Line

French Troops Progress Toward The Avre

TERRITORY RECOVERED

Some of the Most Important Results of the Present Fighting—Enemy Casualties.

ALLIED STRENGTH

(By Webb Miller—United Press).

PARIS, Aug. 6.—One of the most important results of the present fighting, aside from regaining the initiative, recovering French territory and wiping out the menace to Paris, is the effective depletion of German man power.

Since July 15 Ludendorff has hurled no less, and probably more, than 770,000 men against the Allies, of which 75,000 will never fire another shot. More than 50,000 of these are prisoners. Tens of thousands are buried in the Rheims-Soissons pocket, or are lying in German hospitals, permanently maimed.

Covered With Dead.

In some places the former enemy bulge is still cobbled with Boche dead, the French and Americans having no time to bury them.

Reports received from Switzerland state that long trains behind the German lines are bearing off wounded to the already congested hospitals. In man power alone the Allies have dealt the enemy a staggering blow, from which he cannot recover. German power passed its Zenith months ago, while daily, almost hourly, the Allied strength is growing as each ship from America touches these shores.

PETERBORO PEOPLE IN AUTOMOBILE RUN-OFF

Narrow Escape of a Party Motoring From Toronto.

Last night about 10 o'clock a party of young people, motoring back to Peterboro from Toronto, met with an experience they will not easily forget. It appears that as they were passing through Bewdley they were met by a party of bowlers returning from Peterborough in a McLaughlin car, who refused to give room on the road for passing. Just as the two cars were about to meet, the Peterborough party, in order to save a clash, were forced to the side of the road, near a bridge over the river at this point. Their car suddenly skidded, which dashed them against a tree and a post of the bridge, both of which were broken, and the car was plunged into the water.

The force of the collision gave the occupants of the car a bad shaking up, smashed the wind shield to pieces, and did other damage. The car was quickly brought to a standstill and become stalled in the river. The young ladies were extracted with difficulty, and had to remain until about two o'clock in the morning, when two young men came along in a car and brought them to their homes in the city.

The same party of bowlers had previously run down two motor cycle drivers at the same place, injuring them badly, and smashing one of the machines.

EVERIST HEATH IS UNDER ARREST

How the Red Tape at Kingston Operates.

Everist Heath, who a few days ago returned from Kingston, where he was ordered to report to the military authorities has been notified that he is to all intents and purposes under arrest for failing to report to the proper authorities. It appears that when Heath reached Kingston he met Major H. P. Cook, who is in charge of the work for this district. Major Cook advised him to return to Peterborough, as it would not be necessary for him to go out to Barriefield. This he did, and the result is a warrant, issued yesterday, for the arrest of Heath. It is altogether likely a military escort will be sent to Peterborough to carry out the wishes of the military authorities.

Heavy Fighting Continues Along Vesle River Front

The Enemy is Holding to the Heights Along the North Bank of the River—Severe Losses Inflicted on the Enemy.

RIVER CROSSED IN MANY PLACES

(By Fred S. Ferguson—United Press Service.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 6.—German resistance continued to-day along the Vesle. Heavy fighting is under way on the entire line. The enemy is holding the heights along the north bank of the river. His artillery fire has increased, while his machine guns sweep the river crossings and approaches to the heights. The American artillery is pounding the Boche positions. Meantime additional allied infantry and other units have crossed the river.

Rain Falling.

The situation in Fismes is peculiar. Although the town is held by our troops, German snipers are still concealed in buildings and cellars. Americans on both sides of the Vesle are mopping up these snipers and stray machine guns. Our advance forces are likely to continue behind Fismes and let the rear elements finish the mopping up operations. American cavalry is patrolling the Fismes region. Rain is still falling and all roads are semi-rivers. Fields are soft under foot, men and horses sinking deep in the mud at every step.

Pressing Forward.

In spite of these handicaps, the Americans continue to feel out the German line and are constantly pressing forward. The Vesle in this region is about fifteen metres (about 50 feet) wide, and is swift and deep. The crossings were made, however, over partially wrecked bridges, the men climbing over the wreckage that still protrudes.

Just prior to the attack on Fismes the Americans inflicted bloody losses on the enemy and the latter retreated below the heights south and east of the town. The Americans reached the crest of the heights as the Boches were retreating down the slope. Our riflemen and machine gunners opened up a deadly fire and soon carpeted the hills with German dead and wounded. The Boches strung quantities of barbed wire in the Vesle river, but it did not retard the Americans' crossing.

Oppressive Shadow of Defeat Hovers Over German Armies

German Summer Campaign So Far is a Complete Failure—Germans Are Outnumbered.

DEFENSIVE STRATEGY

(By William Phillips—United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 6. — The German armies are at bay. Their full retreat toward the Ainse has forced them to abandon positions along the Aisne and Ancre Rivers, and near Givenchy the Teuton hordes are face to face with three rock-bottom facts: First, the German summer campaign so far is a complete failure. Second, their reserves are badly used up. They are equalled, if not outnumbered, by eager forces, which are increasing weekly by tens of thousands of absolutely fit Americans, who are fighting with impatience to get at the Germans.

Von Hindenburg and Von Ludendorff, the German leaders, have only one card left to play, and it is a card of doubtful value. It consists of a complete rearrangement of the Western front, suiting it to the Allied conditions by shortening the line and adopting a purely defensive strategy behind the rivers and other natural barriers. This plan would involve the selecting of one spot, where remnants of the armies from everywhere would be collected to try for a decision.

Bid for Victory.

This bid for victory, if made, must have the devil's luck, plus all possible aid from the German gott, plus a large element of the miraculous. Without these conditions, this must fail, after which the last spark of Germany's initiative is gone for ever.

Over the wreck of what was once the world's greatest offensive army hovers to-day the oppressive shadow of defeat. The prisoners admit there is a spirit of hopelessness in the German camp, which it gradually spreading to all parts of the Empire.

Destroying a Submarine

How a Woman and a Baby Accounted for a U-Boat—The Baby Exploded.

(By Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Aug. 6.— (Via Reuter's Limited.)—Interesting revelations regarding the work of British mystery ships, which have played an important part in the anti-submarine warfare, are made by a naval correspondent of the Times. They show how British seamen have met German craft and cunning. Until this week the public has known nothing about mystery ships, known in the navy as "Q" ships, although several officers, notably Capt. Gordon Campbell, have been decorated for their services on these vessels. Details now can be made public as the Germans are becoming aware, through bitter experience, of the methods used against them.

Baby Exploded.

How a woman and baby accounted for a U-boat is told by the correspondent. The submarine ordered a vessel to surrender and fired a few shells into her. The boats then left the ship, leaving on board the woman, who ran up and down the deck with the baby in her arms as if mad. The U-boat came alongside the vessel and the woman hurled the baby into the open hatch. The baby exploded and blew out the bottom of the submarine. The woman was decorated with the Victoria Cross. The correspondent says that the first mention of the mystery ship was in the case of the Baralong, which on August 19, 1915, sank a U-boat after the torpedoing of the British liner Arabic. It will be remembered, he says, that the German government protested that there was nothing to indicate the Baralong's war-like character. The Baralong case was probably not the first in which a ruse was used, and since then the disguising of armed vessels as innocent merchantmen for dealing with submarines, has attained considerable dimensions.

"BILL" WILLIAMS STILL WITH US.

Contrary to a report which gained rapid circulation throughout the city this morning, "Bill" Williams has not come to an untimely end. Probably as a result of some vivid imagination, it was stated that Mr. Williams had been caught in a lift at the Renfrew Manufacturing Co., and had his neck broken.

PAUSE AT THE VESLE

Frontal Attack Under Present Conditions is Not Worth the Cost.

MUST GO EVENTUALLY

(By J. W. Thompson—United Press.)

PARIS, Aug. 6.— To drive the Germans back by frontal attacks along the Vesle would exact a heavy death toll from the Allies, much in excess of what the Germans themselves would suffer. Gen. Foch has repeatedly shown he will not engage in the short-sighted tactics. Artillery bombardments or threats to encircle the Germans are the rightly favoured methods of attack under present conditions. It is not worth the heavy cost of direct assaults of the German position to drive Von Hindenburg beyond the Aisne more rapidly than he must go eventually.

Major Offensive.

The time for the Allies' major offensive has not yet come, and the fewer the casualties suffered in the meantime the more certain will the final result of the offensive be. It doesn't matter to Gen. Foch, whether Von Hindenburg is compelled to shorten his line now or later. The inevitable must happen. Von Hindenburg, however, strongly desires Gen. Foch to try to force the inevitable before it is time. If Von Hindenburg can inveigle Gen. Foch into engaging in destructive minor offensives before America's millions are fully prepared, there remains a chance that in the end the Allies will have whittled away their new reserves. Son Von Hindenburg turns at bay and invites the foremost units of Foch's troops to engage in pitched battles. But the trap is without avail. Foch is familiar with all the tricks of the old fox. Inexorable as fate, the American troops are filing into France. Time, therefore, awaits at Foch's command, and the pause at the Vesle is an integral part of the Allies' strategy.

"CERTAIN ELEMENTS OF UNREST," SAYS "RED" MICHAEL

Member for Red Deer Was in Ottawa To-day—Crops in Alberta

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, August 6.—Dr. Michael Clark, M.P., for Red Deer, Alta. is in Ottawa to-day and leaves for Hamilton to-night. His visit is entirely unofficial, and he does not intend to make any speeches.

"Union government," remarked Red Michael this morning, "was elected to win the war. God knows there is plenty of scope for their activities. In my opinion they will be well advised to accept in good part constructive criticisms from its friends." Dr. Clark declared that there were certain elements of unrest in the country which might suggest that a session of Parliament before the new year were advisable. This, however, is a matter for the government to decide.

The member for Red Deer declares that drought in the south, and frost in the north have damaged the crops of his province, in the centre, however, the prospects are good.

ALLIED FORCES WERE LANDED

Russian Population Manifested Great Enthusiasm.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, August 6.—Official announcement was made to-day of the landing of Allied forces, naval and military, at Archangel on August 2nd. The landing was in concurrence with the wishes of the Russian population, it is stated, and created general enthusiasm.

ZEPPELIN SHOT DOWN

Attempted Raid on Coast of England Proved to be a Complete Fiasco

ANOTHER DAMAGED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The attempted raid by German Zeppelins on the East Coast of England last night proved to be a complete fiasco, according to reports thus far received. British fliers, who are ever on the alert along the coast, were ready for visitors and met them out at sea, bringing down one in flames, damaging a second, and driving a third away. What happened to the other airships in the squadron is not disclosed in the official statement. The fact, however, that the report said, "Zeppelins crossed the coast," is ground for the presumption that these did reach land. There is no evidence as yet that they dropped any bombs, and it is probable that their crews were kept busy protecting their ships against pursuing British airmen.

The text of the official statement follows:

Five enemy airships attempted to cross the coast last night, but while still at sea were attacked by the Royal Air Force contingents co-operating with naval units. Three were engaged in action, and one was shot down in flames forty miles from the coast. Another was damaged, but probably succeeded in reaching its base.

Council's Sympathy to Bereaved Members

The Council last night expressed its sympathy with the Ald. Langford and the members of his family in the recent death of ex-Ald. William Langford, and with Ald. Jones in the death of his mother. Resolutions of condolence were passed, and copies ordered to be sent to the bereaved families.

REGISTRATION WAS SATISFACTORY

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.— Senator Gideon Robertson, Acting Minister of Labour and head of the Canada Registration Board, declares that the results so far obtained from the registration of the Dominion man power have been satisfactory. "Before the registration commenced," he said this morning, "we notified the Provincial Premiers that they could secure from the cards as they were handed in to the various registrars full particulars of the agricultural prospects. Not all of them took advantage of the offer. In Ontario, however, it was found that in the Toronto district there were 101,000 prospects, and in the Ottawa district 26,000. The Natural Resources committee is now engaged in supplying names to farmers, and the supply is quite in excess of the demand. In Manitoba information was gathered, indicating that there were in the cities 25,702 men who had declared their willingness to engage in agriculture. In Saskatchewan and Alberta men are also being secured. We have a staff working on New Brunswick lists.

"We are sending that province 500 names a day so that they will be well supplied with prospects. In Quebec there has been no shortage of labour." "Altogether," said Senator Robertson, "the results of the registering are excellent."

Harrassing The Germans

(By William Philip Simms.)
(United Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 6. — Crown Prince Rupprecht's adjustment of his line, especially the abandonment of the plateau west of the Aure, from Montdidier to the confluence of the Luce, is very significant as the plateau gave observation of the entire valley of the Moye and the Amiens-Paris railway, threatening it.

Heavy Shelling.

There was gunfire in front of Arras, particularly in the Givenchy region, north of the La Bassee canal, where German artillery is active, probably covering their retreat. Thousands of gas shells were thrown into St. Unant yesterday, and the Ypres, Fletre and Hinges sectors and the back areas were shelled.

British patrols continue extremely busy. Likewise the British artillery is harassing German communications everywhere. This front appears to be increasingly uncomfortable for the Boches, prisoneers declaring that numerous positions have been rendered untenable The weather continues showery, adding to their discomfort.

Prisoners Taken by the French—Enemy May Have to Evacuate More Territory.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 6. — North of the Vesle river the Germans have been repulsed in their efforts to dislodge the French and American units which crossed from the south bank. The statement to-day also reports French advance to Avrne, north of Montdidier. Prisoners were taken by the French in the repulse of a German raid near Montdidier.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

German guns were active last night in the region north of Villers Bretonneux, on the front northeast of Amiens, the War Office announced to-day. They threw gas shells in the British lines. The Germans attempted to pick off a British post in districts north of Merris on the Flanders front, but failed under a British counter attack.

An attempt made by the enemy yesterday to capture one of our posts north-east of Merris was repulsed by our counter attack. We captured a few prisoners and machine guns last night in the Nieppe Forest sector, on the Flanders front.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

The hostile artillery has been active with gas shells north of Villers Bretonneux and has shown activity also about Bucquoy and north of Bethune.

North of Montdidier French troops have made progress toward the Avre which they have reached between Braches and Merisel. A German surprise attack south-east of Montdidier was checked completely. Prisoners remained in our hands. On the Vesle front the French maintained their positions at many points north of the river despite repeated attempts by the Germans to drive them out. There is nothing of importance to report from the remainder of the front.

POSITIONS UNTENABLE.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 6.—German resistance north of the Vesle is being continued, the enemy rear guard standing determinedly along the heights commanding the river crossings, where the French light elements, which have passed beyond the river, are encountering them, says the Havas Agency's review of the battle front situation.

To-day the Germans are trying to prevent further Allied crossings. There is a general agreement among military critics that the Germans will not be able to remain long in the region between the Vesle and the Aisne, where the position is considered untenable. The German position, between two rivers, says "Le Journal," is a critical one. It is shallow and swept by French artillery along the entire front and at some points on the flanks. The "Echo De Paris" lays stress upon various signs observable of the strategical retreat which the German High Command may have In contemplation at various points, where the French are attacking. It believes the enemy is preparing for a relief offensive to be launched shortly.

Enemy Resisting.

"Union government," remarked Red Michael this morning, "was elected to win the war. God knows there is plenty of scope for their activities. In my opinion they will be well advised to accept in good part constructive criticisms from its friends." Dr. Clark declared that there were certain elements of unrest in the country which might suggest that a session of Parliament before the new year were advisable. This, however, is a matter for the government to decide.

The member for Red Deer declares that drought in the south, and frost in the north have damaged the crops of his province, in the centre, however, the prospects are good.

ALLIED FORCES WERE LANDED

Russian Population Manifested General Enthusiasm.

ZEPPELIN SHOT DOWN

Attempted Raid on Coast of England Proved to be a Complete Fiasco

ANOTHER DAMAGED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The attempted raid by German Zeppelins on the East Coast of England last night proved to be a complete fiasco, according to reports thus far received. British fliers, who are ever on the alert along the coast, were ready for visitors and met them out at sea, bringing down one in flames, damaging a second, and driving a third away. What happened to the other airships in the squadron is not disclosed in the official statement. The fact, however, that the report said, "Zeppelins crossed the coast," is ground for the presumption that these did reach land. There is no evidence as yet that they dropped any bombs, and it is probable that their crews were kept busy protecting their ships against pursuing British airmen.

The text of the official statement follows:

Five enemy airships attempted to cross the coast last night, but while still at sea were attacked by the Royal Air Force contingents co-operating with naval units. Three were engaged in action, and one was shot down in flames forty miles from the coast. Another was damaged, but probably succeeded in reaching its base.

Council's Sympathy to Bereaved Members

The Council last night expressed its sympathy with the Ald. Langford and the members of his family in the recent death of ex-Ald. William Langford, and with Ald. Jones in the death of his mother. Resolutions of condolence were passed, and copies ordered to be sent to the bereaved families.

REGISTRATION WAS SATISFACTORY

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.— Senator Gideon Robertson, Acting Minister of Labour and head of the Canada Registration Board, declares that the results so far obtained from the registration of the Dominion man power have been satisfactory. "Before the registration commenced," he said this morning, "we notified the Provincial Premiers that they could secure from the cards as they were handed in to the various registrars full particulars of the agricultural prospects. Not all of them took advantage of the offer. In Ontario, however, it was found that in the Toronto district there were 101,000 prospects, and in the Ottawa district 26,000. The Natural Resources committee is now engaged in supplying names to farmers, and the supply is quite in excess of the demand. In Manitoba information was gathered, indicating that there were in the cities 26,702 men who had declared their willingness to engage in agriculture. In Saskatchewan and Alberta men are also being secured. We have a staff working on New Brunswick lists.

"We are sending that province 500 names a day so that they will be well supplied with prospects. In Quebec there has been no shortage of labour." "Altogether," said Senator Robertson, "the results of the registering are excellent."

Harrassing The Germans

(By William Philip Simms.)
(United Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 6. — Crown Prince Rupprecht's adjustment of his line, especially the abandonment of the plateau west of the Aure, from Montdidier to the confluence of the Luce, is very significant as the plateau gave observation of the entire valley of the Moye and the Amiens-Paris railway, threatening it.

Heavy Shelling.

There was gunfire in front of Arras, particularly in the Givenchy region, north of the La Bassee canal, where German artillery is active, probably covering their retreat. Thousands of gas shells were thrown into St. Unant yesterday, and the Ypres, Fletre and Hinges sectors and the back areas were shelled.

British patrols continue extremely busy. Likewise the British artillery is harassing German communications everywhere. This front appears to be increasingly uncomfortable for the Boches, prisoners declaring that numerous positions have been rendered untenable. The weather continues showery, adding to their discomfort.

Prisoners Taken by the French—Enemy May Have to Evacuate More Territory.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 6. — North of the Vesle river the Germans have been repulsed in their efforts to dislodge the French and American units which crossed from the south bank. The statement to-day also reports French advance to Avrne, north of Montdidier. Prisoners were taken by the French in the repulse of a German raid near Montdidier.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

German guns were active last night in the region north of Villers Bretonneux, on the front northeast of Amiens, the War Office announced to-day. They threw gas shells in the British lines. The Germans attempted to pick off a British post in districts north of Merris on the Flanders front, but failed under a British counter attack.

An attempt made by the enemy yesterday to capture one of our posts north-east of Merris was repulsed by our counter attack. We captured a few prisoners and machine guns last night in the Nieppe Forest sector, on the Flanders front.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

The hostile artillery has been active with gas shells north of Villers Bretonneux and has shown activity also about Bucquoy and north of Bethune.

North of Montdidier French troops have made progress toward the Avre which they have reached between Braches and Morisel. A German surprise attack south-east of Montdidier was checked completely. Prisoners remained in our hands. On the Vesle front the French maintained their positions at many points north of the river despite repeated attempts by the Germans to drive them out. There is nothing of importance to report from the remainder of the front.

POSITIONS UNTENABLE.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 6.—German resistance north of the Vesle is being continued, the enemy rear guard standing determinedly along the heights commanding the river crossings, where the French light elements, which have passed beyond the river, are encountering them, says the Havas Agency's review of the battle front situation.

To-day the Germans are trying to prevent further Allied crossings. There is a general agreement among military critics that the Germans will not be able to remain long in the region between the Vesle and the Aisne, where the position is considered untenable. The German position, between two rivers, says "Le Journal," is a critical one. It is shallow and swept by French artillery along the entire front and at some points on the flanks. The "Echo De Paris" lays stress upon various signs observable of the strategical retreat which the German High Command may have in contemplation at various points, where the French are attacking. It believes the enemy is preparing for a relief offensive to be launched shortly.

Enemy Resisting.

(By John de Gandt—United Press).

PARIS, August 6.—With the Germans resisting fiercely along the Vesle, French heavy artillery on the south bank of the river this afternoon laid down a terrific fire on the table land between the Vesle and the Aisne. The crossings of the GRATIFYING FIGURES.

The figures made public by the se retary of the Admiralty on the fourth niversary of Great Britain's entr into the war are gratifying in the ex eme. It will be a surprise to th orld to learn that the British flee -day actually shows an increase o 0 per cent. since August, 1914. In pite of the fact that three-quarter a million tons have been lost, the mpire's navy consists of warship d auxiliary craft, comprising a tota displacement of 6,500,000 tons as com ared with 2,500,000 four years ago. I e same period the personnel of the et has grown from 146,000 officer nd men to the astonishing total o 4,000.

These are figures that will cause fr ill of pride in the heart of every al Briton, as will the announce ent that of the millions of men car ied under the protection of the Brit h navy, the percentage of men los rough the efforts of the enemy wa ly one for every six thousand car ied.

ANOTHER DECORATION.

The honours already conferred upo ajor W. A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O. C., Canada's famous aviator, hav en added to in the granting to th wen Sound hero of the Distinguish Flying Cross, the awarding o hich has been officially gazetted he decoration is conferred for "sig ally valuable services in personally estroying twenty-five enemy ma ines in ten days, of which five wer estroyed on the last day of his servi s at the front." The Canadian is de ribed as "the most successful an ost fearless fighter of the air" and h ill doubtless not be any more prou any of the decorations he has wor an he will be of the praise give m in the Staid Official Gazette ot usually given to extravagan aise, which in speaking of Majo shop says: "The total number o achines destroyed by this gallant ficer is seventy-two, and his value a moral factor to the Royal Air Force annot be over-estimated." That is a ibute which indeed should be highl aborized by the Canadian ace.

A NEW "TRIUMPH."

The German U-boats operating i Bay of Fundy, have been winning series of "triumphs." Not able t op the transportation of American d Canadian troops overseas, power s to take advantage of the bi eamships carrying valuable food uffs and munitions, the U-boat pir es have found prey that is easie handle and are busy sinking fish ing schooners. What an achievement ow Von Tirpitz must smile when h ears that his wonderful undersea ats, which were going to win th r, have actually succeeded in sink g a Gloucester smack. The suppl Iron Crosses, already heavily de orated by the honours that have bee nferred upon German pirates an murderers, is threatened with extinc on as a result of this latest exploit ow the hated American and the des ed Canadian will realize what i eans to oppose the aims of th n," one can imagine Von Tirpitz claiming as the wireless announce at another little fishing schooner ha llen foul of a German torpedo housands of troops may cross the At ntic every week, millions of tons o unitions and foodstuffs are trans rted, but the best the U-boats, op ating off the Atlantic coast, can ac mplish, is the destruction of a few hooners.

And the U-boats brought the Unite tates into the war, too.

MUNITION WORKERS AND INDUSTRIAL PROSPERITY.

One phase of munitions labour that must not be lost sight of is, that a great deal of our future industrial prosperity depends upon it.

Great Britain, United States, France, Italy and Belgium place orders where they can be sure of getting the munitions they need as and when they want them.

In the past, Canada has had a big share of their orders. She now has many on hand; but future favours will depend upon the promptitude with which contracts on hand are executed.

If there is a slackening up now in munitions production, there may be a hesitancy in placing munition orders of great magnitude with us in the future.

This particularly applies to the receipt of further contracts from United States, and to a lesser extent, from Great Britain.

If this were to come about it, it would be a serious thing for Canada, because the munitions industry today, is practically our only source of adjusting our adverse exchange situation with the United States.

Another important fact is, that if munitions production is allowed to lag, tens of thousands of people now engaged in it will have to seek channels of employment that are not so well paid.

This will react unfavourably upon the entire retail trade, which caters to the well-lined purse of the munitions worker; and of course, it will be a sad state of affairs for the worker.

Self interest alone should therefore cause every munition worker to redouble his efforts to see that the output is as great as possible.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

All Canada unites in extending a welcome to Hon. Dr. Beland. He has been one of the biggest Canadian heroes of the war.

The returned soldiers and Toronto police force displayed a striking way of celebrating the eve of the fourth anniversary of the war.

Germans Were Repulsed

Aisne were also heavily shelled. Simultaneously Franco-American aviators flew over the enemy forces and dropped bombs on the pontoons thrown across the Aisne by the Germans. Two of these were destroyed.

The enemy artillery fire is having little effect, but the French advanced troops are encountering dense machine gun barrages. The French are awaiting the bringing up of more artillery before attempting further advance in force.

Bridgeheads Held.

(By Lowell Mellatt—United Press)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 6.—French troops today maintained their bridgeheads across the Vesle River despite two strong German counter attacks. A mill on the edge of the village of Braisne, on the Vesles six miles northwest of Fismes was occupied by the French during the night. Two bridges in that region were also seized. The Germans are still holding out in Braisne. Machine gun batteries have been installed in Braisne and the enemy is making bitter resistance there. Artillery of both armies is heavily shelling along the Aisne-Vesle and Oise Rivers.

Further north, the French are solidly established on banks of the river Avre north of Braches and Neuville Wood.

ZEPPELIN BROUGHT DOWN

Canadian Press.

LONDON, August 6. — In last night's raid on England by German airship, one of the enemy Zeppelins was brought down, it was officially announced today.

TALCUM POWDER IS NOT A PERFUME THE MAGISTRATE SAYS

Deciding that talcum powder is not a perfume, Magistrate Dumble Kerr, grocer, Ashburnham, of having sold a perfume without affixing a war stamp as required by an order in council. In his judgment, His Worship held that although talcum powder might contain a little perfume, it was not a perfume within the meaning of the law. The charge was laid by Mr. H. J. Dager, Inland Revenue Officer, Toronto.

E. L. Payne, druggist, was fined $53.10 for selling a proprietary medicine without a war stamp.

It was brought out in evidence that the medicine had been ordered by Dr. Hammond from a traveller for the company that manufactured it. It was only one article in a shipment ordered by the doctor and following the usual business course it had been consigned to the defendent who in turn forwarded the package to the doctor.

Mr. F. D. Kerr counsel for the defendant contended that the latter was not the real seller and therefore had not violated the Act.

ANNUAL PICNIC HELD IN LAKEFIELD YESTERDAY WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Seventeen Hundred Persons Participated in the Big Event — The Prize Winners.

CLERGY PRESENT

Fortune in every way favoured Reverend Father Meagher's annual picnic held yesterday afternoon and evening at Riverside Park, Lakefield. About 1,700 attended the big event. Practically all Lakefield and most of the surrounding community participated in the entertainment for which "success" is an inadequate description.

CLERGY PRESENT.

From early in the afternoon crowds began to arrive and enjoy a stroll through the attractively decorated grounds and to take part on one or other of the many attractions offered by the committee in charge. The clergy who attended were Reverend Father Meagher, Lakefield; Dean McColl, Reverend Fathers P. J. McGuire Gorman, Guiry, Peterboro; Galvin Downeyville; McCauley, Enniesmore; Miller, C. P. St. Louis; O'Farrell, Stirling; Casey, Kingston; McGinity of Wooller and Reverend Mr. Gill of Lindsay; Reverend Mr. Corkery, Reverend Mr. Butler and Reverend Mr. Blanchard of Peterboro, the latter four of whom are theological students.

Cut glass water set donated by Mr. Roland Johnston.

The raffle of the fancy doll donated by Mrs. Popham was in charge of Miss Irene Young and Miss Alice Maloney. The "Lakefield" table where refreshments were served was managed by Mesdames (Dr.) Gibson, A. G. Lawless, Michael Ryan, Denis Garvey and Daniel Maloney. Garvey and Daniel Maloney. While Mesdames P. P. Young, Ed. Young, James Carroll, Jos. Ayotte and Adrian Brookes took charge of the Young's Point table.

THE AUCTION SALE.

Mr. George Lynch of Peterboro as usual in such entertainments provided the touch of vaudeville necessary for the livening up of the visitors. With remarkable skill he separated hundreds of quarters from the onlookers who in return received all manner of pretty embroidered goods and valuable knick knacks. Mr. Lynch spared nobody's blushes especially the young men who, when they by lucky chance won some piece of feminine frippery re directed to the dressing room behind the tent. Those who assisted Mr. Lynch were Messrs. Maurice Heinz, Alex Curtain, Toronto; Misses Mollie Young, Young's Point; Eve Archambault, city, Mollie Young, Peterboro; and Helen Brookes, Young's Point.

INDIAN BAND.

The Indian Band contributed greatly to the general success of the evening by their splendid music which was alone worth the admission fee. Altogether the affair was one of the biggest successes ever held in Lakefield and reflected the widespread popularity of Reverend Father Meagher the parish priest, amongst all Lakefield and Peterboro. This morning Father Meagher expressed his gratification at the results of the affair.

The Toronto and Cobourg Lawn Bowlers Shared the Silverware From Peterboro

The Premier Event Went to St. Matthew's—Bowlers Had a Big Day—Gillespie Trophy Went to the Lakeshore Town.

THE SCORES

St. Matthews of Toronto grabbed the Stratton Silverware in the Central Ontario Bowling tournament held yesterday on the local bowling green. The finals were played last evening before an enthusiastic gathering of fans. It was a good game and the trophy went to the Toronto aggregation by a five point margin. The score was 10-15.

The trophy in the consolation fixture went to the Cobourg rink skipped by T. Mitchell. It was a big day for the bowlers and in spite of the counter competitions held in other parts of Ontario, Peterboro drew a good share of bowlers from outside points.

REMISSION OF $20 FINES REQUESTED BY CITY COUNCIL

A resolution introduced by Ald. Taylor at the Council meeting last night instructed the City Clerk to memorialize the Attorney-General of the Province, and, if necessary, the Minister of Justice at Ottawa, for the remission of the $20 fines recently imposed on nine Peterborough men for neglecting to carry their registration cards. Ald. Saunders seconded it.

To Repair Pavements.

The Standard Paving Company at Ottawa will be asked to repair the street pavement where necessary this summer.

"I understand that some of our contracts with the company for repairs expire this year, and we should have the work done at once. There are many patches needed," Ald. Taylor remarked.

City Engineer Parsons added that the pavement on George Street, from Sherbrooke Street to the C. P. R. Station, was in bad condition, and should be attended to at once.

Repair Band Stands.

Ald. Saunders reported that the band stands in Victoria and Central Parks needed some repairs. This work is under the supervision of the Property Committee.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

37 Apartments Without Fire Escapes, Chief Grange Reports

Are All in the Business Centre of the City According to Finding of Firemen in Their Investigation This Spring.

KING EDWARD SCHOOL, TOO

That thirty-seven apartments and other living quarters in the business district are unprovided with fire escapes, was the substance of a report from Fire Chief Grange to the City Council last night. It was based on the examination conducted by the Fire Department during May and June, and the Chief suggested that proper protection should be afforded the occupants of the buildings he named. The type of fire escape generally used was of iron with steps leading from floor to floor and a balcony or landing at the first storey with an eight-foot ladder that could be dropped to the sidewalk.

Alderman Edgar pointed out that the new building by-law provided for fire escapes on all apartments.

Alderman Weir—They might all be burned down before the by-law is passed. The landlords shouldn't be so grasping as to leave the lives of their tenants in danger.

Needed at King Edward School.

Fire Chief Grange also recommended that the King Edward School should be equipped with fire escapes. There were six hundred children attending that school, and the only exits were by the stairs.

"I think the Board of Education should look after the school," observed the Mayor.

City Solicitor Gordon said he believed the city had power to compel the owners of apartments to erect fire escapes.

The Chief's report was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee, who will await further advice from Mr. Gordon.

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

After a strenuous day outdoors, when winds, heat and exhaustion have combined to take away one's freshness and caused the skin to wrinkle and sag—or after a tedious or fretful day indoors—one often has urgent need for some quick rejuvenator. Maybe there's a dance on the evening, or some other social event. How in the world can one make herself presentable, looking as she does? It's quite easy.

Just get an ounce of powdered saxolite and a half pint witch hazel at the nearest drug store, mix the two and bathe the face in the solution for two or three minutes. Then look into your mirror and behold the wonderful transformation! Wrinkles have vanished, loose, tired muscles have been rested and "firmed up," marks of fatigue have flown, and you look so much brighter and younger you can hardly believe your eyes. No one need hesitate to try this, the witch hazel and saxolite being so perfectly harmless.

QUALITY BREAKFAST BACON

Now that you have tried all the others try ours. It has the flavor. New potatoes, 60 cents peck; maple butter, 25 cents lb.; honey butter, 25 cents lb.; peanut butter, 35 cents lb.; Raspberries daily at James R. Bells, Hunter street.

ALDERMEN RESIGN FROM BD. OF HEALTH

W. H. Buller and Harry Morgan Succeed Aldermen Saunders and Langford.

Aldermen Saunders and Langford resigned from the Board of Health last night, and the Council appointed ex-Mayor Buller and ex-Ald. Harry Morgan in their places. This change in the personnel of the Board followed City Clerk Armstrong's discovery of an amendment to the Municipal Act, which disallows a member of the Council from holding any office within its control. Ald. Langford did not attend last night's meeting, but he had asked some of the members to announce his intention to resign.

To Make Hairs Vanish From Face, Neck or Arms

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hairy growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing, but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.

Ald. Edgar referred to the work of the Salvation Army band, stating that they were always "Johnny on the spot," giving their services freely.

It was finally decided to pass the report with the exception of the clause dealing with the band grants.

Garbage Collector Forehanded.

Unless the citizens are permitted to burn potato stalks, dead leaves and similar garden refuse, the garbage collectors will need a circus outfit to remove this autumn's rubbish. Such was the fear the contractor, Mr. George Mitchell expressed to the Council last night. Apparently he believes in forehandedness.

Ald. Dobbin reminded him that the leaves had two months or thereabouts to linger on the branches, but Mr. Mitchell proposed to obviate future difficulties by present action. Chief Grange had given a warning last spring that rubbish must not be burned in yards or on the street, and the garbage waggons found new and unexpected burdens as a result.

"I don't think there is any by-law to that effect," said Mayor Duncan, "but we will ask the Property committee to investigate it."

Cellar Flooded.

The storm on the night of June 30th flooded the cellars of E. L. Payne, druggist, at the corner of Simcoe and George streets, and of S. H. Mitchell, grocer, at the corner of Reid and Sherbrooke streets. Inadequate drainage is blamed for the damage, in a letter from Peck, Kerr & McElderry, and the city is notified that compensation is demanded.

Tax Collector Green's request for assistance was met by the Council assenting to providing him with a clerk during the months of August and November at a total cost of $90.

Want Street Lighted.

A petition for a light at the corner of Caddy and Centre streets was referred to the Fire, Water and Light committee.

Chief to Convention.

Fire Chief Grange was granted $50, on a motion by Ald. Saunders, seconded by Ald. Taylor, covering his expenses to the Fire Chief's convention in Toronto during the last week in this month.

A request from Mr. Joseph Wearing of the Chatauqua committee for permission to extend advertising streamers across the streets was received.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

A Fuel Commission of Three Members Succeeds Ald. Edgar

W. H. Bradburn, T. H. G. Denne and M. L. Campbell Appointed By the City Council Last Night—Ald. Edgar Suggested That Provision in Latest Bulletin From the Fuel Controller be Enforced.

COMMISSION WILL ACT

Accepting Ald. Edgar's resignation as Fuel Commissioner, the Council last night appointed a Fuel Commission, composed of Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, T. H. G. Denne and M. L. Campbell to assume the duties performed by Ald. Dobbin, and more recently Ald. Edgar, in the supervision of the distribution of coal in Peterborough.

Ald. Dobbin who moved the motion to that effect, seconded by Ald. Worth, said he was confident that these men would undertake the work. Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Denne are former mayors of the city, and Mr. Campbell is a machinist with the C.G.E. Company.

Earlier in the evening, Mr. A. Murray of the Machinists' Union, read a letter which the Union had received from the Deputy Fuel Controller, Chas. W. Peterson, of Ottawa, in reply to their request for information regarding the distribution of coal. Briefly it stated that the local Commissioner had the power to see that coal is distributed equitably. Mr. Murray reminded the Council that they had informed a deputation in July that they had done all they could, within the sanction of the Fuel Controller's regulations, to secure the distribution demanded.

Ald. Edgar remarked that Mr. Murray should have given him the letter, or have acquainted him of its contents.

"Apparently he is not satisfied with Mr. Campbell, who has been an accredited representative in the recent negotiations with the retail coal dealers. I gave Mr. Campbell all the information I had, and he attended the several meetings with the coal men. Mr. Murray is a little late coming along to-night."

Mr. Murray offered the letter to Ald. Edgar's reply, but the latter indicated his refusal, saying, "I am through, I have handed in my resignation."

Reviewing the conference with the coal dealers, Ald. Edgar said he had no recommendations to offer, "but if I were to continue as Commissioner, I would see that this clause of the latest bulletin was enforced."

This clause empowers the Commissioner to order the dealers to distribute coal according to his instructions, providing there is likelihood of an emergency.

Mr. Robinson, who accompanied Mr. Murray, said he had been unable to obtain a supply of coal. "I have always paid my way, my money's as good as the next man's and I have an equal right with other men to share in whatever coal is available. I understand there is lots of coal in the city, but evidently a workingman's money is no good."

Mr. Campbell gave the departing commissioner a certificate of character as an official that was the only recompense for his work. Ald. Edgar, he believed, carried out his duties without favour. Mr. Campbell admitted that he had suspected Ald. Edgar of being in league, in some way, with the coal men, but that opinion quickly vanished in the illuminating conferences with the dealers. They had asserted that there was no emergency, nor a prospect of one. Hence, it was unnecessary to demand that distribution be limited now to twenty-five per cent. of citizens' requirements, as Ald. Edgar had proposed to them. He concluded by expressing the belief that there was a shortage, and that practical steps should be made to meet it.

Replying to Ald. Edgar, Mr. Murray said that when he received the letter he first communicated it to the Union, suggesting that Ald. Edgar be informed of its message, but he had been instructed to bring it to the Council.

Mayor Duncan terminated the discussion by expressing the assurance that the new commission would have the power to act as they deemed expedient and advisable.

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE TO-DAY

Death of Miss Gertrude Holmes Regretted by a Wide Circle of Friends.

The funeral took place to-day of Gertrude Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Holmes, 248 Charlotte street, whose death took place on Saturday evening after a long illness.

The deceased was with the Examiner when she was first taken ill several years ago, and her early demise is regretted by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, which is testified to by the large number of spiritual and floral bouquets that were presented on the occasion of her death.

She was a most faithful daughter, nursing her invalid mother as long as she was able to with much tenderness and care.

In addition to her bereaved parents, she leaves to mourn her loss one sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Rooney, of Estavan, Sask., who was here a short while ago, and one brother, James, at home.

At the service at St. Peter's Cathedral, the full choir, of which the deceased was a member, was present, and Mr. Ed. Hanrahan sang several solos most sympathetically. Mass was sung by Rev. Father Guiry, and at the cemetery Rev. Father Maher read the burial service.

The pallbearers were Dr. McNulty, Wm. Lang, George Lynch, C. Brady, J. Hanrahan and E. Fitzgerald.

MAKE INVERLEA A REGULAR PLACE IS ALD. WORTH'S ADVICE

The city has spent $100 in clearing from the swimming place at Inverlea Park submerged stumps, which were more or less dangerous to bathers, but Ald. Worth reported at last night's meeting of the Council that the work had not been completed. "Jagged roots have been left," Ald. Worth said, "and swimmers run the danger of being pierced on them. We ought to clean it up and make it a regular place, smart and up-to-date."

City Engineer Parsons explained that some of the roots were thirty feet deep. One hundred dollars would be quickly spent in raking the bottom.

"We should make the place as safe as possible," remarked Mayor Duncan. "When we began it, we have perhaps left ourselves liable for any injuries that might be caused by the submerged stumps."

Ald. Weir informed the Council that the Board of Works had no money to spend, but, on motion of Ald. Worth, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, it was decided to spend another $100 in removing the dangerous roots.

Romaine St. Sewer Developes Appetite For Sand and Gravel

The Romaine street sewer has developed a new malady, or perhaps the old trouble has broken out in a new form. Ald. Saunders told the council last night that between George and Aylmer streets there is a hole that refuses to stay plugged. The city has dumped loads of gravel into the depression begin to show afresh. All led for a short time, and then the depression begins to show afreshIf Ald Saunders said he was sure of a dozen loads having been fed into this mysterious maw, and Mayor Duncan was inclined to believe that there might have been fifty loads. At any rate the old sewer has developed an insatiable appetite for gravel, rocks and sand, and teamsters have to feed it regularly, like a prize elephant in a circus. And at that, it was ex-Mayor Buller who dubbed it the white elephant, and it is still performing, just as troublesome today as it was at any time during the past eleven years of its perplexing existence.

Ald. Saunders demanded that the City Engineer open up the sewer at its gravel hopper, and ascertain the nature of its perverted appetite, but Mr. Parsons replied that if the work was begun there was no telling where it would end.

"There is a bad spot in front of Ald. Saunders' house, and another at the G. T. R. crossing where the workmen have to raise the rails every few days. We are pumping sand at the pumping station. It is likely that the sand is being sucked in through leakages in the sewer, and the gravel has to be dumped in to fill the cavities thus formed. I couldn't make an estimate of the cost of the work."

It was decided to continue the present sewer construction on Prince street and afterwards the gang will probably be turned loose on Romaine street, for one more operation.

This promise satisfied Ald. Saunders. The sewer is functioning satisfactorily, he said, but the disappearance of the gravel raises a fear that the sewer may be blocked any day if the stones begin to filter into the pipes.

VICTIM OF ACCIDENT DIED THIS MORNING

Mr. Alfred Airriess Was Knocked Down by a Car.

One of Peterborough's well-known citizens died this morning at 3 o'clock in the person of Mr. Alfred Airriess in his 59th year. Mr. Airriess, who was partially blind, was a familiar figure on the street, and was respected by all for his kindness and integrity of character.

Mr. Airriess was born in London, England, but has lived here for the last 35 years. He leaves one brother, Edward, of 88 McDonnel Street. On June 25th Mr. Airriess was run down by a car near the C.P.R. Station and was taken to the hospital unconscious. At first he seemed to be improving, but for the last two weeks has been unconscious nearly all the time. On Sunday he took a sudden change for the worse, and Dr. Cameron announced that no hope could be held out for his recovery. He was until a late date a prominent member of Murray Street Baptist Church, but attended Park Street Baptist Church after he moved to 193 Westcott Street.

The funeral takes place from the residence of his brother, 88 McDonnel Street, to-morrow afternoon at 10 o'clock. In the absence of Rev. Dougald Brown, Rev. J. R. Webb will conduct the service.

BOY MET A TRAGIC DEATH AT THE PETERBORO CREAMERY

Was Killed by the Elevator—No Eyewitnesses of the Tragedy.

WILL HOLD INQUEST

With his customary cheerful farewell to his mother and with a happy smile on his lips Millen Pearson, 658 Bethune street, son of William Pearson, left this morning at 7 o'clock for the Creamery and a few minutes later was discovered lifeless by the elevator at the factory in the condensing room. Although there were no witnesses of the tragedy it was supposed that the boy attempted to call down the elevator to a workman who was bringing supplies from the refrigerator in the cellar not knowing that it was almost up. The man had come up with his load, taking one armful fro minside the elevator and turning to take a second load off, discovered the little lad's body caught round his neck between the floor and lift. Coroner Dr. Greer was called but as he was out of the city, Dr. E. A. Hammond cam eimmediately and found all trace of life extinct and no mark on his body but his nose had bled slightly. When found he had not as yet removed his street clothes. The boy was well liked about the creamery and had always been accustomed to shout some cheerful word to his fellow employees but had never before called down the elevator.

He was 15 years of age and born in Harvey his parents removing to the city about five years ago, his father is caretaker of Victoria Park. Before leaving school he had been a student at the North Ward School. He had been employed at the Creamery in the condensing room for one month. There are left of the immediate family, besides his parents, four brothers and four sisters, Harry G., Roland, Herman Wilfred, and George, Elmer of Peterboro; Mrs. F. McClure, Mrs. Leahy and Miss Luella of the city and Mrs. Harden of Douro.

Mrs. Pearson is prostrated with grief over the sudden death of the little lad, who was such a general favorite but in remembrance of his oft repeated wish for her to "keep up" is striving to do as her boy would have wished.

An inquest will be held.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts yesterday, 29 cars, with 320 cattle, 109 calves, 403 hogs, and 386 sheep and lambs.

A good active demand for choice quality heavy steers, at an average advance of about 25c. over last week, and a rather dull and quiet market for medium and poor quality butcher steers and heifers, are the notable features of this week's market. The run was as usual a light one for the Tuesday market, and business was comparatively quiet. There were but one or two choice lots of weighty steers offering, and these sold readily at around $14 to $15.25. For the rest of yesterday's offering, consisting mostly of light thin cattle of poor quality, the market held about steady with yesterday, the demand being anything but active.

Choice fat cows and bulls continue in good demand.

Common calves are weak, and 50c. to $1 lower.

Choice light sheep steady, but lambs are from $3 to $4 lower than last week.

Hogs steady and unchanged at $20 fed and watered.

British Front From Week to Week

(By "A. A. M.")

In 1912 General von Bernhardi wrote a foolish book called "Germany and the next war." Since 1914 he has been wishing that he hadn't. Two remarks which he is particularly sorry that he made are these: That the Dominions troops "can be completely ignored so far as concerns any European theatre of war," and that the British Territorials "for a Continental European war may be left out of account." The "next war" has been going on for four years, and General Bernhardi now has a command on the Western Front. And as he has had a bad beating there this week, the new book which he meditates, "Germany and the Next War After This," will probably contain some revised opinions on British and Dominions troops.

For Bernhardi's command has been having a very unfortunate time lately. According to prisoners, a Bavarian Division was inspected the other day by Major-General Prince Franz of Bavaria, no less, who talked to the men very seriously on "the extraordinary state of affairs in the front line." He said that the constant reports received from regimental commanders of British raids and the nightly losses of prisoners were becoming a scandal. Wishing to be helpful before leaving them, he advised the men "to open fire immediately they saw a British patrol advancing," and thus to stop the raids. He then withdrew. Whether the Bavarians have decided to put this novel plan into execution, or whether, misled by Bernhardi's book, they do not believe in the existence of a British Army at all, history does not relate.

The German Company-Commanders do their best. One addressed his men the other day and told them that he was going on leave, and that when he returned he hoped to find that the defences had been improved, and that he would not have to report such frequent losses of prisoners. He then went on leave—and returned to find that his front line had been pushed back a mile. However, nobody could say it was his fault.

The Australians, "assisted by some detachments of American infantry," celebrated Independence Day in splendid style. Not realizing that they could be "completely ignored so far as concerns any European theatre of war," they foolishly attacked on a front of four miles, and captured the woods of Hamel and Vaire, Hamel Village, 1,300 prisoners, 100 machine-guns, and a field-gun. But perhaps they had never read "Germany and the Next War."

Various minor pushes during the last two months had taken the Australians well forward on the upper side of the Somme valley, but had left their trenches on the lower side a mile and a half behind. The attack of July 4th was meant to straighten there line here, and tighten their grip on the country between the Somme and the Ancre which they have won lately. A large number of Tanks co-operated, having been brought up in readiness so secretly that German officers taken prisoner confessed that they had no idea that there were any Tanks in the neighbourhood at all. A preliminary bombardment of only two minutes' length and a simultaneous attack by aeroplanes, which dropped three hundred bombs on Hamel, completed the German's surprise, and most of them were still wondering who and what was making all the noise, when the Australians and the Tanks were upon them. Apparently they had decided that it was a gas attack, for most of them were found in gas-masks and only too willing to surrender. Our chief casualties—which all did, did not amount to a third of the prisoners we took — were suffered at a part of the line where the formation of the ground prevented the use of Tanks. Here bomb and bayonet soon did the work, although not quite so bloodlessly.

Altogether the Tanks had a very good morning. Protected by smoke-screens they went across No-Man's-Land with men joy-riding on the roof, and had very few casualties. Less than half a dozen of them had trouble of any kind, whether from engines, enemy or obstacles, and only one of them was seriously damaged.

Previous to the Australian-American celebration of Independence Day, the Canadians had been celebrating Dominion Day, though more peacefully. They held a sports meeting at which their old Governor-General, the Duke of Connaugh, was present. Thousands of soldiers of Canadian and other units were there, and watched what seems to have been the nearest approach to an Olympic games since 1912. (The 1916 games, it will be remembered, were to have been at Berlin, but the meeting was postponed for various reasons). A boxing match in the ring, some sort of a ball game in the arena, a tennis championship, and running races and jumping were all going on together. "The arena," says a correspondent, "was staged and decorated in a way that reminded one of the mediaeval days of warfare, when the Kings and Marshals of France set up their pavilions, and the banners of the Knights-at-arms floated above the wooden barricades"; and he sums it up as "one of the most remarkable scenes I have ever watched on this front."

Meanwhile the Germans, as far as one can gather from prisoners' reports, have been amusing themselves behind the line with influenza, and General Von Bernhardi has been reading once again "Germany and the Next War" and wishing that he had never written it.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

SAINT ALBAN'S LAWN SOCIAL

The lawn social held at May's School House on August 1st, by St. Alban's Girl Guides Committee was a great success. It was an ideal day and the lawn presented quite a festal scene with its prettily decorated booths, the prominent colours being red, white and blue. Elephants Pile Teak to Help Lick the Germans as Siam Enters the War

An Eastern Nation That Fights Under the Sign of the Pachyderm Keeps Allies Supplied With Lumber—German Ships Were Seized.

AN ARMY OF 30,000 MEN

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 7. — Six thousand miles from Germany half way between Mandalay and Bangkok, great herds of Asiatic elephants are working from dawn to dusk along the Salween and Chow Phega rivers piling up logs of teak, pushing them into the water, helping to form them into rafts with a dexterity that would excite the admiration of a Minnesota lumberjack.

Thousands and thousands of these teak rafts float down the river to tidewater and eventually arrive at Rangeon and Bangkok. Thence they are shipped to the navy yards of the Allies to be turned into the invincible "wooden walls" of England, the armor base for the battle ships of America and France.

These "elephants a-pilin" take in the sludgy ,squdgy creek' are forwarding one of Siam's chief contributions toward winning the war for civilization. Germany must find some sort of resinous pine substitute for her dreadnoughts but ,the Allies ma cyontinue to use the one wood, impervious to water and a shock absorber of the first rank, on which nickel-steel armor plate may best be bolted. Since Siam declared war on Germany a year ago she has speeded up her teak production, as she has all her other industries, and today there is not an Allied war ship in the making that lacks for this most valuable of all naval lumbers.

Not for Profit.

But Siam entered the war not on account of what she could do for the Allies in a material way, nor, indeed, for what they could do for her. Siam had certain grievances against Germany—Teuton agents, for instance, were extremely active within her territories. But the war to her was largely a moral issue, and her entry was primarily an answer of conscience to President Wilson's circular appeal addressed to the neutral nations of the world.

The basis for Siam's gallant action were these three considerations:—Germany's flagrant contempt for all principles of humanity and for the rights of small Powers, her barbarous methods of conducting war, and the fact that neutrality was neither feasible nor desirable for Siam when the peace of the world was involved. As King Rama VI. put it in his proclamation "done on the 22nd day of July in the year of Our Lord Buddha 2460:—

"It is the duty of Siam, as one of the family of nations, to uphold the sanctity of international law."

Yet, like other unselfish acts, this began to have a wide effect. There can be no doubt that Siam's declaration of war influenced China to abandon her neutrality in favor of the Allies. The example of the well governed little nation to the south was urged upon China most forcefully during the legislative debate which led to her belligerency and swayed the vote for war.

And Siam also, finding herself at war, began to find ways in which she could help win it. The country is as large as Germany, and King Rama has twelve million subjects who display as thoroughly modern tendencies as any people of the East, not excepting the Japanese. Siam took part in the Allied conference at Versailles last November and agreed to place her entire resources at the disposal of the Entente Alliance.

SEIZED GERMAN SHIPS.

Her first act of war was the seizure of nine German steamships interned in her ports. These have now been repaired and are in the service of the Allies. She next proceeded to stamp out German propaganda and enemy plots.

Siam was conveniently situated between British possessions on the one side and French colonies on the other for German underground operations both in India and in Indo-China. Today there is not a pro-German who dares raise his head in Siam and even the 2,000 mile coast line is carefully patrolled to prevent the operations of German raiders or "political ships" bound for India. As for German born Germans, the several hundred who found their way to Siam before the war have had their activities restricted to interment camps for a year, with release in sight only when the great peace pact is signed.

Siam is essentially an agricultural country, and the government during the year has wisely extended her irrigation systems and rail lines to stimulate production to the utmost. Millions of tons of rice are exported every season and great quantities of sun-dried fruit, smoked and salted fish and fresh beef from Siam help to relieve the universal foo shortage.

ARMY OF 300,000

In the last ten years Siam has been successully growing rubber of a superior quality, and to-day this comparatively new industry is making rapid progress under the pressure of an insatiable demand. Siamese lead and tin also are getting worked into American munitions on a large scale, and several other lesser known metals of high value in warfare are exported through Bangkok and the Straits Settlements.

In times of peace Siam maintains an army of 50,000. On a war basis this army expands to 300,000 without difficulty. Though it is built up along modern lines, it is hardly likely that it will be needed in Europe, or even in the Near East. But that Siam is very keen for representation on the battle front appears from the fact that she already has sent to France an aviation unti of 500 men. Her flying men were trained in Europe and in turn trained others of their fellow countrymen until, it might be said, Siam now masters the air of the East.

Siam, however, is no Oriental David challenging the Teutonic Goliath. It is not expected that she will sling the shot which will finish Germany. Her aid is chiefly moral. One of the most progressive nations of the East, she stands leagued with the free peoples of the earth against military barbarism. Her act of war was as bold as ours and, in its degree, as potent.

A NEW BRAND OF BOOZE FAVOURED IN BRIGHTON

License Inspector Gooderich, while on his inspection of the county, came across a new one in Brighton last week, that, as far as the necessary "kick" is concerned, has the goods. By mixing a well known patent medicine guaranteed to cure toothache, remove bunions and cure stomach aches, with wine or old cider, a most intoxicating beverage is secured, which by analysis shows 59.74 per cent. proof spirits. A warning has been issued in regard to the sale of the patent medicine, which is 96.92 per cent. proof spirits.

A shipment of liquor, addressed to Sam McMillan, of Elizabethville, was seized at Millbrook last week, and declared forfeited by R. J. Doak, J.P. It was shipped before April 1st, but not delivered.

What Is Nuxated Iron?

Physician Explains—Says Public Ought To Know What They Are Taking—Practical Advice on What To Do To Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance and Increase the Red Blood Corpuscles.

The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually and that so many physicians are prescribing it as a tonic, strength and blood builder in weak, nervous, run-down conditions has led to an investigation of its merits by designated physicians and others whose reports should be of great importance to the public generally. Among these is the statement made by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and Westchester County Hospital, who says: "When one patient after another began asking my opinion of Nuxated Iron, I resolved to go thoroughly into the subject and find out for myself whether or not it possessed the real value claimed by its manufacturers and attested to by so many prominent people. This is exactly what I believe every honest, conscientious physician should do before prescribing or lending his endorsement to any product whatsoever. If an article is worthless we practitioners ought to be the first to know of it and if it is efficacious we are in duty bound to recommend it for the welfare of our patients. A study of the composition of the Nuxated Iron formula so impressed me with the therapeutic efficacy of the product that I immediately tested it in a number of obstinate cases. So quickly did it increase the strength, energy and endurance of the patients to whom it was administered that I became firmly convinced of its remarkable value as a tonic and blood builder. I have since taken it myself with excellent results. There are thousands of delicate, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as this but do not know what to take. Therefore I have urgently suggested the widespread publication of the sworn statement of the composition of its formula so that the public may know what they are taking. This complete formula is now to be found in newspapers throughout the country. It is composed principally of organic iron in the form of iron peptonate of a special specific standard and glycerophosphates which is one of the most costly tonic ingredients known. To the credit of the manufacturers it may be said that they use the most expensive form of iron peptonate, whereas by employing other makes they could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost and by using metallic iron they could have reduced the cost to less than one-twelfth, but by thus cheapening the product they would undoubtedly have impaired its therapeutic efficacy. In my opinion a careful examination of this formula by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that Nuxated Iron is to be placed among the very highest class and most strictly ethical preparations known to medical science. It excels anything I have ever used for building up the system and increasing the red blood corpuscles thereby enriching and fortifying the blood against the ravages of disease.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A DELIGHTFUL VISIT

CHAPTER CXXXVIII

We had a delightful luncheon together just Mrs. Babcock and I. Mary had given us such simple dishes, but so perfectly cooked, that Mrs. Babcock complimented me:

"Your luncheon is very tempting. I eat very little at noon, usually, but no one could resist this omelette," she said, as, in response to my urging, she had a second helping of Mary's mushroom omelette.

After luncheon we separated for an hour. I imagine she lay down, but I went into the kitchen and talked with Mary, congratulating her upon the luncheon, and consulting her as to the desert for the simple dinner we had planned. Then, when Mrs. Babcock again appeared downstairs, I ordered the car and we took a ride thru the town and out into the country. She was a charming companion, and I almost forgot, at times, that she was so much older than I, and was inclined to be as free with her as I would have been with Evelyn Reeves.

I told her all about Evelyn's baby—that she was named for me, and what a cunning little thing she was Then, without meaning to, I told her that I had lost my baby. She was all sympathy, all interest.

"You will have children, I hope," she said. "They make life worth while, my dear. We are apt to become selfish when we are without them."

"But, you are not selfish! Neither you nor Mr. Babcock," I said so impulsively that she smiled.

A CORNER OF A WOMAN'S HEART.

"Perhaps not! but you see we had our daughter for many years. And I must keep bright and cheerful for him, you know. A woman, my dear, can hide her feelings more easily than a man; even her grief she can conceal, if she feels that she is making him happier by doing so. My husband almost worshipped our daughter,—perhaps no more so than I did—but I had to be brave for him and for myself too. It is often so, Mrs. Howard. Men are but children in many ways. A wife often has to be both wife and mother to them."

I made no reply, none was needed. And, in a moment, we were chatting gaily again about the beautiful roads, the haze on the distant hills, the things that would ordinarily attract attention when riding over a strange road. But the little glimpse she had given me of her heart—the hiding of her own grief to make that of the man she loved easier to bear—remained with me, and made me, if anything, more in love with her character than before. I remember, I wished mother could know her, and thought what good friends they would be, because they had the same ideas.

I had never known anyone so self-sacrificing as my mother. Father, the boys, were always her first thought. I used to tell her that, by the time she got around to thinking of herself, she had no thoughts left Mrs. Babcock was that kind, too. She never seemed to think of herself.

We returned to the house about half past four. I told Mrs. Babcock what time we dined, and asked her if she would like to rest, or would she enjoy seeing my little namesake? Evelyn had telephoned while we were out that she was going to bring little Helen over.

"Do let me stay with you and see the baby!" Mrs. Babcock responded "I adore tiny children. And usually they come directly to me."

HELEN'S NAMESAKE IS ADMIRED.

I was pleased that she was interested. I was very fond of Evelyn, and very proud of my namesake. I would be glad to have Mrs. Babcock see them.

She acknowledged the introduction to Evelyn graciously, then held out her arms for the baby. Little Helen fairly jumped toward her, cooing and laughing, in her baby way. We laughed to see her, but when Evelyn tried to take her away, after half an hour, she shrieked so loudly we had to allow Mrs. Babcock to tuck her into her carriage and walk part of the way home with Evelyn to quiet her. Of course I went along, not knowing whether to be amused or embarrassed. But Mrs. Babcock soon set me right.

"All babies act that way with me. I consider it a great compliment," she said as we turned and walked slowly home. "Are we to dress?" she asked me when we reached the house.

"Just as you choose, We are to dine alone, but I have asked Mr. Gray, the artist, to spend the evening. He is very musical, and, I think will interest you."

"Delightful! How thoughtful of you. You are an ideal hostess, Mrs. Howard. You make one so at home, and yet do so much for them"

As she went upstairs, I thought to myself that for once I would repeat a compliment to George. I would tell him that Mrs. Babcock had said I was an ideal hostess. So I waited for him, a-thrill with happiness.

When George and Mr. Babcock came in, the latter went at once to his room and George came up to freshen up. I repeated what Mrs. Babcock had said.

"Umph—I told Babcock he needn't dress," was all the reply I received.

To-morrow—A Musical Evening.

"I had eczema so bad I could not sleep. It first started on my arm, then I had it on my body so that I could hardly wear my clothes, and I had to stay in bed. My flesh was dark red with water blisters, and burning and itching.

"Everything I tried seemed to make me worse, and I had the trouble for nearly two years. I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I got them. They did me good right away, and now I am entirely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Peter McIntosh, French River, Ont., April 10, 1917.

WAITING TO SHOOT

By EDMOND B. LINCOLN.

(Copyright, by American Press Association.)

Gerald Maxwell, being threatened with pulmonary trouble, decided to give up business, go west and live an outdoor life. Taking his family with him to Kansas, he bought a farm there and entered upon the work of raising crops. He succeeded in re-establishing his health, a family of children grew up about him, his wife was contented in his western home, and the Maxwells were considered the happiest people of that region. Moreover, they were greatly beloved for their kindliness to their neighbors.

One day a neighbor owning a farm on the hermetic side of the road from the Maxwells died, and his family moved away. A few months later the closed farmhouse was reopened, and an ill favored man was seen moving about the place. He had bought the farm and, being a bachelor, had gone to live alone on it. His name was Stuntz. He came from Kentucky, was about forty years old, wore his hair and beard long, never apparently combing either the one or the other, and was in all respects a disagreeable looking person.

Mrs. Maxwell, realizing that the family comfort depended largely on their neighbors, was great disturbed at the advent of Stuntz. Her husband made light of her fears. And, indeed, for a time the neighbor gave them no trouble. As a matter of policy Mr. Maxwell went over and made his acquaintance, and Mrs. Maxwell invited him to supper. He accepted the invitation, but said very little during the meal. The only person present who seemed to arouse his attention was Caroline Maxwell, the oldest daughter, aged twenty.

Not long after this Stuntz joined Miss Maxwell on the road and walked with her. She treated him civilly, though she found it difficult to do so. After that whenever he saw her out of doors he would make some excuse to be with her. One day Mr. Maxwell was astonished at receiving a call from Stuntz for the purpose of asking for Caroline's hand. The father concealed his disgust as well as he was able, saying that any such match would be impossible. Caroline when she heard of the proposal refused to again speak to the wooer.

From this time forward Stuntz spent all his leisure time arranging annoyances for the Maxwell family. He contrived that his cattle should get within the Maxwell fences and tramp down the crops; he shot Tommy Maxwell's pigeons; he appropriated the Maxwell fruit. These were only the simple methods he used to trouble his neighbors; his more complicated ones were too disagreeable to catalogue. The result of the whole was misery to the Maxwells. There was too much self restraint in the family to make any complaint to the farmers living near, but it was not long before the condition leaked out, and many were the mutterings against Stuntz.

One day Mr. Maxwell was obliged either to surrender his manliness or protest at the shooting by Stuntz of the household dog, beloved by all the Maxwell family. Stuntz went into his house to get his gun to kill Maxwell, whose wife, terrified, dragged him within doors and locked him in.

That night Mrs. Maxwell begged her husband to move away from the home where they had been so happy and could still be happy were it not for their neighbor, and, since she was supported by all the children, he was obliged to consent. The next morning Stuntz was seen sitting on his porch with his gun in his hands evidently watching for Mr. Maxwell's appearance. Mrs. Maxwell first saw him and before her husband was aware of Stuntz's position had locked her husband in his bedroom.

The weather was hot and murky, ragged clouds passing overhead. During the afternoon a dark mass of cloud appeared above the southern horizon. Mrs. Maxwell, looking out of a window, saw it. She also saw Stuntz sitting with his gun across the road not 200 yards away. Of the two she dreaded Stuntz the more, though she kept her eye on the cloud. Presently it assumed the shape of an immense balloon. She let her husband out of confinement, showed him the cloud, and the whole family went to the cellar.

Stuntz was not facing the balloon cloud and didn't see it. Furthermore, he, being from Kentucky, had had no experience with Kansas cyclones. On came the pillar of cloud, gyrating like a top and humming like a mighty cataract. Stuntz heard the sound, but did not know what it was. He was afraid to get up and go to the other side of his house for fear his neighbor might slip away and he would miss an opportunity of shooting him.

Then suddenly Stuntz, amid a mass of whirling timbers which a second before had been his house, went up into the air. Whirling like a teetotum turning a thousand somersaults he was carried with the rapidity of a cannon ball for a mile and a half, then dropped to the ground from an altitude of several hundred feet.

When the Maxwell family emerged from the cellar they saw neither Stuntz nor his house. His gun was lying with a broken stock in the road The cyclone had cut a swath covering the Stuntz house and leaving their own unharmed.

It developed later that Stuntz was a man much to be feared in every way. He had been in numerous shooting scrapes in the mountains of Kentucky and was supposed to be slightly deranged. He was devoid of fear and taken all together, was a very dangerous and irresponsible man.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

Sable Skins.

The costliest sable is the Yakutsk (Russian) skin that runs "silvery"—that has, in other words, a number of equally distributed white or silver hairs among the soft and silky brown ones. Such skins, of the average size of 15 by 5 inches, are worth $750 apiece. "Topped" sables are dyed ones. They fetch $50 a skin.

Drowsiness.

Drowsiness during the day, if a person has slept well the night before, is often caused by indigestion Often this is remedied by drinking something very hot, like cocoa or coffee. The brain needs a mild stimulant. Lassitude of the body is not always an indication of illness or laziness.

You Feel Fine

Fatigue is the result of poisons in the system, the waste matter resulting from the activities of life. The kidneys have failed to filter these poisons from the blood and you are tired.

But awaken the kidneys and liver by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you soon feel fine. The poisons are swept from the system, the pains and aches are gone and you are ready for work and for play.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Terry's Burglar

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Terry Brewster took a four-room apartment in the Harrington Arms apartment house she described herself as a "business woman," by which she meant to indicate that she used her apartment for little more than a comfortable roosting place, a place to eat breakfast and to keep her clothes. She did not take the trouble to indicate to the real estate agent that she was not a business woman in the sense that she earned her own daily bread. Her business was that of drinking in as much of city life in one short year as she could—going to as many concerts and theaters, attending as many exhibitions and as many "shows" of various sorts, lunching at as many "interesting places," and in general seeing as many of the sights of the city as she conveniently could without knowing many persons in the city or wishing to know more. She seldom went about in the evening. She felt somehow that her security in living alone at her age — for Terry, though adequate to the task of taking care of herself in almost any circumstances, was only twenty-four—depended in a measure on her not being seen out after dark. The evenings in her little apartment she spent either in mending and "puttering" over the clothes that she wore in the day time or in reading accounts of things that were to be seen or books of description of the great city. Terry's life in the small southern town where she was brought up had been decidedly circumscribed. She had gradually slipped into the position of being housewife for her older brother in the old homestead, and the only reason she was excused from those duties now was because of her brother's rear's volunteer work in Washington.

Terry kept no maid but, like the other business women in the apartment, she was "taken care of" by Mrs. Gray, who had the key to the apartments in her care and with lightning-like rapidity tidied them and washed the breakfast dishes and made them ready for the return of their tenants. Terry had met Mrs. Gray the day she negotiated with her for her services, and she needed no further guarantee of her perfect honesty than her small, pale face. She knew, too, that she could dust the dainties of her bric-a-brac and wash the filmiest of laces that she left for that purpose in her apartment when she went out in the morning because it was quite clear to anyone who saw Mrs. Gray that she was a woman who, had circumstances been different from what they actually were, might have been wearing the dainty laces and treading the most delicate of Oriental rugs herself.

Surely Terry trusted her — that is until the day that she came home unexpectedly at noon in order to get some matinee tickets that she had forgotten to take with her in the morning. On that day she chanced to be looking up toward the windows of her own rooms, when she saw there in her own bedroom, not the figure of Mrs. Gray, but the figure of a man. Terry was not terrified at the idea of having a burglar in her house, but she did not relish the idea of entering that apartment when she might encounter him. Her first thought was to report the incident to the nearest policeman, and it was with this idea in mind that she turned about and started around the block in search of such a dignitary. She thought better of her idea and decided to go alone to her apartment—but by the time she reached home the burglar was gone. The apartment had apparently been visited by Mrs. Gray earlier in the day, for it was immaculate and there was a fresh scent of soap and water about and the floor looked as if the oil had just been wiped up from it.

Terry made a thorough search of her possessions, she counted her silver spoons and knives and forks and she counted the butter spreaders, but apparently nothing was taken, nor did she miss anything as time went on. She looked under her bed and lounge and in each of the closets, but no one did she find. A strange burglar, indeed, that would take nothing with him.

Then came the day when she actually ran into the strange young man when she was coming unexpectedly to change her hat because what gave promise of being a rainy day had turned out to be fair. She let herself in with her latch key and there really was no way for him to escape save out the front door. Being at bay the young man looked as if nothing at all extraordinary had happened and his excuse was believable enough.

"I came in to examine the radiators," he said. "That—that's my specialty," and then going to get his hat and a couple of books that lay with it from a chair in the living room he made a hasty exit. In the apartment that day there was the same very fresh smell of soap and water and it seemed to Terry that the young man's hands had looked water soaked when she encountered him. And she examined the silver and counted the spoons and knives and butter spreaders. Nothing was missing.

One day she crept in stealthily and encountered the young man on his hands and knees scrubbing the kitchen floor.

"I thought you were a business woman," he confronted her, standing up with dripping hands and revealing a ticking apron tied about his manly young form. "You see, I thought all these people were business people. I didn't know they kept dropping in unexpectedly."

"Where is Mrs. Gray?" said Terry, trying to appear very calm, although she had a dreadful feeling that this strange young man had spirited Mrs. Gray away and was hiding his guilt by continuing her work.

"Well, I'm as much Mrs. Gray as any one is," he said. "What difference is it to you?" Then apologetically: "Pardon me, please, I didn't mean that—but you see, I've been doing this for quite a while and I have never been caught before. I just couldn't see her do it any more. We didn't want any one to know much about us."

"I think when I find a strange man in my apartment two days and see him in the window another I have a right to know all about it," said Terry, with some asperity. And then somehow they went into the little living room and, seated there in one of Terry's comfortable chairs, he told her all about it.

"You see, my father died just when I was finishing high school. He left hardly anything—he'd lost it all in a Wall street panic just before he died. Mother and he had set their hearts on having me be a lawyer and I had, too. Of course, I wanted to quit school and go to work for her, but she wouldn't let me. She wanted to see me through college and law course. You know how it used to be with women of her generation — they just weren't taught any money-making trade and the only thing she could do that would bring in enough money was to take care of apartments like this. She could attend to the house at home first and then come over here and do these apartments. Well, she did that and I worked after school. I couldn't endure to see her do this, but I was bent on finishing law school, because I knew that then I'd be able to give her the things she deserved. This winter it was too much for me to see her doing this work, yet this sort of work brought in more than I could possibly earn at stray tutoring or any of the usual things students do. So I just did her work for her whenever I had a few hours off at law school. That way I bring in enough to keep us both going. I don't mind your finding out that I do the scrubbing, but she'd be heartbroken. It is a funny pride she has—she wouldn't mind doing it herself, but she couldn't endure to have me do it."

Terry came over to the young man. He rose beside her, and she laid two small hands on his arms. "I think you are the most splendid young man I have ever met, and your mother, I know, is very proud of it. I'll never tell anyone your secret," and I know some day you will win for your mother all the things she deserves."

The next day Terry purposely arranged to be home when the young man — Bob Gray—came. "I've got something to ask you," she told him. "I'm dreadfully lonely here, and I don't like the idea of living alone, anyway. I want you to let me have your mother here with me—to be a sort of mother to me. She can potter around the apartment if she wants to, just the way my own mother might, and what that will be worth to me, of course, she will have, and that will be as much as you need to get from the apartment tending."

Of course, Bob Gray remonstrated, at first, but before a week had passed Mrs. Gray was installed as Terry's "adopted mother," and a real mother could have been no more congenial.

Bob had but a few months more to spend at the law school, and the very day of his graduation he told Terry that he loved her and begged her to marry him.

"I couldn't do this," he said, "if it weren't for what has happened. I couldn't ever hope to be your husband if I weren't sure that I would succeed. I am sure, just as every man must be sure when he knows that the profession he has chosen is the right choice. And today I received word from the firm of Hewes & Tuttle that they would take me in as soon as I pass my bar examinations next week at a salary to start of two thousand. I was fortunate enough to have the help and friendship of one of our best professors and the appointment came through him. I am still unworthy of you, Terry, but with something in the way of prospects I have nerve enough to ask you."

Terry took his outstretched hand in both of hers and held it reassuringly. "Bob, I'm surer of your success than you are yourself. I knew you'd succeed when I saw the way you scrubbed the floors and kept at that drudgery to save your mother."

The Slow One.

"Would you," he said after they had been sitting in the dark for a long time, "be angry with me if I were to kiss you?"

She was silent for a moment. Then in tones the meaning of which was not to be mistaken she replied:

"What do you suppose I turned down the light an hour and a half ago?"

And yet he wondered, poor fool, how other young men who had started far in the rear were able to pass him in race of life.

Are Your Pulley Problems Well in Hand?

Have you reduced "belt slip" and weight-friction to a minimum? Can you show, despite increased price of coal, that your power bills are less, because you are getting more results from each unit? Many Superintendents are showing these results to-day, because they are replacing metal pulleys by Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys.

$10.00 per pulley per year is the smallest average saving of power costs by such replacements.

This is a big claim, but it has been proven over and over again. Write for more information.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS WHEREABOUTS OF MAJOR W. J. SHARPE.

Bloodhound Followed Scent Inland Instead of to the Water — The Major Seen in Automobile on Friday Night.

Nothing has been discovered respecting the whereabouts of Major W. J. Sharpe, casualty officer of M.D. No. 3. The Army and Navy Veterans' Association employed a diver to search in the water within a radius of one hundred feet from the spot where his clothing was found. The work was conducted on Saturday afternoon and again on Sunday morning. On Sunday afternoon an English bloodhound was given the scent and taken to the spot where the clothing had lain, but, it is stated, that instead of going toward the water it turned inland, which indicated that the major never walked into the water, but may have walked away from it. Those who have been employed in the search are said to be of the opinion that the body will not be found in the water and the mystery of the disappearance and the finding of the clothing at such an unlikely place deepens.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

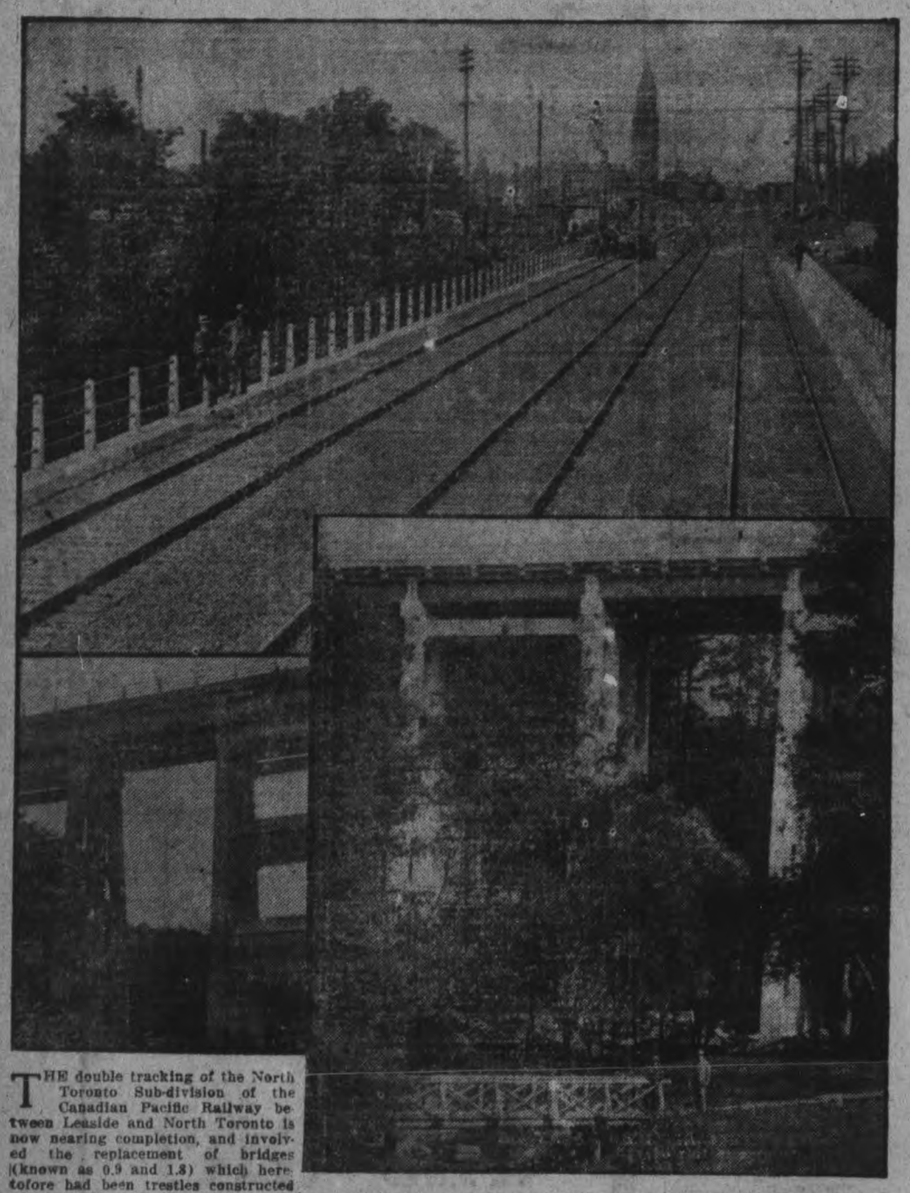
Record In Concrete Bridge-Building



THE double tracking of the North Toronto Sub-division of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Leaside and North Toronto is now nearing completion, and involved the replacement of bridges (known as 0.9 and 1.8) which heretofore had been trestles constructed of steel. Owing to the high price of steel and the difficulty of procuring it since the war began it was found that reinforced concrete competed successfully against steel.

The bridges were therefore constructed of this material and are a triumph of railway construction work, No. 0.9 being 386 feet long and 90 feet high carrying two tracks and No. 1.8 of similar dimensions, but a three track structure. The length of the individual spans and the details of their construction are unprecedented in the engineering world. Previous to this no reinforced concrete beam with a length of more than about 25 feet had been attempted; the spans of these two C. P. R. structures are each from 35 to 37 feet long. These spans have been made possible by the employment of unit construction by which each span was designed as two T beams which, after being manufactured near the work, were laid side by side on the previously built reinforced concrete towers. The towers themselves are really reinforced concrete buildings constructed in the usual manner by means of wooden forms built around a steel reinforcement which was previously assembled and securely wired together. When all was in readiness the concrete was poured by means of long spouts which led in several directions from the main mixing tower. The pouring of the concrete was maintained as continuously as possible until a whole tower was completed. This work was done during the winter at a time when the temperature was below freezing point; it was performed inside of what was virtually a building erected to maintain a suitable temperature around the newly deposited concrete until it was out of danger of being damaged by frost.

These two structures are provided with narrow sidewalks and handrails, which enable trainmen to move conveniently along side-standing trains. The hand rails add considerably to the aesthetic appearance of the structures, which are extremely artistic in appearance and at the same time satisfactory from a general and utilitarian point of view, besides being absolutely permanent. Both are designed to carry the heaviest engines in existence with a considerable margin of safety, and are epoch-making in the art of bridge engineering inasmuch as they have demonstrated that reinforced concrete can take the place of steel for a very large number of permanent bridges.

These two structures are so solid that when passing over them on a train one gets the impression that he is on a solid fill instead of a bridge.

The method employed in the erection of the reinforced concrete spans is a specially interesting feature of the structures. Each slab, as a unit, weighed 55 tons, which was the limit load that could be handled by the C. P. R. 100 ton standard wrecking cranes. The crane engaged handled no less than 110 slabs, each 55 tons in weight, or in all something like 6,000 tons, and all this was done without a single mishap to either men or material. Another remarkable feature is that both structures were built without interruption from June, 1917, to July, 1918, which was a shorter period than would have been required to manufacture and erect similar structures in steel. Passenger and freight traffic on the C. P. R. main lines was continued without interruption during the progress of these interesting works.

SHE HAD A METHOD

By NEWTON CALDWELL.
[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

When Miss Arietta Beale of Chicago drove to her hotel in Lucerne, Switzerland, it was not to see sights nor to buy lingerie in the shops on the Lowenstrasse before which young women in Swiss costume sit embroidering. Her purpose was to meet a young man she had never seen coming in an opposite direction, with a view to determine if she would accept him for a husband. Moreover, the young man was coming to determine if he would accept Miss Beale for a wife.

The prelude to the story is this: Hiram Beale, land speculator, had borrowed money from Edward Larned (who had plenty to lend) to carry his property, which if held would in time make him immensely rich. The ready funds of Larned united to the real estate of Beale would produce a colossal fortune. Could the two induce the only son of the one and the only daughter of the other to marry? The young people agreed to the plan, provided they suited each other; hence the meeting in Lucerne.

Now, it pleased Miss Beale to have a look at her enemy from under cover. For this purpose she had brought with her her friend, Miss Laura Bergen, whom she proposed to introduce to young George Larned as herself and observe him as a disinterested party. On her arrival at Lucerne she sent a note to Mr. Larned's hotel notifying him that she would attend the opera to be given that evening in the Kursaal (Casino) and between the acts would sit in company with her friend, Miss Bergen, in the salon, where she would be pleased to meet him. He would know her by a lavender orchid in her hair.

Mr. Larned had been traveling with his friend George Pierson, and, since Miss Beale would have a friend with her, he invited Pierson to go with him to the meeting that he might eliminate Miss Bergen. It was during the first intermission of the opera that a gentleman stepped up to a lady with an orchid in her hair in the salon of the Kursaal, announced himself as Mr. James Larned and introduced his friend, Mr. Pierson. The lady—Miss Bergen, who was personating Miss Beale—introduced the friends to the real Miss Beale as Miss Bergen. After a short season of introductory conversation the bell rang to announce a continuance of the opera, and the quartet adjourned to the music hall, Mr. Larned taking a seat beside Miss Bergen and Mr. Pierson one beside Miss Beale.

After the opera, when the two girls were retiring, Miss Beale admitted that she infinitely preferred Mr. Larned's friend, who had been her attendant. Miss Bergen declared that Mr. Larned was the more attractive man of the two. The men made similar statements with reference to the girls, each preferring the girl to whom he had been devoting himself.

During the next week the quartet made the ascents of Mount Pilatus and the Rigi, excursions on Lake Lucerne and spent their evenings in the Kursaal or its gardens listening to excellent music. They even risked a five franc piece on the gaming table, just to experience a new sensation. The sensation proved the loss of the coin. Such a life is especially conducive to lovemaking, and it was not long before the first and second couples, so to speak, were in the last throes of a courtship.

At this time Miss Beale was called home by cable, her mother being dangerously ill. She had come abroad for the purpose of becoming engaged to Mr. Larned and was grieved to return engaged to his friend, Mr. Pierson. She also knew that Mr. Larned was engaged to the friend she had brought with her to act as her dummy.

On Miss Beale's return she kept her secret till her mother recovered, when she broke the matter to her father and well nigh broke his heart at the same time. He announced the failure of the plan to Edward Larned, who received the information without showing any especial disappointment. The man of ready cash had always been indifferent to a union with unproductive property. He wrote his son that the lady whom he was to have married had fallen in love with his friend. Larned, who had kept his own counsel as to how matters were going, wrote that he would return immediately.

On his arrival he told his father that he wished for an interview with Miss Beale in presence of the two fathers who had arranged the match. Mr. Larned told his son that if his object was to bring pressure to bear on the lady to marry him he would be disappointed, since she had expressed an unalterable resolution to marry his friend. The son, however, persisted in his request.

The meeting took place in Mr. Beale's house. When it was announced to Miss Beale that the Larneds, father and son, were in the library ready for the conference, nerving herself for a disagreeable interview, she entered the room.

She stopped and started. The younger man she saw there was her lover. He advanced to meet her, with a smile.

"You put your friend forward as yourself," he said.

"I did."

"And I put my friend forward as myself. A double negative gives a positive result."

"You should have been ashamed of yourself!" exclaimed Miss Beale, with a pout and an expression of mingled happiness mingled.

"I am. So is George Pierson and your friend, Laura Bergen. We'll have a double wedding to celebrate the happy outcome of a quartet deception."

MIND AND HEALTH.

Physical Conditions Often at the Mercy of Mental Attitudes.

A scientist writes: "A woman fancied she had swallowed a frog and was rapidly sinking. The efforts of physicians failed to afford her relief. It occurred to some one that she might be deluded into health. A tiny frog was caught and put into a tube with which they were attempting to wash out her stomach. When the frog was thrown out of the tube the girl expressed relief and said she hoped they were satisfied her complaints had a real foundation. In a short time she was restored to health. This is only one of the instances in which the mind has affected the physical condition.

"No one doubts that persons have been frightened to death, and ridicule in statements of this kind should end. The influence of the mind is a subject which calls for investigation and study. There is no question that mental agitation aggravates, if it does not cause, disease. Many a child droops and dies because it feels it is unappreciated and neglected. Many who survive drag out a miserable existence instead of being full of hope and joy and energy, promise and pleasure and making themselves useful in the world."—New York Press.

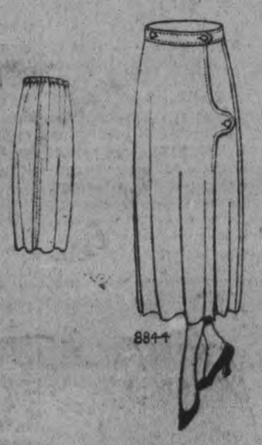
THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

STOUT LADY'S FIVE PIECE SKIRT.



This skirt is an up-to-date model for the stout figure, and its lines were carefully designed to give the slim silhouette. No. 8844 has five gores, the front one being shaped at the hipline in two tab-like extensions which are held in place by fancy buttons. There is a wide tuck at centre back, and the narrow side front gores as well as the two back gores are gathered to the slightly raised waistline. ADVERTISING

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING offers the manufacturer the best possible way to eliminate waste circulation, for it enables him to advertise where he has and can get distribution. To sell goods profitably depends largely on ability to reach the maximum number of people at the minimum cost.

Newspaper advertising is the quickest and surest means of getting retail distribution. It shows the retailer that a wide spread demand is being created.

The dealer is always ready to sell products that sell easy. He is a reader and an advertiser of the daily newspaper, and is sold on newspaper advertising, for he knows what it will do.

You prove to the retailer you are doing the utmost to help create a demand for him; this is real distribution. You can expand at will, adding steadily to your markets making each a permanent stronghold.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

EVER SEE A PINK MONKEY?

This South American Brand Is Worse Than the Other Kind.

If you should ever happen to be wandering about the Choco section of Columbia it would be well to have an eye out for the sobbing monkey. If this animal gets on your trail you might as well ring down the curtain and put a period after yourself.

When it gets after the Columbian Indians, according to H. G. Spurrell, naturalist and member of the London School of Tropical Medicine, the Indian listens to the beast's soul withering sobs for three days and three nights and then commits suicide.

Mr. Spurrell says that the sobbing monkey is pink and is one of the most rare animals in South America. For reasons that have never been made clear the sobbing monkey will at certain times in the year leave its home in the most impenetrable wilderness and go to the nearest Indian encampment, where it will select its victim and follow him day and night, keeping up a continual weeping and wailing.

According to tribal traditions this is a sure sign that the victim will shortly be taken with the sleeping sickness or some other fatal disease. It has been customary for the natives to listen to the monkey's sobbing for three days and three nights and then commit suicide, thus avoiding death by the dreaded sickness.—New York Mail.

"No, nor I. I'd ask him right straight off, before his gratitude got a chance to cool."

The British Regained Ground Taken By The Germans

The German Heavy Artillery Is Now Reported In Action

Enemy Attack Against the French Front Last Night Repulsed With Heavy Losses

Allies Have Made Progress at Several Points on the New Line —Prisoners and Guns Captured.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Along the Vesle river the French continue to repulse German attacks, especially between Braisne and Soissons. The War Office announced that 100 prisoners have been captured east of Braisne. The Germans to-day made a local attack against French positions south of Auberive, in the Champagne. They were repulsed. French troops last night made further gains in the Montdidier region.

The statement follows:

In the region of Montdidier our troops have made some local progress south of Framicourt and southeast of Mesnil St. Georges, west of Montdidier. Along the Vesle the French last night repulsed German attempt against Langrange Farm, west of Braisne and occupied the station at Circy Salsogne. We made 100 prisoners east of Braisne. In the Champagne a local attack was directed this morning against our positions south of Auberive. It was thrown back.

MAY SHORTEN LINE.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Indications are that the German High Command is about ready to proceed with another shortening of the western front on a different sector than that between Soissons and Rheims, according to a Zurich despatch. This operation it is added, had in view not only the occupation of more favourable positions, but more particularly the release of considerable numbers of divisions.

BRITISH LINE ADVANCED.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 7.—In an attack carried out this morning south-west of Morlancourt, the British regained ground taken from them by the Germans yesterday along the Bray-Corbie road north of the Somme. The British line astride the Clarence river on the Flanders front has been advanced a short distance. A few prisoners were taken during the course of the operations.

THE STATEMENT READS.

At an early hour this morning British troops holding a sector in our front southwest of Morlancourt counter-attacked and regained all of the more important portions of the ground taken from them by the enemy in his attack yesterday. All objectives of our counter attack have been secured and a number of prisoners captured by us. As a result of the action of our patrols yesterday and during the night we have advanced our line a short distance astride the Clarence River (in the Lys sector), and captured a few prisoners and two machine guns. A party of our troops successfully rushed one of the enemy posts last night north of Vieux Berquin, on the north side of the Lys sector. The hostile artillery has been active east of Robecq, and in Merville and Dickebusch sectors.

Canadian Press:

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, Aug. 37. —(2.30 p.m.)—The Allies to-day threw a force across the River Vesle. It met and defeated the Germans. The enemy launched a strong counter attack, which was repulsed by a violent barrage.

Heavy Fighting.

(John De Gandt—United Press.)

PARIS, Aug. 7.—(4 p.m.)—Greater activity is reported on both the extreme wings of the Aisne-Vesle battle front, where the Germans have concentrated heavy forces to oppose any flanking movement by the Allies. Heavy artillery firing is under way along the whole front.

Occupation of the Ciry-Balsognes railway station six miles east of Soissons has created an interesting situation in the region northwest of Braisne, where fairly strong forces of allied troops are filtering in. In the Montdidier region French troops are reported to have reached the suburbs of Moreuil. Moreuil is the most important town between Amiens and Montdidier. It is on the east bank of the Avre, nine miles north of Montdidier.

German Sailors Revolt in Protest Against the Submarine War

LONDON, August 7.—Rumours of revolt by German sailors at Wilhelmshaven in protest against the continuation of the submarine war are in circulation, according to a despatch to the Daily Express from Amsterdam. It is reported that propagandists among the men incited sailors about to leave on submarine cruises to attack their officers and surrender their ships or seek an opportunity to sink them and get themselves interned in neutral harbours. More than fifty submarines are said to have disappeared. Twenty-three of the ring-leaders of the revolt are reported to have been arrested and sentenced to death. Many others have been arrested at Kiel and elsewhere, it is added.

Diamond Shoals Lightship Was Sunk in United States Waters

Crew Took to Their Boats and Reached Shore Safely—A Daring Act.

Canadian Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Diamond Shoals lightship off Cape Hatteras, N.C., was shelled and sunk by an enemy submarine late yesterday. The crew who took to their boats reached shore safely. The submarine came within half a mile of the shore according to the navy officials.

The Diamond Shoals light station is one of the most famous guides to navigation in the world and has been the subject of many a story in verse and prose. Such usually are manned by gray beards and are of such type as to be utterly helpless in face of an enemy attack. The attacking submarine probably was one that sank the American tank steamer O. P. Jennings 100 miles off Virginia coast several days ago. Her exploit in showing herself above water within half mile of the Carolina coast, in an important shipping line where innumerable patrol boats are supposed to be plying is one of the most daring recorded since German raiders first made their appearance on this side of the Atlantic.

TEMPERATURE WAS HIGHER TO-DAY

This is the Highest Figure Reached This Summer.

The present warm spell is being felt much more severely farther south than here. Chicago yesterday had a temperature of 102. St. Louis 104, while numerous other places went over 90. The highest here in Peterboro was 87 yesterday. To-day, however, is warmer. At two o'clock this afternoon the thermometer was up to 95. This is the same as Sunday, July 21st, and no higher figure has been reached this summer. A severe thunderstorm which threatened at one o'clock morning did not bring much rain, only .14 of an inch.—W.P.

German Heavy Artillery Now in Action on the New Front

Operations Have Been Brought to a Standstill—Fismes is Under Heavy Shellfire From the Enemy Lines.

VESLE UNDER CONSTANT FIRE

(United Press Despatch.)

(By Fred Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 7.—German heavy artillery is in action for the first time since the Boches were driven over the Ourcq River. The shelling is not the most violent since the enemy's retreat from the Marne.

This is the first indication that the German guns have reached the line where the enemy intends to make a stand. Some are probably firing from the north of the Aisne, but the main line of resistance appears to be along the heights between the Aisne and the Vesle. Fismes is under a terrific fire of high explosives and gas. Our gunners are giving as good as they receive or even better. The sogginess of the ground, resulting from the continual rain, together with the necessity for caution, has resulted in a complete slowing up of operations.

The southern portion of Fismes is held in force by the Americans, snipers are being routed out in a house to house search. But infantry operations in the past twenty-four hours have been confined to patrolling and searching out of German lines. The Boches are keeping the Vesle under constant gun-fire, and patrols are doing daring work in crossing the river.

Did Not Read the Riot Act

Conference Held This Morning Came to a Satisfa ctory Conclusion.

Canadian Press.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—Accepting as an invitation, the announcement of Mayor Church, made last night that he would read the Riot Act, from steps of the City Hall at noon today. About ten thousand men and women gathered at that time and place to witness this event. The Mayor, however, did not take the drastic measures which he had threatened. About 12.15 accompanied by quartette or representatives returned soldiers, His Worship appeared at the City Hall doorway and went through the motions of making a speech. It was sometime before he could make himself heard owing of voices offering sundry advice on the matter in question. Finally however those nearest him gathered that he had during the morning held a conference with a committee of returned soldiers who had agreed on behalf of their comrades that so far as they were concerned there should be no more parading pending an official investigation into the men's grievances. Then followed the singing of National Anthem and cheers for the King after which most of the crowd melted away more or less disappointed at the tameness of the whole proceeding.

Marooned Men Were Rescued

Men Were in Grave Danger for 16 Hours—A Thrilling Rescue.

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Aug 7. — After being marooned on a sand scow within 1,000 feet of the brink of Niagara Falls for 16 hours, George Harris, of Buffalo, and Gus Lofberg, a Swedish sailor, were rescued by the Youngstown life saving crew this morning. The life savers had to abandon their work at midnight. Searchlights were kept on the wreck and an electrical sign was rigged up, showing the word "Rest," so the men would know they had not been abandoned. Then a second line was shot across the wreck from the roof of the power house, where the shore end of the cable was anchored, and with it the breeches buoy was hauled out by the two men. Loberg helped Harris into the breeches and he was brought in. The weight of his body on the rope caused it to sag deep into the current, and there was danger that the extra strain on the scow would tear it loose from its uncertain position on the rock. They were both brought safely in.

A Brave Effort.

At six o'clock this morning William Hill, of Niagara Falls, winner of two Carnegie medals for rescuing persons from death in the Niagara river before the war, and wearing the Distinguished Service Medal and other decorations for bravery while fighting in France, with the Canadians, attempted to reach the men on the scow by going out on a breeches buoy on lines shot across the scow by the life-saving crew from Fort Niagara. The lines became tangled and Hill was hauled back to shore with difficulty.

Peterboro Boy Killed in Action

Was a Member of the United States Army.

Mrs. Tobin, Stanley avenue, received word on Sunday from Washington, that her son Pte. James Tobin was killed in action on July 19.—No further particulars have as yet been received. Pte. Tobin's name appeared in last night's paper as Herbert Togan. He enlisted in the U. S. regular army in March last and has only been in France a short time. There are left to mourn his loss besides his mother, five sisters, Mr. E. J. Dunbeck, Rochester; Mrs. J. J. Anglesey, Cobalt, Sister M. Beata, Mount St. Joseph, and Mrs. Gilbert Downer and Miss Catherine at home, also one brother, Pte. Vincent Tobin with the 5th C. M. R. France. He was wounded in May 1917, but is back in the trenches again.

REPORT IS UNTRUE.

The report that Sergt. Albert Stanley was a casualty which was spread about the city is fortunately incorrect and Mrs. Stanley has had no bad news.

MORE COAL REGULATIONS

Coal Dealers Must Display Printed Notice Containing Prevailing Prices.

DEALER'S SALARY

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—Regulations regarding the importation, sale and delivery of coal have been issued by the Fuel Controller. Among other things they require that every coal dealer shall post in a prominent place in his office a conspicuous type-written or printed notice containing a list of prevailing retail prices of all classes and sizes of coal handled by him, including discounts, if any. In calculating overhead charge to determine the price of coal, dealers are required to exercise moderation in the amount they include as their own salaries. In this connection the regulations state "salaries and expenses to officers or partners are not to be increased over those prevailing during the year 1914 at a greater rate than salaries in other lines have increased. A dealer may charge his business with his own salary, but a reasonable rate only."

Dealers conducting a retail as well as a wholesale business are required to apportion their overhead expenses and fixed charge to each branch, and this apportionment must bear reasonable comparison with the average overhead expenses and fixed charges of dealers who are engaged entirely in retail or entirely in wholesale business.

FRANK JENNE Says:

There are days when it is exceedingly difficult to tell what is coming next; it is a time to play safe. The safe course, is unquestionably to purchase clothing when the price is low, before the autumn goods come in with higher prices than ever. If you have not looked over the suits I am selling during my "Investment Sale," do so this week. "Come to me."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 7TH, 1918.

HOLD FAST.

"The message which I send to the people of the British Empire on the fourth anniversary of their entry into the war, is, 'Hold fast.'

"We are in this war for no selfish ends. We are in it to recover freedom for the nations which have been brutally attacked and despoiled, and to prove that no people, however powerful, can surrender itself to the lawless ambitions of militarism without meeting retribution, swift, certain and disastrous, at the hands of the free nations of the world. To stop short of victory for this cause would be to compromise the future of mankind.

"I say 'Hold fast.' Because our prospects of victory have never been so bright as they are to-day. Six months ago the rulers of Germany deliberately rejected the just and reasonable settlement proposed by the allies. Throwing aside the last mask of moderation, they partitioned Russia, enslaved Roumania, and attempted to seize supreme power by overthrowing the allies in a final and desperate attack. Thanks to the invincible bravery of all the allied armies, it is now evident to all that this dream of universal conquest for the sake of which they wantonly prolonged the war, can never be fulfilled.

"But the battle is not yet won. The great autocracy of Prussia will still endeavor by violence or guile, to avoid defeat and so give militarism a new lease of life. We cannot seek to escape the horrors of war for ourselves by laying them up for our children. Having set our hands to the task, we must see it through till a just and lasting settlement is achieved.

"In no other way can be assure a world set free from war.

"Hold fast."

"(Signed Lloyd George."

THE COAL COMMISSION.

The appointment of a Fuel Commission to take the place of Ald. Edgar, whose resignation was handed in the other night, is satisfactory as far as the personnel of the committee is concerned. Ex-Mayors W. H. Bradburn and T. H. G. Denne are men with much experience in the civic arena, and Mr. M. L. Campbell, the third member of the commission, will see that the interests of the labour men are protected. No fault can be found with the appointments, and so far as their powers will enable them, and the regulations will allow them, the new commission will undoubtedly use every effort to provide for an equitable distribution of coal.

The difficulty lies in the interpretation of the regulations. It is provided that the Fuel Commission may order the dealers to follow their instructions in the delivery of coal, provided there is any likelihood of an emergency. There's the rub. The dealers in their conference with Ald. Edgar last week, maintained that there is no present emergency, and little chance of there being one, and, therefore, they have announced their intention of looking after the orders on their books and supplying their customers up to the 70 per cent limit. The citizen who has been unable to get any coal, however, sees an emergency, and a real one, and the demand that distribution be limited to twenty-five per cent. of requirements, finds much favour in his eyes, if not in those of the dealers.

It would certainly do much to ease the present situation if every householder could face the coming winter, knowing that he has at least enough coal, to carry him part of the way through. As matters are at present, many citizens who have been unable to buy a pound of coal up to now, are chafing under a system that seems to favour some people at the expense of their neighboure.

THE LATEST ATROCITY.

The sinking of the British ambulance ship "Warilda," and the murder of one hundred and twenty-two persons, including many wounded soldiers and several women nurses, is the latest atrocity to the discredit of the German U-boats. The torpedoing of the "Warilda" is officially described as "one of the most harrowing disasters in the history of submarine warfare," and the details as published bear out the truth of thie description. The steamer was en route from France to England with wounded men, attended of course by doctors and nurses. The torpedo struck the "Warilda" in the after-part of the engine room, destroying the dynamo. Over the latter was the ward room, containing over one hundred wounded soldiers. The frightful nature of the disaster is shown by the fact that the majority of these poor fellows on their way home to Blighty were killed by the explosion, and of the other nearly all were trapped, only a few who were able to jump overboard, where they were picked up, being saved. The story of the fearful struggle in the darkness to save the helpless wounded men, is a harrowinbg one, and the whole catastrophe is of a nature that will add fresh fuel to the fire of hatred possessed by the British seamen against the Germans. Like the sinking of the "Llandovery Castle" there was absolutely no justification for this latest outrage.

GOOD ADVICE.

There is good advice to the returned soldier in an article in the Toronto Mail and Empire, dealing with the recent riots in the Queen City. The Mail, in common with Canadian newspapers everywhere, condemns the riots, and advocates the iron hand in the following terms:

"There is but one way to deal with rioters. No matter under what excitement they may be labouring, no matter by what incitement they may be set on, they must be repressed, and whatever means are found necessary for their repression must be employed. Public order must be maintained, the persons and property of all the people must be protected. Mob violence must be stamped out; would-be regulators must be regulated."

Sober-minded public opinion throughout Canada will recognize the truth of these statements, and returned men are asked to study the good sense shown in the following reference made by The Mail:

"Not only the military authorities, but all returned soldiers as well, are concerned to prevent wearers of the khaki mixing themselves with disturbers of the peace. The soldiers deservedly stand high in the favour of the people. They have the popular gratitude and admiration, and if in civil life they live up to the high reputation they won for themselves by their defence of their country there is nothing in reason that will be denied them. But if sundry of them let themselves be used by ringleaders of hoodlums who succeeded in avoiding the draft, by Bolshevik banditti, by men of the I.W.W. kidney, and by other rabble-mongers, they will get themselves behind iron bars and will prejudice the interests of returned men generally. We look to the solid sense of the mass of the returned men to keep down the feather-heads among them, and we look to the military authorities to use their influence effectually to keep these men from playing the fool and making a certain element in the community a menace to society.

"The element we speak of is made up of hoodlums who could not be got into a uniform because of their youth or because of physical incapacity, or because their class has not been called up. They would not break out into riots under their own red flag. No, they need the soldiers' colours and the soldiers' courage to give them leadership. Then they can be as daring, as vicious, and as destructive as the similar element in Quebec City proved itself to be. These gentry have nothing in common with the soldiers. They have no other use for the soldiers than to involve them in discreditable disturbances of this sort.

THE ALIEN QUESTION.

While no aggravation can be considered as sufficient to justify the riotous conduct of Toronto returned soldiers and the civilians who assisted them last Friday night, yet it must be admitted that the alien problem is one that is exceedingly serious, and that the Government's apparent disinclination to take action in the matter, is making the situation worse than it otherwise would have been. If draft treaties, similar to those now in force beween Great Britain, Canada and the United States, could be arranged with other allied countries, notably with Greece and Italy, much of the cause of ill-feeling would be removed. It is displeasing to Canadians generally that while the young men in Canada who are British subjects, are being conscripted to go overseas to fight for the common cause, thousands of sturdy young aliens, whose native countries are allies of Great Britain, are permitted to remain at home, and laugh at the Canadians who have to don the khaki.

The Kingston Whig deals with the subject in the following terms:

"While no law-abiding citizen can condone such riots as occurred in Toronto on Friday night, one is forced to admit, however, that there are conditions existing in Canadian cities to-day that are extremely aggravating and wholly unjust. The rioting soldiers were men who had served and suffered for their country. Returning home they found the foreigner enjoying all the liberties of British rule and waxing fat, while contributing little or nothing to the cause. He had not been obliged to fight, but remained behind to gather the rich harvest of wartime. The attention of Toronto rioters was focused upon restaurants, butcher shops and groceries, thus indicating that the unnecessarily high prices of food had something to do with the outbreak. Aliens controlled these places of business, as they do most of the fruit stores, shoe shine parlours, pool rooms and similar places in all Canadian cities. The Great War Veterans' Association have protested against this condition of affairs, and are likely soon to demand some drastic action. They feel that the foreigner should be drafted into some essential industry and thus made to serve the country that protects him, or that he should be returned to his native country. Canada for Canadians is a motto we might well adopt. We are at war, but there are times when we don't act very much likt it.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

"Put your old fire and enthusiasm into your work," is the timely advice issued by the Imperial Munitions Board to workers in Canada's munition plants.

The warning is needed, for, as the Board expresses it, "we are forcd to recognize a considerable slacking-up, man for man, and woman for woman, in Canadian munition production." This is a state of affaire that must be remedied. Munitions are wanted now as never before, and there is reason to believe that the Munitions Board is not exaggerating the situation in the least when it remarks that "Catastrophe would undoubtedly follow a continued slowing up of munitions labour."

THE TITLE PROBLEM.

Over across the line the title problem, which caused so much excitement in the Canadian parliament last spring, and nearly caused the resignation of Premier Borden, has begun to be prominent just now. With American soldiers and sailors winning disintcion overseas, the allies naturally are anxious to do proper honour to these heroes, with the result that there is trouble looming up on the horizon. The New York Times says:

Unless much tact is used in just the right quarters, the revived discussion of the question whether or not American soldiers and sailors should be allowed to accept foreign decorations and titles is likely to cause ill-feeling at a time when the fate of the world depends in no small measure on the maintenance of warm friendships between ourselves and our allies.

The rejection of a well-intentioned courtesy, and that is what the offering and the bestowal of these honours on our men certainly is, invariably gives easily comprehensible offense. That is an argument in favour of accepting with expressions of polite appreciation these symbols which, not without reason, are highly valued abroad and in consequence are there of high value. On the other hand, we in this country are not at all fond of titles of the kind that set the bearer apart from and above his fellows in the way that some of those recently offered to our Generals and Admirals do in the estimation of those who offer them, and any attempt to wear them here would be, to put it mildly, a little absurd

As is often the case, this trouble is due to hasty action on the part of Congress in removing entirely the long-established and well-observed rule that American citizens should not accept foreign titles, orders, or decorations. There, too, the intention was good, and the willingness to change the old prohibition commendable, for conditions had arises that fully justified our allies in giving, and our men in taking and proudly wearing, crosses and medals like these worn by other notably good fighters in the cause that has joined the United States and the better part of all the world in war against the common enemy.

To solve the problem satisfactorily, it is not necessary to restore the old prohibition in all its rigour, and it would not be either judicious or right to let its complete abandonment stand. Instead, there should be a sensible compromise. If a foreign and allied Government is moved to recognize the exceptional valor or exceptional service of an American in or out of uniform, forbidding him to take it would be boorish and stupid. But a title, or a reward more material than a cross or medal or ribbon, is quite another matter, and we can say, without giving reasonable offence to any of our friends, that such things are not in accord with American custom. That is not to proclaim our custom better than theirs—it is only to declare it different.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Germany is slowly crumbling to pieces." So writes a German soldier, who seems to have a better grasp of the situation than the Kaiser.

The Zeppelin commanders do not seem to have developed much skill during their long rest. The latest raid on England has accomplished nothing except the destruction of one of the German dirigibles.

The German U-boat commanders are still pinning their faith on frightfulness. The sinking of another hospital ship and the destruction of fishing smacks, are a poor answer to the allied offensive on land.

Regardless of Gender.

(London Daily Chronicle.)

Have we no English word of acclamation that we must cry "Brava!" regardless of gender or number? The headline of a newspaper column in honour of a feminine nation this week—"Bravo, Italy!" looked more than usually barbarous. Italia has indeed been brava, and one would like to tell her so without outraging her grammar. But let the English admirer note that the Italian abjective is not the equivalent of our "brave". It stands for good quality in any one—painter, diplomat, grocer, cook, etc.

[L.S.] CANADA.

PROCLAMATION

GEORGE the FIFTH, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, KING, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come or whom the same may in any wise concern,—GREETING :

A Proclamation of conditional amnesty respecting men belonging to Class 1 under the Military Service Act, 1917, who have disobeyed our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, or their orders to report for duty, or are deserters or absent without leave from the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

E. L. NEWCOMBE, Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada. } WHEREAS considerable numbers of men belonging to Class I under our Military Service Act, 1917, called out on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada under Our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, although they have thus become by law soldiers enlisted in the Military Service of Canada,

Have failed to report for duty as lawfully required of them under the said Military Service Act and the regulations thereunder, including the Order in Council duly passed on April 20 last,

Or have deserted,

Or absented themselves without leave from our Canadian Expeditionary Force,

And it is represented that the very serious and unfortunate situation in which these men find themselves is due in many cases to the fact that, notwithstanding the information and warning contained in Our Proclamation aforesaid, they have misunderstood their duty or obligation, or have been misled by the advice of ill-disposed, disloyal or seditious persons.

AND WHEREAS we desire, if possible, to avoid the infliction of the heavy penalties which the law imposes for the offences of which these soldiers have thus been guilty, and to afford them an opportunity within a limited time to report and make their services available in Our Canadian Expeditionary Force as is by law their bounden duty, and as is necessary for the defence of Our Dominion of Canada.

NOW KNOW YE that we in the exercise of Our powers, and of Our good will and pleasure in that behalf, do hereby proclaim and declare and cause to be published and made known THAT THE PENALTIES OF THE LAW WILL NOT BE IMPOSED OR EXACTED as against the men who belong to Class 1 under Our Military Service Act, 1917, and who have disobeyed Our Proclamation aforesaid ; or who have received notice from any of Our registrars or deputy registrars to report for duty on a day now past and have failed so to report ; or who, having reported and obtained leave of absence, have failed to report at the expiry of their leave, or have become deserters from Our Expeditionary Force, PROVIDED THEY REPORT FOR DUTY ON OR BEFORE THE TWENTY FOURTH DAY OF AUGUST 1918.

AND WE DO HEREBY STRICTLY WARN AND SOLEMNLY IMPRESS UPON ALL SUCH MEN, and as well those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist them in their disobedience, that, if they persist in their failure to report, absence or desertion until the expiry of the last mentioned day, they will be pursued and punished with all the rigour and severity of the law, SUBJECT TO THE JUDGMENT OF OUR COURTS MARTIAL WHICH WILL BE CONVENED TO TRY SUCH CASES or other competent tribunals: and also that those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist such men will be held strictly accountable as offenders and subject to the pains, penalties and forfeitures in that behalf by law provided for their said offence.

Provided however that nothing contained in this Our Proclamation is intended to release the men aforesaid from their obligation to report for duty as soon as possible or to grant them immunity from arrest or detention in the meantime for the purpose of compelling them to perform their military duty; Our intention being merely to forego or remit the penalties heretofore incurred for failure to report, absence without leave or desertion incurred by those men of the description aforesaid who shall be in the proper discharge of their military duties on or before the said twenty-fourth day of August, 1918.

Of all of which Our loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Victor Christian William, Duke of Devonshire, Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Earl of Burlington, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Cavendish of Keighley, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter: One of Our Most Honourable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, this FIRST day of AUGUST, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and in the ninth year of Our Reign.

By Command,

Thomas Mulvey

Under-Secretary of State.

THE AIR AND EDUCATION

(By an Airman.)

Ten years ago a book by one Herr Martin was published in Berlin, in which the author stated oracularly that the future of Germany lay in Asia and in the air. The book may have inspired the German military authorities; it is much more likely to have been inspired by them.

Even in Germany, an autocratic country ruled with contempt for public opinion, the need for education of opinion on aeronautics was felt. How much greater is the need in democratic Britain.

Democarcay imposes a burden of its own. A people who would be self-governed must have the knowledge of governors. They must be informed before they can instruct their delegates.

The importance of general education to Great Britain needs no argument at this time of day; the special urgency of education in aeronautics has been too little regarded. It is urgent because education takes time.

In peace it is in the public interest to criticize intelligently, and to arrive at a state wherein public criticism can be intelligent there must be education. Aviation and the Royal Air Force are new ideas. New ideas take root slowly and must compete in the public mind with established ideas. Not until democracy comprehends can it issue its orders to its Government Departments. Democracy must comprehend the air, which of all spheres is perhaps the most democratic.

Political thinking in terms of aeronautics has hardly begun in Great Britain. In Geramny the book alluded to above proves that it began ten years ago; and in Germany such thought has been progressive. There is no lack of solid proofs that Germany is thinking aeronautically. Her grabbing of the Roumanian petrol sources, and her planning of the Hamburg-Constantinople air route for commercial flying to be governed by strategic policy, are small examples.

Shall Germany when defeated in the land and sea war, get ahead of Britain in after-the-war flying? Only if Britain lets her, only if Britain neglects to maintain in peace the air superiority she is winning in war, only if an ill-instructed public opinion fails to rise to the occasion.

It must not fail. It must not be ill-instructed.

There is a factor which is a source of great strength to Germany. The German Empire is concentrated; the British Empire is far-flung. Germany by the fact that her resources (whatever they may be at the end of the war!) are to her hand, whilst those of the British Empire are scattered, is presented by Geography with an initial advantage.

The aeroplane is the great annihilator of distance. It can solve the problem of rapid transport in the face of a world shortage of shipping.

Is that an optimistic view of the aeroplane's function immediately after the war? Only an instructed democracy can decide.

Germany was the home of technical research. It was a great land for the improvement of other people's inventions. England must not repeat the mistake she made in presenting Germany with the dye industry, in this vastly greater matter of the air. Technical education in aeronautics must go hand in hand with political education.

Britain, perhaps because war sharpens wits, is in an imaginative mood, and indulgent to aviation because of the illustrious feats of her aviators. She must be more than that. She must take aviation seriously. She must educate herself aeronautically. Men who can teach her, the veterans of war aviation, abound.

They must lecture, they must be given opportunities of research. Educational authorities, both technical and general, must realize their responsibilities.

There is a new thing come into the world, and democracy must learn all about it. This is vitally important.

Peterboro Soldier Endorses Y.M.C.A.

Interesting Letter Bears Testimony to Good Work.

Miss Walton, of Smith street, has received the following letter from her nephew, Walter Jones, in the Gun Section, France:

"Now for my opinion of the Y.M.C.A. First, it is a highly favorable one. I cannot imagine what made the G.W.V.A. take the action they did. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men out here have nothing but words of praise for the work that the Y.M.C.A. is doing for us, and it is a work, too, believe me. There are a few bright spots in the dull and monotonous life of a soldier in France, and they are supplied or effected by the Y.M.C.A., which is really and truly our best friend. I would have a big task to enumerate all the things the Y.M.C.A. does for us. Right now I am in a Y.M.C.A. tent writing on paper supplied free, and being entertained by gramophone music. Their canteens, which are always quite handy, supply us with all kinds of canned goods, towels, chocolate, cigarettes, books, etc., etc. The Canadian Y.M.C.A. goes right into the line with us, runs a canteen there, has free tea and biscuit always. They run picture shows and bring concert parties to us when behind the lines, maintain reading, writing and recreation huts or tents, etc. During the summer they supply us with baseball outfits, footballs, boxing gloves and all kinds of sporting goods for our recreation. The prices charged at the canteens for goods are always very reasonable; the prices are fixed by the War Department Canteen Committee, so they could not charge less if they so desired. All profits made come back to us in a hundred and one ways, some even by cash. Then in England the association exists at every camp, is vastly organized in London for looking after and entertaining Canadians on leave. The whole work is laudable beyond words, is straight as a die all the way through and deserves all the support it is asking for in Canada. If you could imagine yourself out here you might be able to realize what all this means to us and you would wonder with me what ever got into the G.W.V.A. to interfere with the work of the Y. M. C. A. overseas. You will notice I have not mentioned the religious activities of the Y.M.C.A., but that phase of their work is also very exensive.

WALTER N. JONES,
In Gun Section in France.

President Wilson's Idealism.

(London Spectator.)

In what then does President Wilson's idealism consist? To many ecstatic imaginations in Great Britain it may seem a very dull and plain thing to say, but in our belief his idealism is chiefly represented by his determination to beat German militarism to its knees—to beat it come what may, at whatever cost, and without any gain to the United States except the triumph of an honourable principle. That, after all, is idealism of the most intense and splendid kind.

Food Board Flashes

Just to remind the picnickers again—it is not necessary to have a license or permit of any kind in order to have a picnic—

But—no sandwiches between 11.30 and 2.30.

What then? Well, oatcakes, for instance. And any housekeeper can think of other things.

As for meat—you have to watch the day you are having your picnic. You can have beef or veal on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. And you can have pork at the mid-day meal on Monday and Saturday. That is clear enough, isn't it. For the rest you may have eggs, salad, chicken, fruit and plenty of other things.

But remember — no icing on your cake.

WHAT AND HOW OF THE CHAUTAUQUA

How It Comes About That Peterboro is to be Favoured With a Week of Chautauqua—The Real Thing.

Twenty-five of Peterborough's citizens decided that it would be a good thing to bring the Chautauqua to Peterborough. When men are sufficiently interested in the welfare of their city to put their names on a Chautauqua contract it shows that they are built of the stuff of which success is made.

The sessions open on August 16th and run for one week, to and including August 22nd. It will be a Great Worth While Week. Not a doubt of it. In supporting the enterprise you are lining up with the people of over four thousand communities who have done and are doing this thing.

What will it do. It is of interest to churches, schools, reading and social circles, leagues, clubs, and every person within reach. It is a community betterment proposition and the entire community should have a part in it.

Let the young people share in it, especially the girls and boys. You are in so doing forming their tastes for better things. You are giving them the chance to see the men and women who have done big things and who may be the inspiration for these same boys and girls to do, in after life, still bigger things. Give the boys and girls a chance by getting them tickets. And then get tickets yourself.

It is not meant to tell you all about the Chautauqua in one article. It couldn't be done. It is too big a proposition. But if you can be interested you will read from day to day, and then you will be enthused to line up and go.

Here is a chance for the farming man and his people to share in a real good thing. He has his car. He can leave home and in half an hour reach the city and attend the evening performances, lectures and instructional sessions.

As for the dweller in the city, he has it close at hand. Just walk to Central Park. You will be welcome.

Now as to cost. Season tickets, that is for the entire week, only $2.00. Afternoons, (single admission) 50 cents. Children 25 cents. Evening, adults, 75 cents, children 35 cents. And, of course, the Dominion War Tax. Read other articles about the Chautauqua.

BOOKS FOR THE SOLDIERS

Six cases of books have already been sent to headquarters in Toronto for distribution among the camp libraries in Canada. It cannot be too insistently urged that there is a great need for books, that the call is ever urgent and that in meeting that call to the best of our ability we are in good measure assisting we are in ment in a financial and practical manner. In a letter just received from Mr. Carson, Inspector of Public Libraries for Ontario, he states that the books received from Peterborough have proved very acceptable and that in every book received from Peterborough he is having a label inserted with the words "This book was secured in a book-drive by the Peterborough Public Library." In a letter dated August 1st he says, "Practically all of the books that you sent us left for Petawawa today. There are two camps there, an infantry concentration camp and the Artillery Camp. Your books will form part of the Artillery Camp Library. I am pleased to hear that more books are coming. Our people are working on Camps Rathbone, Mohawk, Beamsville and a few others. We will do the very best we can with your books and will notify you as to where they have been sent so that you can notify your Board and the local press." Paper-covered books will be gladly received for the Isolation hospitals.

S. Burnham is In Police Court

HE IS CHARGED WITH RECEIVING MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETENCES—KNOWN IN PETERBORO.

COBOURG, Aug. 7.—S. Burnham, aged about seventy-six or seventy-eight years, came up in the Police Court here, charged with receiving $5.50 from F. M. Fields in the summer of 1916, under false pretences. Last week he paid a second visit to Cobourg and, it is alleged, tried unsuccessfully to work the worthless cheque game on two local banks. He was taken into custody by Chief Rose and came up on the 1916 charge, pleaded guilty, and was remanded. It is said that in May last Burnham was sentenced to six months in jail at Hamilton for beating a board bill. Also that he had a record at Kitchener, Chatham, St. Catharines, St. Thomas, Peterboro and other places. He states that he has been a barrister for more than fifty years, and laid claim to being the oldest barrister in Canada.

To The Editor of The Examiner:

With your permission I would offer a suggestion through your paper to His Worship the Mayor and Aldermen of this city, that they become members of some labour organization and that by doing so and can prove their worth, the chances are that they would get an insight on how to conduct a debate, I offer this suggestion because of the blunder our Mayor made in giving his decision on the motion of the Finance Committee which was to grant the 57th Regimental Band, $350; the Salvation Army Band $150; an amendment to the motion was put forward by Alderman Edgar that the grant be equally divided i.e. $250 to each band. The amendment carried by 4 to 3 the Mayor giving his decision as such. And after commenting on the way the Aldermen had voted he spun a great yarn as to the efforts put forth by the 57th Band in the way they had re-organized and such life, he brought conviction of his own mind that he should have voted and declared the vote a tie. This our Aldermen allowed with the exception of Alderman Edgar who protested against the Mayor changing his decision. If at the next election of Aldermen we hear the present bunch sing, "Where do we go from here?" Who's to blame?

ALEX. MURRAY.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Although it might possibly look like a bid for a little cheap notoriety on my part I would like to suggest to the Golf Club that during the hot weather they throw open the golf links which forms the bank of the Canal and of the big reservoir extending to Nassau to the mass of the people who may not feel able to enjoy a more expensive waterside resort. It is within easy reach from the street cars. It is true the club is not exempted from taxation but it is as I am sure every member will most readily agreed not exempted fro mtis duty as an association of men and women who are in everyway open-hearted and unselfish. Is it too much to ask the Y. M. C.A. to throw itself open during periods of psyeical distress in this way also?

MID-WEEK SERVICE AT MURRAY STREET

The Mid-week Service at Murray Street Church will be conducted tonight by Mr. A. S. Zavitz, B. A., of the Collegiate Institute staff. On next Sunday morning and evening Rev. H. E. Stillwell, B. A. of Toronto and formerly of India, will be the preacher.

N. DEBERARDINE WAS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Victim of Stabbing Affray is Still Very Weak—The Evidence.

The preliminary hearing of Nick Deberardine, charged with doing grievous bodily harm, was resumed yesterday afternoon at the police court. Linton Marcatulio, the victim of the stabbing affray, was present and was the first witness called. He is yet very weak and can only speak in a whisper.

According to the evidence, the prisoner and Marcatulio were having a game of cards at 4 o'clock Sunday morning on July 21. The stakes was a bottle of beer. There were six or seven others in the room, but he does not know their names except Deberardine, and his cousin Luigi, who owned the store at 245 George street, where they were playing. Nick told Marcatulio, or Marc, as he is called in English, that he could not play cards.

"You can't play cards," said Marc., heatedly. These few words at first said only in bnter, seem to be the cause of the whole affray.

Marc. saw Nick that night out in front of his house and heard him mention Marcatulio to a friend. He went out to find out why they were using his name, and after a few heated words Nick proposed a scrap. After a fisticuff lasting only a few minutes they were separated by Marc's cousin, who knocked Nick out with a chair as a weapon. While Marc was being taken into the house he got a knife in the back.

Saw the Knife.

"Did you see the knife in the prisoner's hands?" asked Magistrate Dumble.

"Yes; after I got the first jab I half turned around and clearly saw the knife. It was about six inches long."

He said that he thought that he received four thrusts.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCullough, the physician who attended Marc., explained to the court the position of the wounds and said that the wounds were in a dangerous place, although he cannot say that the lung was pierced.

Constable McIntosh, who made the arrest, said Marc. was laying or half sitting on a chair when he arrived. He bathed his wounds with peroxide. Dr. McCullough then arrived and took charge of the wounded man. P. C. McIntosh found Nick in the house of Febbo about a block away, quietly washing his hands. There was a large cut in Nick's scalp and a large lump. Blood was flowing profusely from the wound. The two shirts of Marc. were displayed in court, both stained with blood and having two holes where the knife had penetrated.

The prisoner's shirt was also displayed with a large blood stain on it, but it is not known whose blood it is.

Other Witnesses Called.

Luigi Moreno, the storekeeper, the wife of Marcatulio, his two sisters-in-law and his mother-in-law, were all called in turn and corroborated the evidence of Marc. All of them had witnessed the affray.

Magistrate Dumble, upon the evidence before him, committed the prisoner for trial. His case will come up at the Fall Assizes.

WILLIAM WRIGHT GAINS 20 POUNDS

"I Have Never Seen Anything to to Equal Tanlac," Says Toronto Machinist.

"The best proof I can give that Tanlac was the right thing for me is the way it has relieved my trouble and built me up," said William Wright, a well known machinist for the Canadian Aeroplane Company, living at 46 Symington Avenue, Toronto, recently.

"I had suffered from stomach trouble for more than a year and had fallen off twenty-five pounds," he continued, "and five bottles of Tanlac has not only relieved me entirely, but I have actually gotten back twenty pounds of my lost weight, besides Before I took it my appetite was very poor and my stomach was in such a bad fix that I couldn't eat anything without suffering terribly from indigestion. I had to give up eating the things I like best as they would hurt me so. I got so I would often skip my meals and what little I did eat I just had to force down. No matter what I ate it would sour and feel like a lump of lead in my stomach and I would belch up sour gas and undigested food for hours after every meal. I was right sick at my stomach at times, always had a bad taste in my mouth and felt tired, sluggish and no account. I would get up in the mornings feeling so bad that I actually hated to go to work. Anyone may know how I was going down by the way I lost in weight.

"My wife and I had been reading what others had to say about Tanlac, so I decided to see what there was to it for me. Well, my appetite soon got better and before I finished my third bottle I could see a wonderful improvement in every way. I eat good hearty meals and thoroughly enjoy them. My digestion is fine as is shown by the way I have increased in weight. My stomach trouble is a thing of the past with me and I am feeling just as well as if there had never been anything the matter with me. I notice now I always feel rested and ready for my work in the mornings. I don't have that drowsy, half dead feeling like I did before I took Tanlac. I have never seen anything to equal Tanlac as a medicine and I would certainly advise anyone to give it a trial."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelbert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Comparison of Salaries Paid Police in Other Ontario Cities

Presented at Yesterday's Meeting of the Police Commission When Local Police Got $100 a Year Increase—Firemen's Raise Influenced the Police.

$50 MAGISTRATE'S LIMIT

On the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread, the police force was more or less satisfied with the salary increases granted them yesterday afternoon by the Police Commission. "What you want and what you get are not always just the same," is philosophically accepted by Chief Thompson's men, and while they did not get all they asked, they were in a mood to welcome a decent compromise.

The petition requesting more money was as follows:

"Owing to the ever increasing high cost of living (the facts of which our Honorable Board are aware), we, the undersigned members of the Peterborough Police Department, desire to place before you our petition for an increase in salary. We beg to submit the following scale of wages for your approval:

Senior detective	$1400
Junior detective	1300
Senior sergeant	1400
Junior sergeant	1300
1st class constable	1200
2nd class constable	1100
3rd class constable	1000

Your obedient servants,

Jas. F. Reid, Harold D. Lawrence, John H. Deannard, W. R. McIntosh, D. T. Boyd, W. E Wigg, Arthur W. Blade, Graham Bromley, W. E Meagher.

Old Salaries.

The Department's pay list showed the following salaries, the slimness of which urged the men to seek a "little tilt".

Senior sergeant	$1125.00
Patrol sergeant	1075.00
Senior detective	1163.50
Junior detective	1063.50
1st class constable	1000.00
2nd class constable	900.00
3rd class constable	800.00

New Salaries.

The new salaries that become effective on September 1st, are as follows,

Chief Thompson	$2100.00
Detective Newhall	1363.50
Detective Meagher	1163.50
Sergeant Reid	1225.00
Sergeant Blade	1175.00
Seven constables (each)	1100.00

All 1st Class Men,

Chief Thompson and Detective Newhall withheld their signatures from the petition. All the constables are first-class men. The latest recruit, D T. Boyd, has had five years' experience, the Chief informed the Commission. Accordingly, he was engaged as a first class constable. This action was approved by the Commission.

Some of the Discussion.

Mayor Duncan— They got a raise this spring. Our rate is struck, and now they come along for a second increase.

Chief Thompson—The raise was not what they expected.

Mayor Duncan— Why didn't they say they weren't satisfied.

The Mayor stated that the police had received an increase just before the rates were struck this year.

"Our rates will be overrun if the increases are given," Judge Huycke remarked.

"What we should try to do is to keep our experienced men," said Chief Thompson.

Magistrate Dumble—I won't support any further increase unless there is some striking reason for it. There is only one man whose salary I would raise and that is Detective Newhall. He is head and shoulders over any man on the staff. His reputation has gone abroad. The people do not realize how much we owe to that reputation, keeping crooks away from the city. His salary ought to be raised.

Chief Thompson pointed out that the responsibility of maintaining order in the city fell upon the Department and Commission.

Mayor Duncan—The citizens are always after us to keep down salaries.

Chief Thompson—The men became uneasy last spring when the firemen were put over them.

Judge Huycke—We have an admirable force. I am sorry we lost Sergt. Kidd. He was the best man you had Chief with the exception of Detective Newhall. The requirements are for a higher type of men than the firemen and I believe we have them.

Chief Thompson—I don't think there is any doubt about that.

Mayor Duncan suggested an increase of $200 for Detective Newhall, and $100 for each of the other men.

"There is this difficulty," Judge Huycke said, "that after the war it will be difficult to get these salaries down again, when the munitions makers' wage are dropped."

"I don't see why they should get the increase," Magistrate Dumble remarked.

Judge Huycke considered that Chief Thompson should not be excluded from the list of increases.

Mayor Duncan referred to complaints from the ratepayers that salaries are steadily mounting.

"You would be blamed too, if stores were robbed and if peace and order were not maintained because of an indifferent force," Chief Thompson replied.

The increases were finally passed on a motion by Mayor Duncan, seconded by Judge Huycke, Magistrate Dumble dissented. He was prepared to give Detective Newhall $200 more, but $50 apiece was his limit for the rest of the men.

Firemen's Salaries.

Fire Chief	$1600.00
Asst. Chief	1322.50
Captain	1238.25
Lieutenant	1207.50
Firemen	1150.00

COAL PRICES ARE LOWERED IN BELLEVILLE

Effective Action by the Fuel Controller.

The authorities in Belleville waited on the Fuel Controller Magrath at Ottawa regarding prices of coal in Belleville. The Fuel Controller subsequently came to Belleville and commenced a four day's investigation of prices.

The prices then being charged by the dealers was $12.50 a ton. The price had advanced 50 cents a ton on July 1st from the price of $12 that had prevailed during the months of April, May an June.

As a result the Belleville coal dealers, on their own responsibility, reduced price of coal one dollar a ton, the new price being $11.50 a ton.

Fuel Controller Magrath also fixed the "margin" allowed the dealers at Belleville at $2.65 for anthracite coal and $2.50 for bituminous coal.

Freight, insurance and harbour dues amounts to $1.40 per ton in Belleville.

The cost of coal therefore f.o.b. boat at Belleville to the dealers who have been paying that price at Oswego for their coal is $8.41. Add to this $2.65, "margin" allowed after the coal leaves the boat and you have the proper retail selling price at Belleville—$11.06 a ton.

AN UNWARRANTEED FEAR

(Kansas City Times)

The gentlemen who fear that prohibition will throw vital war industries into confusion are highly imaginative. Already millions of Americans in dry territory are getting on without booze and there have been no riots over the deprivation. Let the timid souls cheer up. People can get along without things much better than they suppose. At a pinch they can get along without white bread. They can get along without coffee. The can get along without beer.

WHAT IS THE CHAUTAUQUA?

Since it has been announced that there is to be nearly a week's Chautauqua meetings held in Peterborough from August 16 to 22 a good many people are wondering just what Chautauqua meetings are, how they are conducted, and who is behind them. As soon about, everybody in Peterborough and the surrounding country will be talking about these meetings an answer to these questions should be interesting.

Some years ago some public spirited people in the United States conceived the idea that it might be possible to engage some of the world's greatest talent along different educational, entertainment, and musical lines to take part in a series of summer meetings to be held under canvas in various towns and cities. The object of the meetings was to make it possible for thousands of people who ordinarily could not hear such speakers and musical and other performanecs without going to the larger cities, such as Chicago, New York and Toronto, to hear them in their own home towns. During the summer months it is often possible for people of prominence, who are fully engaged during the winter season, to take part in meetings which they otherwise could not attend.

Non-Partisan.

The movement was started in a small way. It proved a great success and quickly spread throughout the United States. Chautauqua meetings now have been held in thousands of towns and cities. During the last year or two Chautauqua meetings have been held in Western Canada with great success, and this summer for the first time these meetings are being held in various towns and cities throughout Ontario. In order that a series of Chautauqua meetings might be held in Peterborough a number of Peterborough's leading citizens, purely in a spirit of public service, guaranteed $1,200 of the expense of bringing them here.

The management of the Chautauqua have made it clear what their purpose is in conducting these meetings. They are non-partisan in politics and non-sectarian in religion. One of the main purposes of the meeting is to help solve some of the big public problems of the day. In addition to musical and other entertainment features prominent people discuss at some of the meetings in a popular way such subjects as The Child, His Environment, His Health, His Education, The Woman—Her Freedom, Her Danger, Her Duty, The Horror of Rum, the poorman, who does not get his share, The richman, who gets more than his share, Taxation, the greatest weapon for economic justice in the hands of the state, How to get the efficiency of a Monarchy into a Democracy, and other kindred subjects.

Civic Improvement.

Those who are interested in the Chautauqua movement pledge themselves to work for the boys and girls, for the school and churches to help provide wholesome recreation and clean entertainment for their towns and cities, to work for their neighbours, to promote civic improvement and to other similar public measures.

The meetings in Peterborough will be held in an immense tent seating about 3,000 people which will be erected in Central Park. They will be held every afternoon and evening for nearly a week. In addition there will be special meetings for the children in the mornings. Because of the prominence of the people who are coming here and the high-class character of the entertainment, and the novel character of the programme, a very large attendance is expected here as there has been at other points. The series of meetingh held recently in Simcoe, Ontario, were so successful that the whole sum necessary to repeat a similar series of meetings next year was promptly pledged by The series of meetings held recently programme will be given from day to day in the papers.

P. C. BOYD APPREHENDS TWO MONTREAL MEN WITH CARGO OF ALCOHOL FOR PARRY SOUND

Both Disclaimed Ownership of Two Suit Cases Containing Six Gallons of Powerful Stuff—Joseph Brown Attempted to Load Pal With Blame, But at Length Pleaded Guilty.

WAS FINED $220

Camouflaged in syrup tins, with a smear of molasses around the short spouts, suggesting legitimate and innocent contents, six gallon tins of alcohol, three in each of two grips, were set up on the long table in front of Magistrate Dumble this morning. They were intercepted at the C.P.R. station this morning by P. C. Boyd, shortly after the 6.38 o'clock train from Montreal had departed for Toronto, in the possession of James Carroll and Joseph Brown of Montreal, who were arrested on a charge of having liquor in a "place other than their private dwelling."

Mrs. Celia Brown, who is said to be a sister of Joseph Brown, hadn't a registration card and was taken with the two men.

Both suit cases were new and heavily laden with a powerful high wine or alcohol, which it was stated could be used as the principal constituent of home-made liquor in arid prohibition zones. Both Brown and Carroll had a shaky "jag" when they reached Peterborough. When P. C. Boyd arrived at the station the train was moving out. The two men were in the waiting room, the suit cases in one corner Brown and his pal went out on the platform for an airing and P. C. Boyd gave the two suit cases a "once over," lifted them, and found them strangely heavy. He called the men in and ordered them to open the grips.

Carroll's fingers were palsied from the effects of a "toot" in Montreal yesterday, and P. C. Boyd sprang the locks himself. One of the suit cases had not only three tins of alcohol, but a quantity of new corks, a Savage automatic revolver and a small bottle of molasses, which Detective Newhall said would be used to colour the illicit liquor. He poured some of the alcohol into a tumbler, dropped molasses into it, and the pale, colourless fluid became a warm wine-red.

P. C. Boyd, in his evidence, stated that Carrol had told him he was running the alcohol for Brown, who had promised to pay his fine if he were caught. Separately, the men denied the ownership of the cases, and each told the constable that the "goods" belonged to the other.

Offered $50 to Boyd.

Before a taxi arrived for the party Brown said to P. C. Boyd: "Say Bo, your a white man alright. You let this slip and I'll slip you $50."

Carroll's Story.

Carroll's bleary eyes and shaky fingers were certain signs of frequent drinking. His home is at 213 William street, Montreal.

"Mr. Brown hired me last night at nine o'clock to work as a labourer at Parry Sound for 45 cents an hour. He gave me three flasks of whiskey. I drank one of them on the train."

Carroll said he didn't know what the grips contained and denied that Brown had promised to pay any fines if they were caught. He was drunk this morning, and said he was not responsible for anything he might have said. He couldn't recall having made the statement.

"We drove in a cab from Brown's house to the Windsor station. The grips were put in the cab at Brown's house."

A Flat Denial.

With a show of candour and frankness that seemed a trifle overplayed, Joseph Brown said he had met "Jimmy" Carroll in Montreal yesterday, and with the boys, "was drinking a little." "I didn't hire him. I told him he could get a job at the Nobel plant for 45c. an hour. I loaned him $27 and he said he was going to make a little money. I don't know what he bought, but it as these cans whatever they hold. The stuff in the cans was his'n. I put the revolver in my sister's grip, which she carried. We had four grips altogether, my sister's, Jimmy's and the other two. I own the revolver, I had it at home for five years and brought it with me for deer hunting."

Brown said he left Parry Sound last Monday morning. His sister wasn't well and she accompanied him for a visit. In his possession were found liquor shipping tags and travellers' cards for a Montreal liquor house. He said that Carrol had given them to him last night.

Crown Attorney Hatton became particularly interested in the revolver.

"Carroll never saw it nor handled it," said Brown. "I put it in my sister's grip."

P. C. Boyd swore that he found the revolver in one of the whiskey grips.

"It is strange that it got from your sister's grip into one you say you never opened and that belonged to Carroll, who never saw the revolver," said Mr. Hatton.

Pleads Guilty.

While P. C. Lawrence was corroborating P. C. Boyd's testimony, Brown called Detective Newhall to the prisoners' box and told him he wished to plead guilty.

"I'll say I'm guilty," he admitted "over that revolver."

At that he was still hedging.

"Either plead guilty or not," Chief Thompson demanded.

Brown admitted his guilt.

"You've been deliberately swearing away another man's freedom," Magistrate Dumble said.

"I wouldn't want to do that. He's a neighbour of mine," Brown replied.

"But you've been doing it," remarked Chief Thompson.

"You've been perjuring yourself all the time," Mr. Dumble concluded. "Carroll is a poor man, and here is $72 worth of alcohol and two suit cases that must have cost ten dollars. I'm sorry to find a man so degraded as to say such things. Your intention was to violate the law in the back country, and sell this vile stuff."

Fined $200.

"I could fine you $1,000," said the Magistrate.

Mr. Hatton—"There is no use in fining him more than he can pay."

His Worship imposed a fine of $200 and $10.10 costs.

Pistol Confiscated.

For secretly having an offensive weapon in his possession Brown was fined a nominal sum, amounting to $9.10 and the revolver was confiscated. He had $197 and said he could raise the remainder of the necessary $220 by pawning his watch.

Carroll Goes Free.

When arrested Carroll had two bottles of whiskey in his pockets. He was arraigned on a charge of carrying liquor unlawfully, and pleaded guilty.

"Where's the $27 you got?" he was asked.

"Thirty-seven dollars?" he questioned. "I've only 31 cents."

"He didn't lend me no $27," Carroll stated when he was reminded of Brown's bit of fiction.

Chief Thompson felt Carroll's hand for signs of toil, but evidently found them soft, and without a callous.

"He doesn't work," the Chief declared.

Finally Carroll was liberated on suspended sentence, and said he had his ticket for Parry Sound, where he would go to work.

"He told a truthful story," the Magistrate commented.

"We've got to take that into consideration for an Irishman," laughed the Chief.

Woman is Held.

Mrs. Brown said she had forgotten her registration card.

"I registered at Allwyn's store on St. Catherine street," she asserted, and told His Worship that her doctor had advised her to go to the country. Hence she decided to accompany her brother to Parry Sound. She said that her husband was in the United States. They had been separated for some years.

Mrs. Brown was remanded for a week to enable the police to investigate the truth of her recital. She produced the key to her house, and the Chief remarked that it would be easy to send for her registration card.

CLASSICAL MUSIC AT THE CHAUTAUQUA

Two Dollar Ticket Covers Al Performances

A rare treat is in store for those who are fortunate enough to be able to get tickets and attend The Dominion "Win The War" Chautauqua which will be held in Central Park under canvas, August 10th to 22nd.

There will be entertainment of the very highest order. The Welsh Glee Quartette, for instance, who will take part both afternoon and evening of the first day, need little comment, as the Welsh people are noted the world over for their ability along this line. They will render not only classical music of the first-grade, but also a programme of the most popular rollicking songs of the day.

Character Parts.

Each of the four gentlemen in the quartette is an artist in his line, and they will take individual character parts such as English Street Singers, London Costermongers, costumed with pearl buttons, braids and other paraphernalia characteristic of the London Costermonger. Irish Wit and Scotch Humour, interamingled with all that is jolly in England, and their natural Welsh Humour will be displayed in a manner never before seen outside of the largest play houses in the big cities.

It will indeed be a treat for those of the different nationalities to see the peculiar characteristics of their own people depicted by costumed men who have made a life study of their particular part.

A $2.00 ticket admits you to the three daily performances for the entire week, and it would be advisable to secure your ticket early, as otherwise when six hundred are sold the price will raise.

Be one of the "Noble Six Hundred."

DE LAVAL ARE THIRD BEAT ORIENTALS 15 to 1

Sharpe Fanned Seventeen Men and De Laval Had Easiest Kind of Victory Over Art Johnston's Crew—Latter Were Weak Both in Field and at Bat.

De Laval moved up into third place in the City Twilight League race last night when they beat the Orientals in hollow fashion by fifteen runs to one. The De Laval gang are not far behind the Thistles, who are in second place, and a victory for the Separators over Louis Yeotes' crew next Tuesday night would considerably close the gap. De Laval have won three out of their last four starts, and are a hard proposition for any man's ball team right now.

It was a very enjoyable session for Pitcher Sharpe of the De Laval team.

Sharpe, the De Laval's clever twirler, made monkeys out of the Orientals last night. He had everything, plenty of smoke and a sharp-breaking curve, and had no fewer than seventeen strike-outs to his credit, which is a league record. Only four scratchy infield hits were made off his delivery and most of the Orientals would have been just as effective up at the plate without a bat at all.

De Laval won as they pleased. They hung up twelve hits, and the losers helped them out with a gorgeous bunch of errors, which helped to pile up the score. An error on a play that should have retired the side in the third, was followed by eight runs for De Laval, but at that De Laval batted enough runs in to earn a clean cut victory without the help of the Orientals' misplays.

Although they contributed a flock of errors, the Orientals turned in some sparkling fielding plays. Webb in centre field, had two beautiful running catches in succession, Collins, the little third baseman, came through with a circus catch of a foul fly, and Foley made a fine one-handed stop of a hard hit grounder from Sharpe's bat.

Collins' circus catch of Dugan's foul fly in the seventh was a feature.

De Laval scored two in the second. With one down, Frost was passed. Lipsett fanned, but Nellist singled to left. Fitzgerald's double to right scored Frost and sent Nellist to third. Legon singled through short to score Nellist. Fitzgerald was out at the plate, Long to Thorndyke to Bergoine, in trying to score on the play.

The third was a big session for the winners. With one down, Sharpe was safe when Thirnbeck lost Foley's throw after a great stop by the short stop. Taylor fanned, McDonald hit to Thorndyke, who fumbled, and Sharpe scored. McDonald stole second, and went to third on Frost's single through first. Frost stole second, Lipsett was safe on Collins' fumble, Macdonald scoring. On a delayed double steal, Frost scored and Lipsett went to third, Bergoine being hurt in the play at the plate. Nellist singled to right, scoring Lipsett. Fitzgerald singled through short. Legon was passed. Dugan hit to Foley, who threw wild to second, Nellist and Fitzgerald scoring. Sharp singled to right, scoring Legon and Dugan. Taylor hoisted to Thorndyke for the third out.

Second Baseman Thorndyke was a target for many drives, a number of which went through like this.

De Laval added two in the fifth. Nellist was safe on Thorndyke's fumble. Fitzgerald hit to the same player, who missed again, Nellist going to third. Legon hit to Collins, who threw Nellist out at the plate. Dugan's tap to Collins forced Fitzgerald at third. Sharpe's single past Thorndyke scored Legon. Taylor hit to Collins and Dugan scored. Macdonald was the third out on a roller to Thirnbeck.

Orientals got their only run in the sixth. With one out, Foley beat out a roller to third and went to second on Nellist's high throw. Foley stole third and scored on Johnston's infield out. Bergoine walked and stole second, but Thirnbeck fanned.

With Barraclough, a new box artist, performing for the Orientals in the seventh, De Laval bagged three more runs. With one down, Sharpe walked and Taylor was safe on Collins' fumble. Macdonald's single scored Sharpe, and after Frost had lifted to Thirnbeck, singles by Lipsett and Nellist scored Taylor and Macdonald.

Lajoie Wants $3,000 For Rest of Season ---McGraw Astounded

Larry Lajoie, the famous veteran slugger, who managed the Indianapolis Club of the now dormant American association, evidently has no great desire to grab off a major league berth for the remainder of the season or perhaps for the duration of the war. The big Frenchman, who was offered a chance to play first base for the Giants, caused John McGraw to abandon negotiations for his services by setting a prohibitive price on them. Lajoie, it is reported, asked $3,000 from the Giants for the remainder of the present campaign, and in view of the fact that September 1 probably will mark the end of the pennant race, McGraw was amazed at the great slugger's terms and refused to consider them.

Lajoie, it will be remembered, spurned an offer of $4,500 from the Brooklyn club this spring, though he received much less than that amount for piloting the Toronto club of the International League to a pennant last season. However, his refusal of the Brooklyn club's offer was due to the fact that the Indianapolis club wished to sign him as manager for a salary said to have been $7,500.

The big Frenchman's failure to set a reasonable price on his services for the remainder of this year, particularly when he had an opportunity to play with a club that stands an excellent chance of breaking into the world's series, is hard to understand. There was a time when Lajoie, as manager of the Cleveland club, drew a salary of $10,000 a year, which made him one of the most highly paid men in the game. However, he is not now the Lajoie of old, and these are hard times, all of which he should take into consideration when naming his terms. It probably is a difficult matter for him to adjust himself to circumstances.

Though McGraw entertains no delusions concerning Lajoie's present form, he is somewhat disappointed at his failure to get the big fellow. Larry is a bit slow on his pins and probably cannot cover a great amount of territory around first base, but his batting eye is still keen and he makes a dangerous man at the plate in a pinch. He would have constituted a welcome addition to the Giant batting order.

PITCHER MILES MAIN IS JUST LIKE WADDELL

He Loses Himself and Does Other Funny Things That Rube Got Away With—Ray Demmitt's Come-Back has Been a Big Help to St. Louis Browns

The latest news concerning Pitcher Miles Main, who recently jumped the Phillies for about the 'steenth time, is that h eis fith Lebanaon team in the Steel League, and Pilot Pat Moran of the Phils has looked on the eccentric one's latest step in the light of good riddance.

Main recalls the days of Rube Waddell, when the big southpaw simply would drop out of sight for a week or so, returning to Connie Mack that he had gone o na fishing trip or decided to tend bar at such and such a place for a few nights.

Three times this year aMin jumped the Phillies. Each time he lugged back the same excuse—the hired man on his farm had quit and he had to go home to straighten out the tangle. Robert Maxfell, sporting editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, figures that hired man quit no less than 462 times during Main's baseball career.

Main started jumping the Phillies last spring down in Florida. He left the hotel for the ball orchard, passed the railroad station en route, and decided to climb on the train. Two weeks later he reported. Bradley Hogg, once upon a time an angel, asked him the reason for his absence.

"I'll tell you how it is," explained Main. "That hired man of mine quit his job and I had to go back and talk with him. He's a good man and the farm couldn't get along without him. I knew that Moran would not let me go and feared we might have an argument. You know, I am a pretty bad guy when I argue and I might take a puch at Moran. I didn't want to do that, so I just left. That's all there is to it. I can't control my temper."

If Main ever were taken over to France by Uncle Sam and that hired man quit, Main would be in an awful fix, wouldn't he?

Ray Demmitt has pulled a real comeback with the St. Louis Browns this year and his willingness to work has been a source of pleasure to the management. When the Browns were shy on pitchers he offered to try his hand at it if needed. It wouldn't have been his first effort in the box and he's quite proud of a game he once pitched for the White Sox.

It was on the training trip and the White Sox squad paused at Las Vegas for a clash with the home club there.

The Sox, having already played a large string of battles, were shy of effective twirlers. They had only a scant few to begin with, and these had been used up in the hard affairs with the Los Angeles and Venice clubs.

"I'll pitch this game today," said Demmitt. "I'm not much of a pitcher, but I think I can get the ball near the plate if you fellows are willing to shag it a little."

His offer was thankfully accepted and he had the Las Vegas batters all but stopped. They had an idea he was a young phenom, and kept one foot free while they hit. Few balls were hit as far as the outfield, and Las Vegas still remembers Demmitt as a great pitcher.

Chick Hartley, an old-time ball player, who is now a cop in Philadelphia, knows of a game in which four runs were scored on four pitched balls. He played in the contest, which took place in the New York State league in 1913, between Troy and Syracuse. Owens pitched for Syracuse. Cranston hit the first ball Owens pitched for a home run. Mowe, the second batter, smote the first ball delivered to him for a single. Lumley did the same thing on the first pitch to him. Hartley himself came to the bat next and swatted the first ball for a homer, making a total of four runs. Burchell then relieved Owens, and Troy won the game, 5 to 4, in 13 innings. Hartley says this is a record.

SPORTING COMMENT

Both the Chicago National and Boston American League clubs are in favor of closing the major league pennant races at once.

During a recent game at Washington Clarke Griffith tossed out five hundred baseball bats, for which five thousand soldiers clamoured. Is baseball popular?

General Crowder seems to be more effective against the Athletics than Walter Johnson or Ty Cobb. War has shot Connie Mack's team to pieces again.

British soccer clubs are preparing to carry on as usual this fall. The various league races will open early in September.

War does not appear to have affected interest in the Grand Circuit harness races. Great crowds have attended the various meetings on the American side.

Ty Cobb says he has already found a job, into which he will step after September 1st. He intends going back to his farm in Georgia.

John McGraw has signed Bill Clymer as assistant manager of the Giants, which causes a New York writer to suggest that they enlarge the Polo Grounds bench.

In 1910 baseball writers were mourning the fact that Napoleon Lajoie was all in. In 1918 the champion Giants are hot after the same old Poleon.

Binhamton writers say the Toronto Leafs may overtake the Bingoes if John Farell extends his season until December 15th.

Hans Lobert, veteran third baseman of the Reds, Phillies and Giants, is playing for the Hog Island team in the Delaware League.

Jack Curley dropped $20,00 on the Fulton-Dempsey fight, but says he isn't kicking because it convinced him the people wanted boxing. Funny, isn't it? These promoters always lose.

Heavyweight Jack Dempsey is some finisher. He has put his rivals to sleep in the following short order: Homer Smith, 1 round; Jim Flynn, 1 round; Bob Devere, 1 round; Porky Flynn, 1 round; Al. Norton, 1 round; [illegible] Morris, 1 round; Fred Fulton, 23 seconds.

Fined $2 for Allowing Stock to Roam Streets

Mr. N. T. Laplante's cow broke its tether and wandered on to the highway in the most approved village manner, that cost its owner $2 in police court. Mr. R. J. Wolstenholm's horse committed a similar offence, which netted the city another $2.

A contribution of $5.10 was from a boy for riding on the sidewalk, and the other fines were for breaches of the rules of the road.

A. D. Anderson, merchant at Keene, said he had driven his car in Toronto, Port Hope, Cobourg and other cities and was never used so badly as when P. C. Lawrence caught him cutting the corner. PENSION SCHEME OF BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

Hiring and Firing" is a Problem be to Avoided—Objects of Plan Run By Employees.

This plan is administered by a committee which represents the employees rather than the Company, and it meets weekly on Monday afternoons. It is an exceedingly busy Committee and it endeavours to bring to its work not only the spirit of fairness but also of sympathy. Not individual sympathy which might lead to better treatment of one employee than another, but the Committee endeavours to administer the Plan without fear or favour in the best interests of the employees, while keeping within the limits of the authorization given by the Board and the Shareholders.

Income Scheme.

The real income is provided by a percentage of the pay-roll, limited to 2 per cent, and the Company, within that limit, will vote an amount at the end of each year which is necessary to restore the Fund to its original figure of $400,000.00. This provides a flexible scheme under which the income will grow as the payroll and number of employees increase.

Company's Liability.

All the expense of administering the Plan—salaries, stationery, office room, etc. are borne by the Company.

Two Per Cent. of Salaries.

The Company has voluntarily inaugurated the Plan of pensions and benefits, which is a clear indication of its purpose and intentions. The practical consideration is whether 2 per cent. of the pay roll will be sufficient to meet all the pensions and allowances contemplated. It is expected that it will. If it should not, then the amount, which is not cumulative, must be spread as far as it will go. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company provide in their plan for this contingency by establishing an order of application, and their available funds are to be applied.

An Expensive Item.

The "hiring and firing" problem is particularly expensive in a business like ours, where so much special training, both of speech and action, is necessary.

One firm in Montreal has confessed that with a normal average staff of 2,000, some 5,000 employees have been hired during the last two years.

Object of the Plan.

Public service, such as we are engaged in, requires a capable, loyal and happy personnel to produce.

The Plan is intended to aid in securing and holding such a staff. Loyal and effective service is long service, and the job we enjoy doing is done well.

If the Plan eliminates serious worry over the future, through securing that future in a measure at least, the Company feels that it will have performed a valuable service, both to itself and the individual.

GRAIN MARKET

Corn market continues to be a weather proposition, and subject to every variation in the temperatures or rumours thereof. Early reports today of more favourable weather conditions, with rain falling in several sections of the corn zone induced a rather precipitable selling movement, followed by a sudden drop in prices. A rush to cover again sent up prices, the market finally closing slightly irregular, with only fractional changes from Tuesday's close. Oats closed stronger and cash 7-8c. higher.

Milk Production Falls Off During the Hot Weather

Reports on Farm Conditions—Farmers are Now Into the Barley Harvest Peas are a Fair Crop—Potatoes Have Suffered in Some Localities.

HOG FEED IS SCARCE AND DEAR

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Some of this season's cut of fall wheat has been offered on the market in Essex, and most of it is of good quality. Much of the fall wheat however will be kept for seed, as with the harvest earlier than usual there is likely to be more time given farmers for preparing the land and getting in a larger acreage of this crop than was put in a year ago.

Many are now nicely into the barley harvest, which is yielding generously, and spring wheat and oats are hurrying so rapidly toward the ripening stage that there is danger of crowning at the cutting time. All spring grains are likely to give good yields although rather short in the straw.

Peas are a surprisingly good crop. Yields of forty bushels per acre are reported from Prince Edward, where the crop is being raised for the canneries.

Beans are also a most promising crop, but just now are badly needing rain.

CLOVER CROP.

Second growth of clover is looking well despite the drouth, although good rains would be most welcome. The Norfolk Representative reports 20 acres of alsike as yielding one hundred bushels of seed.

Potatoes have suffered in some localities from the late blight and other diseases, but on the whole the crop has done fairly.

Roots have been checked in their growth by the drouth, but generally speaking they have done well, especially sugar beets.

Corn has picked up wonderfully of late, and looks very promising.

Essex reports that tobacco plants, like beans, are suffering from lack of rain.

Tomatoes are being marketed in large quantities.

Hot weather and flies have been very trying to the live stock. Pastures have turned very dry, and the farmers who have a midsummer supply of ensilage are being envied. The milk production has fallen off about 25 per cent. during the last two or three weeks, owing to the failing grass. Good milch cows are bringing from $125 to $150.

Hogs are selling at from $18.25 to $19 a cwt. Little pigs a few weeks old are worth $9 apiece. Hog feed is scarce and dear.

A noticeable movement toward co-operative buying and selling is referred to by the Wentworth Representative.

Farmers so far have got along with less help than was expected, owing largely to the unusually open weather —but the rapid ripening of spring grains may cause a field rush before harvesting is through.

What Prussia Has Accomplished.

(Westminster Gazette.)

Germany has lost in potential lives the equivalent of 4.5 per cent. of its pre-war population, Austria 5 per cent. and Hungary 7 per cent. The present war, by the fall of births it has occasioned, cost the belligerent countries of Europe not less than 12½ millions of potential lives. While the war has filled the graves, it has emptied the cradles. At the present time, every day that the war continues means the loss of 7,000 potential lives to the United Kingdom, France, Italy and the Central Empires. Race suicide amog European peoples on the most colossal scale has been the outstanding result of German militarism.

PERSONAL RATION OF 1 1-2 POUNDS SUGAR A MONTH SUGGESTED

Canada Food Board Urges Utmost Conservation.

USE MORE YELLOW SUGAR

Regulations Governing Hoarders Will Be Strictly Enforced.

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—Reduction of household consumption of sugar in Canada to a ration of one and one-half pounds per person per month, for personal use, is requested by the Canada Food Board in a statement just issued. The utmost possible conservation is urged in addition to the restrictions now in force upon all manufacturers who use sugar. Householders are also asked to use yellow sugar instead of the granulated product wherever possible because in order to get the most efficient economic results from the refining of sugar, it is necessary that about thirty per cent. of yellow sugar should be produced by the refineries.

Result of Conference.

The Food Board's appeal is made as a result of a conference of the International Sugar Commission and a full review of the raw sugar, the balance of crop on hand and the Allies' requirements. This survey showed the necessity for strict conservation of sugar on this continent until the new crop becomes available at the beginning of next year.

The Food Board states that all the regulations governing the use of holdings of sugar will be strictly enforced. Any hoarding by private persons or by private manufacturers will be met by drastic fines or cancellation of licenses, or both. No manufacturer is allowed, under the Food Board's regulations, to make icing sugar. The statement adds:

Confidence in People.

The Canada Food Board is satisfied that as the result of conservation efforts in this country very great saving in foodstuffs has already been effected. The board is confident that under present circumstances the people of this country, including private householders, as well as all institutions, establishments and trades, will meet the sugar situation wholeheartedly by complying with the regulations of the Food Board. For infraction of the sugar regulations the minimum fine is $100, with a maximum of $1,000, or three months' imprisonment, or both fine and imprisonment.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A MUSICAL EVENING

A MUSICAL EVENING.
CHAPTER CXXXIX.

Merton Gray came early, his violin tucked under his arm. Mr. and Mrs. Babcock greeted him graciously, and George warmly. For the first time since Merton told me of his love, I did not feel embarrassed. I had thought it all out. I had done nothing wrong — nothing underhanded—so that I might be with him, and more than that, I had not encouraged him. I was fond of him; he was my very good friend. I should treat him as such, and put behind me forever the fact that he had wanted to be more. I felt flattered that he had cared, but even so, I knew that he was not by any means heartbroken, and that he would probably marry sometime—that he had mistaken pity for me for love. I must show him that now I did not need his pity—that I was happy instead of miserable.

We had a delightful evening. Mr. Babcock had not brought his violin so he played several selections on Merton's, which he declared superior to his. Merton beamed. His Strad. was the pride of his life, he laughingly told them. Then we sang, and were all surprised when the grandfather's clock in the hall struck eleven.

James brought in a very light supper, over which we became quite jolly. Mrs. Babcock declared that she could not eat another bite—then ate heartily!

"Your wife is a little wizard," she said to George. "She has found out in some occult way what my tastes are and she tempts me."

HELEN IS COMPLIMENTED.

"I am delighted that she has succeeded in doing so," he returned pleasantly, just glancing at me. But I read approval in that glance, and Mr. Babcock read something more, for he said—

"I don't wonder you look at her in that proud way, Howard. Not many young wives have her knack of entertaining—especially of entertaining old folks like us."

"You people forget I am a lonely old bachelor!" Merton said in pretended depression. "I really feel quite out of the picture."

"I imagine that it is your own fault Mr. Gray," Mrs. Badcock returned in her soft musical voice. "And you will pardon me because I am older than you are if I tell you that you are missing much that makes life worth living. Of course you are fortunate in having your art, and your music; but neither can quite take the place of a wife—a woman who loves you."

"Mrs. Babcock is right, Gray," to my surprise, George broke in; "there is nothing like a home for a man. And of course no one can have a real home without a woman in it."

I flushed happily. Did George realize and truly appreciate his home more than I thought? Was it true that he cared because I was in it?

"Get married, my boy! It's the only thing for a young fellow to do," said Mr. Babcock.

"But I'm not young!" Merton returned, making a comical grimace.

"You are not old, about thirty, I take it?" Then, when Merton nodded, he continued, "But too old to wait any longer. Why waste the years that might be made so full of joy?" the glance that he gave Mrs. Babcock seemed to enfold her, so loving was it, so full of trust and faith.

A COMPARISON.

"But I know some married people ——" Merton raised his hands in mock horror, "single blessedness is indeed blessed, compared to the life of bickering and quarreling they lead."

"Such people are not in the majority, dear Mr. Gray," again it was Mrs. Babcock's soft voice. "We hear of them, that is all. The really happy couples seldom talk of their happiness. It is too deep, too sacred to discuss. But the other kind, those who are unhappy—mis-mated—take the world into their confidence so loudly that, seemingly, it multiplies them, and they appear more numerous than they really are. Is it not so, dear?" she asked her husband.

"Indeed it is! And it is a truth which people do not often recognize. Happiness needs no brass band to announce itself. It is so deeply enmeshed in the mind and soul that it does not think to cry aloud, as does the unhappiness of people (most of which is surface unhappiness, anyway, which could be easily remedied by a little forebearance on both sides). Marriage is a give and take game with everyone. Young people are too apt to want it one sided."

Again I flushed. I had taken so much as my due, without giving it proper consideration, when I had found fault with other things! My lovely home, my easy, comfortable existence, my care-free days, had seemed as nothing because I could not have ALL ELSE that I wanted. Merton left saying he never had enjoyed himself more, and with an invitation to visit the Babcock's if ever he was in Chicago.

"Gray made a hit with the guests," George said, when they had gone. "I am glad that we had him in. He's a fascinating fellow, and remarkably entertaining.

"Yes, I am glad we had him, too," I responded.

To-morrow—Results.

Thought She Would Lose Her Little Girl With Diarrhoea

Thousands of infants die annually who could be saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

There can be no doubt about it.

During the seventy-two years that this wonderful remedy has been on the market, it has been proved conclusively that it is the best for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera infantum, and all looseness of the bowels, especially when the children are teething.

Many of the imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" being offered to the public to-day are positively dangerous, as they often check the diarrhoea too suddenly, cause inflammation and leave the bowels in a constipated condition. "Dr. Fowler's" will not do this, but will impart a healthy tone to the mucous surface, and stop the diarrhoea in an easy and natural way.

Mrs. M. Tyler, Orland, Ont., writes: "I have used your wonderful medicine for nine years with great satisfaction. My little girl was only five months old, and she was so sick with diarrhoea I thought she would die. I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it gave her quick relief. I have used it ever since for the whole of my family, six in all, and can praise it more than anything I ever used."

The genuine is put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price, 35c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

JUSTICE AND DUTY.

By ALICE CHEEVER.

Copyright, by American Press Association.)

An old woman sat in the anteroom of Judge Baxter's private office waiting to be admitted to his presence. Finally the door opened, and she was told to go in.

"You see, judge, I'm here again."

"Yes, you are here again."

"I have just come back from visiting my boy. He told me to thank you for your kindness to me."

"I suppose he will be kind to you himself when he gets out. He gave you a terrible blow when he permitted himself to fall into bad company and got into the penitentiary."

"They fooled the poor boy, judge; indeed they did. When they put him on watch before they robbed the house they told him they were only going for a watermelon."

The judge made no comment on this statement.

"He's earning time," continued the woman, "by good behavior. If he keeps it up—and he will—he'll have a year and a half off his term. But even that'll leave him three years and a half yet to serve. It's as hard on me as it is on him. I have trouble to pay my rent and keep body and soul together now my health has broken down. If he were free he could work for me. I wish the officers of the law could find some way of stopping crime without visiting the punishment on the women and children, and my boy, too, the victim of foul play."

"I wish so, too," replied the judge, with something akin to a sigh.

"Have you got a son, judge?"

"I have, and about your boy's age."

"Do you remember how it was when he was born—helpless little thing!—how your heart warmed to him, and how when he began to walk and to talk you watched every movement, caught every word, and how as he grew older you were delighted with his smart sayings, just as if no other child said such things; how you watched him grow up to be"—

"Yes, yes, I understand what you mean and sympathize with you with all my heart. I would have liked to save your boy, but the evidence was against him, and the jury convicted him. It was my duty to sentence him. Come in here, say, a month from today, and I'll give you another chance to see him, or, rather, I'll confer with the warden and let you know the date. You must go now. I have to be in court soon and have a lot to do before the opening."

"Thank you, judge; here is $1.55 left over that I didn't use from the money you gave me for my trip."

But the judge waved her away, the door closed behind her, and she went to her desolate home weighed down with the remembrance of those long months that must elapse before the law would cease to punish her through her boy. And yet the least of that punishment was that, deprived of the support of her own son, a strong man of twenty-two, she must earn her own living. It was the pain that her "laddie" was a convict in stripes with shaved head that hurt her most.

A month dragged by. Her rent was coming due, and there was no money with which to pay it. One morning the old woman received a note asking her to call at the judge's office at 12 o'clock noon. She went there and was given a seat in the anteroom. There she waited for half an hour. Then an attendant opened the door to the judge's private room and told her to go in. The judge was turning over the sheets of a legal document and did not indicate that he was aware of her presence. She sat down demurely and waited. Presently the judge turned the last sheet and looked up at her.

"I'm here again, judge," she said.

"Yes," said the judge, taking out his watch. "You're here again, but this time at my call. Twelve o'clock, I wrote you, I believe, and it is now nearly 1. I'm sorry to have kept you waiting, but there's been a delay. Let me see. I told you"—he hesitated—"when you left me the last time that"—he paused again.

"You would send me word when the warden considered it best for me to see my boy again."

"The warden? Did I say the warden? I should have said—but never mind."

The judge seemed confused. He put his spectacles on his desk and when he tried to find them again failed to do so. He took up papers only to throw them down again. Then he went to the door that led to his anteroom, opened it and said something in a low voice to an attendant. Going back to his desk, he took out his watch again and said incoherent nothings to the old woman. Then suddenly a door leading to a corridor opened and a young man entered. The old woman looked at him dazed and cried feebly:

"Jimmy?"

The youngster went to her and took her in his arms.

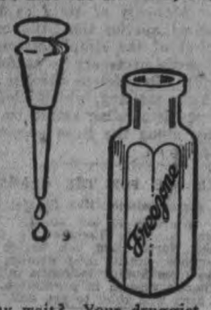
"I expected your Jimmy to be here a few minutes before 12," said the judge, who meanwhile had found his glasses and equanimity as well, "but the train was late, and he has been delayed. I've been working on his case ever since he went up and a few days ago succeeded in getting the promise of a pardon for him from the governor. It was sent up yesterday."

When mother and son left the judge's office they had means to last them a month. But before the expiration of that term Jimmy was hard at work. And he never got fooled again.

LIFT OFF CORNS
FREEZONE IS MAGIC

Costs few cents! Sore, touchy corns lift right off with fingers. No pain!

Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. It doesn't hurt one bit. Yes, magic!



Why wait? Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of Freezone for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freezone is the much talked of ether discovery of a Cincinnati genius.

Blame the Nerves

When you cannot sleep and are easily irritated and worried you have reason to suspect that the nerves are below normal.

They are not getting proper nourishment from the food you eat and need a little special help. A few weeks' treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for anyone in this condition. Note your increase in weight while using this food cure.

STRUCK FROM THE ROLLS.

What Happens to an English Lawyer When He Goes Wrong.

When a solicitor passes his examinations his name is entered on the "rolls" of the legal profession. Should he ever become guilty of professional misconduct his name is "struck off the rolls."

It is a grave matter. Any person having a complaint against a solicitor in reference to his professional conduct is supposed to forward it to the Incorporated Law society, the body which rules the legal profession. His private life doesn't trouble the society unless he is convicted of a criminal offense.

Having received the complaint and evidence in support of it, the society brings the matter before a divisional court composed of two or three of the most distinguished judges on the bench. The solicitor is given every chance of defending himself, but if, after hearing the evidence, the judges decide that he is guilty his name is "struck from the rolls." Should the offense be a minor one, caused more by misunderstanding than fraud, the solicitor may be suspended for a period and allowed to practice again at the expiration of it.

A solicitor cannot be "struck off the rolls" for negligence or bankruptcy. A client's remedy in the first case is to bring an action against him for damages. Bankruptcy is adjudged to be a misfortune and therefore is not "professional misconduct." — London Tit-Bits.

Where His Love Lay.

He was sitting in front of a brightly burning fire talking to her. After a while he said thoughtfully:

"This reminds me of a grate that I used to sit in front of years ago."

"I can well imagine how you enjoyed those evenings," she responded hopefully, "open fires give one such a sense of home." But he went on talking of drafts and heat and ashes and the hygienic condition of a room ventilated by a fireplace.

"I have never known a grate," he continued, "like the one in the home of the girl where I used to go so often."

A long silence followed, the crackling of the fire the only sound in the room. It was broken at last by him in a voice that had echoes of a dear memory in its tones, "You cannot imagine how I loved that—grate!"—New York Post.

Abelard and Heloise.

Heloise was noted as much for her intellectual ability as for her personal beauty. She was familiar with the literature of four or five languages—Italian, French, Greek, Latin and Hebrew. Her knowledge was remarkable; her conversational powers were brilliant. It was her bright mind and varied learning that first attracted the attention of Abelard. Abelard died in 1142. Heloise in 1164. First buried at St Marcel, Abelard's remains were shifted several times, but finally reached the well known tomb at Pere la Chaise wherein also rest the ashes of Heloise.

Getting In Deeper.

"Who is that singing so dreadfully out of tune?"

"It is my wife."

"Perhaps the accompanist plays out of tune."

"She is accompanying herself."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Hadn't Been Taught.

Little Grace, who had recently entered school, brought home some pumpkin seed one day and told her mother that the teacher said that although the seed was white the pumpkin would be yellow.

"And what will the color of the vines be?" her mother asked.

Grace replied that the teacher had not taught her that yet.

"I know, dear, but we have pumpkin vines in our garden, and you must know what color they are."

"Oh, of course I do, mother, but we ain't supposed to know anything until we're taught," replied Grace convincingly.

Munitions Workers

When you are tired and think to yourself, I will "ease up" a bit, before "easing up," remember:

There is a chap "over there" who is so tired and weary that it would come as a relief to him to be wounded or fall sick. Yet he has been sticking it out night and day, Sundays and holidays, for nearly four years, in one grim welter of slaughter.

He gets "fed up" with the whole show, but just as often as he gets "fed up" he pulls himself together, grits his teeth and goes on.

To such as he the timely arrival of the shell you are working on may mean the difference between life and death.

He dare not ease up when he feels like it. He must stick it out and see it through.

When you get "fed up" just give a thought to these men, and we know that you will pull yourself together, grit your teeth and go on as they do.

ENGLISH ROADS CUT TRAINS.

ALL CLASSES TO BE MERGED — PLEASURE TRAVEL IS RESTRICTED.

Passengers arriving at an Atlantic port from England say that because of inability of the railroad companies to build new rolling stock, the first-class carriages might be abolished soon and converted into one-class cars in which all classes will travel. Officers are not allowed to ride in the same compartments with enlisted men, and special carriages will be reserved for them on each train, and also for women travelling alone. There will be no other reservations.

The railway companies under orders from the Government, have begun "rationing" travel by train during the holiday season. The first experiment was made at Bolton, near Manchester, a busy manufacturing town, where the workers earn good money, which they like to spend at the nearby watering place, Blackpool.

When the mill workers go to buy their tickets at full rates, as excursion rates were abolished three years ago, the railway officials informed them that only 3500 could go to Blackpool and the same number to Morecameo, also on the seashore. The travel to other resorts was curtailed also. In London the crowds rushed to Maidenhead, on the Thames and the numbers have been so great that the regular commuters who held contract tickets could not get standing room on the trains. These trips and those to Brighton, known as the "city man's Saturday to Monday," will also be cut down, the passengers said. All the dining cars have been taken off and the familiar lunch basket and pork pies, saveloys, bath buns, and Banbury cakes at the stations have gone also.

MUST BRING BED LINEN AND TOWELS.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Hotel proprietors of Leivzig addressed the following invitation to visitors at the annual fair: "Because of the requistioning of hotel linen by the government and because of the general dearth of these articles, the undersigned kindly request their honorable visitors if they would be kind enough to bring with them when visiting the Leivzig fair the necessary bed sheets and other linen and towels which they will need."

Despatches from Berlin also indicate the beginning of the first meatless weeks in the capital on August 19. In lieu of the meat ration the government is putting at the disposition of the population a quantity of potatoes, not exceeding seven pounds a head.

PLEAD FOR GERMAN BABIES.

BERLIN CITIZENS DEMAND BETTER CARE FOR ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN.

If the decline in the birth rate in Germany, which is worrying German statesmen and militarists, who are already making calculations based on the "next war," is to be checked permanently, and a plentiful supply of soldiers for possible future Kaisers is to be assured, the state must pay more attention to the wants of children born out of wedlock and see that they and their mothers are well cared for, according to the sentiments expressed at a meeting in their behalf held in Berlin on June 24th.

The Vossische Zeitung reports that Dr. Max Quarck, a Socialist member of the Reichstag, laid special stress upon the necessity of state as well as municipal aid for the little ones, and a need of the simplification of the legal steps necessary to establish their rights. Dr. Helene Stocker also addressed the meeting, which adopted a resolution demanding action by the authorities along the lines suggested by the speakers.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS.

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

British Launched an Offensive This Morning

The New Attack Is Developing On a Very Wide Front

French and British Troops Opened Drive East of Amiens Early This Morning

Attack Was Launched on a Wide Front and May Result in Creation of a New Salient in Open Country.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 8.—French and British troops opened a drive in the Picardy region south-east of Amiens at five o'clock this morning, the French War Office announced. The attack is developing.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 8.— (Official.) — British troops launched an offensive east and south-east of Amiens this morning, says a statement from Field Marshal Haig to-day. Early reports indicate that the attack is progressing satisfactorily. The attack is under command of Field Marshal Haig, and is on a wide front, the statement adds. The troops engaged is the British Fourth Army and the French First Army, which advanced at dawn.

WOULD MENACE LINES.

An attack south-east of Amiens probably is aimed at weakening, if not to wipe out, the German position in and around Montdidier, where the battle line swings to the north. The British troops hold the sector south of the Somme, which joins up with the French lines south of Villers Bretonneux. Late last week the Germans withdrew to the east of the Avre in the region west and north-west of Montdidier. Since then the French have been gaining ground on the same front. A line from the Somme to the Avre and thence south along the river faces fairly open country, and the region of Picardy, in front of it, is part of the region devastated by the Germans in their retreat from the Somme in March, 1917. A break through in the Montdidier region would have a menacing effect on the German lines from Rheims to Ypres.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The British attacked on a 12-mile front on both sides of the Somme. They gained all their objectives within four hours and have captured a considerable number of prisoners and guns. British and French in the Picardy sector have advanced at some points to a depth of more than three miles.

Franco-British tanks have crossed the Avre-Luce Valley in a new drive begun to-day.

PLACES CAPTURED.

In their offensive on the front east of Amiens to-day the British have taken Hahner Wood, Dodo Wood and probably have possession of the towns of Marcelcave and Lamotteen Santerre.

An advance by the British to Marcelcave and Lamotteen Santerre would represent a penetration of approximately two miles into the German lines. The latter town is about three miles east of Villers Bretonneux, slightly to the east of which the former British line ran. Marcelcave is two miles south-west of Lamoteen Santerre and about two and one half miles south-east of Villers Bretonneux. The woods named do not appear on available maps. The advices indicate that the principal force of the British stroke was exerted in the Villers-Bretonneux area, slightly to the south-east of Amiens, where Field Marshal Haig's troops had an advantageous jumping off place from the Villers Bretonneux Ridge.

TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

The attack must have taken the Germans by surprise, as the weather has not been such as would generally be chosen for the commencement of new operations. On Monday there was a continuous downpour of rain along the Amiens front, but advices state that British troops were congratulating themselves that the ground was not as bad as they had experienced in Flanders, where shell craters were filled with water and there was no means of draining them.

A very considerable number of villages have been captured in the Franco-British offensive and substantial progress made, according to news received here this afternoon.

WILL RESIDE IN SPAIN DURING HIS FIVE YEARS BANISHMENT

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, August 8.—Louis J. Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, convicted of a misdemeanor following his acquittal on all charges of treason, to-day chose San Sebastian, Spain, in which to live during his five years' banishment. The charges of treason against M. Malvy resulted from his alleged connection with the Bolo Pasha "defeatist" clique. After he was acquitted the Senate decided there was nothing to prevent his trial for a disdemeanor.

San Sebastian is one of the most famous watering places in Europe. It is situated on the Bay of Biscay, twelve miles from the French frontier.

The Americans Are Advancing

Enemy Counter Attacks Broke Down Under Allied Shellfire.

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 8. — This morning the American and French troops crossing the Soissons-Rheims highway were bridging the valley between the Vesle and the Aisne Rivers. Different counter attacks broke down under the fiery Allied artillery fire. The Allies are holding all the positions they have gained and are steadily pushing on. Heavy fighting is going on along the front north of the Vesle.

Additional bridging material is being rushed forward and new crossings are being established. The weather has cleared a bit.

Peterboro Boy In the Hospital

Was Taken Ill While on Leave—Peterboro Nurses In Attendance

Mrs. Patterson, of 675 Water street, has received word that her son, Company Quartermaster Sergeant C. H. Patterson, has been under an operation for appendicitis at the Ontario Military Hospital, Orpington, England. While on leave from his battalion he was visiting his brother, Capt. (Dr.) J. Russel Patterson, of the above named hospital, and was seized with a serious attack of appendicitis, which made an immediate operation necessary. His present condition is reported as being favourable and it will be interesting to his friends here to know that he is being cared for by Nursing Sisters Miss Bertha Mowry and Miss Beatrice Blewett, of Peterborough, as well as having his brother, Russel, as medical attendant.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.— The Associated Press war comment on this morning's Allied victory, says:

This new attack, launched just three weeks after Field Marshal Foch's masterly counter offensive against the western side of the Soissons-Rheims salient, has been expected since the Germans were driven back to the Aisne and the Vesle. It was not believed that the Allied commanders would permit the initiative to pass to the enemy after a stunning defeat administered to him along the Marne. Foch is known to be an offensive fighter, and it has been predicted that the new blow would fall on the German lines before they had time to re-organize their shattered divisions behind the Vesle and the Aisne.

Refreshment Booths For Civic Holiday

Expectations of Big Crowd Make Good Demand.

One way to size up whether a crowd is expected at a demonstration or not in Peterborough is by the demand for booths for the day. Mr. Reg. Turner reports that for Monday, Civic Holiday demonstration at the Fair Grounds the requests for space for refreshment privileges has been more than brisk and his advice is that any one anticipating putting up a booth should see him at once to get location.

Menace Has Been Wiped Out

Enemy Troops Were Hurled Back Upon the Avre.

(Special to The Examiner.)
(United Press Service.)
(By John D. Gandt.)

PARIS, August 8.—The Franco-British advance on the Picardy front is continuing this afternoon. The Germans were completely surprised, some divisions being caught while being relieved.

At noon, the depth of the advance was reported to be "most satisfactory," and the attack was developing on both sides of the Somme.

The enemy has been hurled back upon the Avre. Unimportant units of British troops are assuming a considerable role in the operation. The first apparent result of the new offensive is the wiping out of the menace to Amiens.

World Happenings

(Special to The Examiner.)

MOSCOW, Aug. 8.—General Leniken has penned the Bolshevikist forces in Southern Russia in the narrow space between Haman and Ekaterinolav according to a despatch received here today from Kiev. In this region the Bolsheviki hold only Novorossiki.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Gross shipping tonnage constructed by the Allies during the three months ending June 30, totalled 1,243,276 according to figures published by the Admiralty. Of this amount British was 442,966.

SPRUCE UP FOR CIVIC HOLIDAY

Women and men who will want to go holidaying in some new wearing apparel and toggery for the Civic holiday, will find a great array of serviceable and timely bargains at M. Fine's new store, 427 George street. Sacrificing prices seem to have ben specially prepared for Friday and Saturday; and there should be a busy time at this big store during these two last shopping days before Civic holiday. It's some time since you have read such rare offerings as are waiting for you at Fine's this week-end.

HUGE CLOTH ORDER.

Scottish Mills to Make Uniforms for 2,000,000 Sammies—No Civilian Clothes Without Permit.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The British Government has let contracts to British manufacturers for military clothing to refit 2,000,000 American soldiers, according to a despatch from Glasgow to the Central News.

This order, which breaks all records, is in addition to contracts under execution for the French and British armies.

No cloth is to be made henceforth for civilian use, except under permit.

A COMPLETE SURPRISE

Several Hundred Tanks Led the Way—Bombardment Lasted Three Minutes.

FRENCH ATTACK

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 8. — Franco-British troops attacked at dawn this morning between Morlancourt and Moreuil, on a front of about 15 miles, astride the Somme. Several important villages have been reached. The battle generally appears to be going well for the Allies.

Several hundred tanks led the way, fast "whippets" supporting. The "whippets" raced and dodged across the fields terrorizing and running the Germans down everywhere. The French are attacking in the region of Moreuil. Reports received here from that front are extremely optimistic, stating that the Germans are offering only slight resistance.

A bombardment of but three minutes preceded the British attack. The French attack, by agreement, was made a few minutes later, their artillery smothering the territory south of Amiens.

Prisoners declare the attack was a complete surprise. A number of guns are reported to have been captured.

Trades and Labour Council Join the Ind. Labour Party

The Trades and Labour Council last night decided to affiliate with the Independent Labour Party, and instructed the treasurer to remit their fee of $12. The Council also drew $10 from its treasury to aid William Varley in his election campaign as a Labour candidate in the Toronto bye-elections. The Carpenters' Union has already sent $10, the Electrical Workers $5, and other unions are expected to contribute.

The Letter Carriers reported that they expected to receive a decision from Ottawa to-day in regard to the claims for which they recently went on strike. It was stated that a number of citizens acted as strike breakers by helping to deliver mail while the Letter Carriers were out. Ald. Edgar drew a vote of censure for permitting his children to work at the Post Office while the posties were impressing the Government and the public with the justice of their demands. Several other citizens were mentioned, and the Letter Carriers were asked to bring in a report on the alleged action of these men. If they took part in the distribution of the mail, to avoid the nasty word that strikers use, they will be named at the next meeting of the Council.

It was reported that some of the factories are obtaining coal for their employees, and it was hoped that this assistance might be emulated by other industrial companies.

PRISONERS IN THE WAY

Enemy Prisoners Are So Numerous British Have Difficulty in Handling Them.

DIVISION SURPRISED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, August 8.—In the district north of the Somme, the Germans are reported to have launched two counter attacks. The British artillery fire broke them both up. Prisoners taken by the British are so numerous that they are having difficulty in handling them.

The Allied attack on the Albert-Montdidier front to-day apparently was a complete surprise to Germans, and many prisoners were taken. One German division was surprised as it was coming up to relieve front line troops.

"RAFFLES" ACCEPTS THE CHALLENGE

His Proposition to be Considered at Board Meeting To-night.

"Raffles" to who mthe challenge was issued yesterday by the Exhibition Board that they would furnish him with a straight-jacket manufactured by J. J. Turner & Sons, that he could not extricate himself from, has accepted the challenge in the following letter to the Examiner to-day.

RAFFLES ACCEPTS CHALLENGE

"Raffles" to whom the challenge issued by the Exhibition Board through last night's Examiner to be strapped and bound in a straight-jacket to be made by J. J. Turner & Sons.

There seemed to be some doubt that Raffles would accept but so positive is he of his ability to extricate himself from any restraint made to hold man that he immediately accepted the challenge under these conditions, that he examine the jacket to see that it is in regulation form and that J. J. Turner & Sons or the Exhibition Board will forfeit one hundred dollars and the jacket if he is successful in escaping.

His proposition will be considered at to-night's meeting of the Board.

ORGANIZING THE CHINESE.

LABOURERS WANTED.— APPLY MR. F. ROBERTS, WM. HAMILTON CO., LTD. 3d-33

Clause 23 of the Latest Fuel Bulletin Quoted for Benefit of Those Who Haven't Read It

Recent discussions by the Trades and Labour Council and the City Council on the latest bulletin issued by the Fuel Controller and the authority thereby granted any local fuel commission to direct the distribution of coal is reprinted as follows:

"If there is reason to suppose that any municipality will have to face the problem of even a temporary fuel shortage at any period of the winter it might be well to inaugurate a system whereby coal distribution is systematized and regulated. Obviously, if there is any likelihood of such a system being required, it should be started as early in the season as possible, in order that the foundation may be laid for intelligent control, thus avoiding or minimizing the effect of any temporary fuel shortages. It may, of course, be difficult to forecast the situation, but those municipalities who suffered during the past winter may probably consider that no chances should be taken of plentiful supplies of coal not being available, and that the safety of the community demands a systematic control from the beginning.

Under emergency conditions, the Local Fuel Commissioner should instruct the dealers that they are not merely to supply their regular customers. Their duty is to conform to the situation and make such deliveries as he may requisition."

The coal dealers assured Ald. Edgar that there was no danger of an emergency, and the above regulation, if it deserves that name, does not define an emergency nor indicate the official who shall decide that such emergency exists. The coal dealers should be in a position to determine whether there is any present emergency or whether it is likely to develop. They have the first-hand knowledge of market conditions, and likewise know what quantities of coal have been delivered and what other supplies they have been promised. But the Labour men reply that the simple statement that only 80 per cent. of the total importation in 1916 will be allotted this year is proof of an emergency, potentially at least, and, furthermore, they state that the inability of many citizens to obtain coal warrants the conclusion that an emergency exists now.

Foch Selects Unique Opportunity For Drive Along a New Sector

MR. J. H. BURNHAM DEPLORES NEW WAY

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., says: "Instructions have come, I believe, to secure estimates for painting the post office and probably other public buildings. Heretofore in such cases I have put the fact in the newspapers to give everybody a chance, but since patronage has been removed from the hands of the members a new way has been adopted here. Instead of giving everybody a chance, a few have been asked to give estimates instead of calling for tenders in the proper way. I decline to be responsible for this new order of things."

Bulgarians Refuse to Obey

Germany's Position in Bulgaria is Becoming Serious.

Special to The Examiner:

MILAN, Aug. 8.—Germany's position in Bulgaria is becoming serious according to advices received here.

Bulgarian soldiers are refusing to obey their German officers, and at Sofia bombs have been thrown at the German Legation house. The German Minister's demand for protection is said to have been refused. German soldiers have protected them, but they refuse to wear the Bulgarian uniform.

On July 1 Bulgarians are reported to have made assaults against the Turks and Germans. The Turks' Legation was attacked and broken. Mud was thrown on the churches and flags.

Talented Artists For Chautauqua

A Distinguished Violinist Will Take Part.

Miss Martha Alexander, Violinist; Miss Madge Williamson, Pianist. To those in the musical profession nothing more would be necessary than to mention the fact that these two artists take part and a big part in "Chautauqua Week," but in case there might be some who do not keep in touch with the leading artists of the day, may we take the liberty by way of introduction to say—that Miss Alexander was the first Violinist to be sent by the United States Government, to appear in the American Club House on the Isthmus of Panama and more, was the first of the talent there represented to be given a return engagement in response to universal demand. A violin in the hands of Miss Alexander becomes indeed a human thing.

And Miss Williamson, one of the most successful exponents of Professor Hambourg's method, need only be heard once to win her way to the ears of even the most skeptical. She has had a very wide experience in concert work and is always most enthusiastically received. The Toronto Star says that her playing shows "special virtuoso achievement"; The Winnipeg Post calls her "exceptionally talented, with much artistic taste and scintillating technique."

These two artists alone are well worth the cost of the whole "Chautauqua Week," which is but $2.00 for a ticket that admits you to three performances daily for six days. At this price the tickets are limited to six hundred. Those who are fortunate enough to be one of the first six hundred will never regret, having not only got $2.00 worth themselves, but they have assisted by their contribution "The Win the War Chautauqua."

Be a patriot at least to the extent of $2.00.

Hindenburg Has Undervalued Importance of His Lines Between Mondidier and Amiens—Railway Lines Threatened

A SHARP POCKET

(By J. W. T. Mason)
(United Press Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Marshal Foch's new drive which began this morning east of Amiens, is for the purpose of creating a new salient between the Oure river and at the same time encroaching upon the Prince's Railway reserves into von Hindenburg's southern front.

Von Hindenburg has under valued the importance of his lines between Montdidier and Amiens for the purpose of securing reserves to prevent his Soissons and Rheims flanks from being crushed at the same time the Kaiser's general staff is now primarily concerned with trying to get its retreating army over the Aisne and in positions to defend their men. An opportunity therefore unique since the first battle of the Marne has offered itself to Marshal Foch to strike along a new sector of the western front while elsewhere the Germans are in retreat and on the defensive.

AREA SELECTED

The area selected for the new offensive offers the most promising possibilities of any point along the entire West front. The German railway line running east behind the German front from Amiens is the dividing line between armies of the German Crown Prince in the south and Prince Rupprecht's forces in the north. If the British and French troops succeed in controlling it for any considerable distance, Rupprehecht and the young hopeful will have their areas of contact dangerously shortened necessitating a considerable movement for troops to move from one sector to the other.

At the same time, a sharp pocket will be made of the German Crown Prince's front between Amiens and Montdidier

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, AUGUST 8TH, 1918.

RIOTERS CONDEMNED.

The public should not make the mistake of judging all returned soldiers by the actions of the misguided men who were instrumental in causing the riots in Toronto, and whose foolish conduct has led to the present disgraceful state of affairs with Mayor Church threatening to read the riot act, and with the possibility of the military forces having to be appealed to to restore order. Most heroes of the Great War are heartily ashamed of and disgusted with the lawless actions of the Toronto returned men, and the Dominion Convention of the G.W.V.A. promptly passed a drastic resolution that condemned the action of the men responsible for the trouble.

It is significant that the Parkdale (Toronto) branch of the G.W.V.A. has followed this action with the following strongly worded resolution:

"The executive of the Parkdale branch heartily endorse the resolution passed by the Dominion convention, denouncing the lawless manifestations of Friday last.

"The legitimate struggle to get a glaring abuse remedied by our lawgivers will not be assisted by attempts to 'hack through' without respect for law and property.

"We have every confidence that the members of the Parkdale branch will not allow any body of citizens to surpass them in unshakeable self-control and the discipline that makes for liberty."

REASONABLE REQUESTS.

The conference between the subcommittee of the Cabinet and representatives of the Canadian letter carriers, mail clerks and postal clerks, has been concluded, and the answer of the government, which will be announced in a short time, will be awaited with interest. Public opinion is strongly behind the government employees in their requests, which are considered as sane and reasonable. Briefly the chief requests made upon the government, were:

(1) The extension of the benefits of the provisional allowance granted last session to all employees of the postal service, whether married or single, or whether with or without dependents.

(2) The extension of the living allowance of $180 per annum, which the postal clerks west of Port Arthur have enjoyed for a number of years, to their confreres east of Port Arthur.

There does not seem to be any logical reason why there should not be a favorable answer given to the postal employees. The dilly-dallying tactics of the government in dealing with the matter which resulted in the recent strike, should not be repeated in the present negotiations, and it is sincerely hoped that the complaints will be speedily adjusted.

MARSHAL FOCH.

The allied world will unite in acclaiming the elevation of General Ferdinand Foch, comamnder in chief of the allied forces, to the rank of a Marshal of France. It is recognized that the honour has been richly earned by the Generalissimo, whose genius in frustrating the enemy strategy has resulted in complete defeat of the Germans, and has completely changed the complexion of the war situation, with the result that the beginning of the fifth year of the conflict, finds the allies everywhere confident, and with the initiative firmly in the hands of the man who has just been honoured by the council of French Ministers. The official award points out that the promotion of General Foch is not only a reward for past services, but will also "consecrate even more deeply the authority of the great warrior called upon to lead the Entente armies to a definite victory."

Premier Clemenceau's eulogy of the new Marshal is an admirable summary of the great services rendered by General Foch. The French Premier says:

"At the hour when the enemy by a formidable offensive on a front of 100 kilometres, counted on snatching the decision and imposing a German peace upon us, General Foch and his admirable troops vanquished him.

"Paris is not in danger; Soissons and Chateau Thierry have been reconquered, and more than two hundred villages have been delivered. Thirty-five thousand prisoners and seven hundred cannon have been captured, and the enemy's high hopes before the attack have been crushed. The glorious allied armies have thrown him from the banks of the Marne to the Aisne. Such are the results of the High Command's strategy, superbly executed by incomparable Commanders. The confidence placed by the Republic and by all the allies in the conqueror of St. Gond, the Yser and the Somme has been fully justified."

General Petain's award of a Medaille Militaire, a distinction rarely given to officers, is an honour that is deserved. The official citation accompanying the decoration, points out that General Petain has acquired imperishable rights on national gratitude by victoriously repulsing the German onslaught."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The German submarines operating off the Atlantic Coast, seem to be of the Lusitania - Llandovery Castle school, as evidenced by the shelling of the life boats of the oil tanker Lux Blanca.

The announcement that 500,000 troops are being raised in India this year bodes no good for the Turks in Mesopotamia and Palestine, where the new troops will be mostly used.

Eighty-three per cent. less drinking in England, says an official announcement. There must be something wrong about all those complaints that some misguided people have been making of conditions in the old land.

THE G.W.V.A.

(Hamilton Herald.)

When the Great War Veterans' Association was organized, there were many who hoped that it would prove to be a great conservative, stabilizing force in the country—that it would exert an independent influence which would in a large measure offset that of partizan politics. The Herald was among those that cherished this hope. It more than once urged the veterans to keep clear of party politics and turn the cold shoulder to those who would be sure to use them for political purposes.

So far these hopes have not been wholly fulfilled. Even thus early in its career the association has been used by designing politicians. Worse than that, instead of being a stabilizing and conservative influence, it is in some danger of becoming a menace to the peace and welfare of the country. Of late, the less intelligent and more lawless element in the association has appeared to be getting control and the influence of the better element has seemed to be diminishing. The raids made by mobs of returned soldiers upon Toronto restaurants and the headquarters of the Vancouver trades and labour council, were demonstrations of mob force not less criminal and dangerous than similar demonstrations by mobs of avowed anarchists. A little more of that sort of thing, and the returned soldiers may forfeit the gratitude and admiration of the Canadian people, and make it necessary for the military authorities to take measures to protect the public.

These demonstrations are all the more to be deplored because only a comparatively small proportion of the veterans are capable of disgracing the king's uniform by such unsoldierly conduct. The great majority of the veterans are men as self-respecting and law-abiding as any class of civilians. It remains to be seen whether these will control the G.W.V.A., or whether the men who are intent on promoting their personal interests and objects, and who do not hesitate to do so by employing physical force, are to be permitted to rule. There is some ground for hope that the better element in the association will yet obtain the upper hand. That element evidently was in control of the delegation from Ottawa and Winnipeg to the Dominion convention at Toronto, for when the Ottawa and Winnipeg delegates withdrew from the convention last week they explained the reasons for their withdrawal, and these reasons show that they were out of sympathy with the self-seeking element in the association. "We have received from the convention," they said, "the unfortunate impression that an attempt is being made to form a political organization, with the idea of running the country. This is not, nor ever has been, our conception, nor was it the intention at the inception convention held at Winnipeg, in April, 1917." And they said further that "a movement is on foot which would make it possible to have an undesirable element carry personal aims to the detriment of the welfare of Canada and the cause of our comrades in France."

Happily, the protest of these patriotic delegates was at least partially successful, and a compromise was effected which made it possible for them to return to the convention.

It rests with the G.W.V.A. to determine its status and reputation in this country. It might be a power for good while safeguarding the welfare of its members, the men who have earned the gratitude of the Canadian people by their valour and self-sacrifice. Or it may become a menace to the public welfare by the adoption of narrowly selfish and dangerously aggressive policies.

Satisfactory evidence that the majority of the members of the G. W. V. A. do not sympathize with manifestations of force by returned soldiers, was the resolution which was adopted by the delegates to the Dominion convention, condemning the recent ebullition of lawlessness by returned soldiers in Toronto.

REPLY TO POSTMEN PROMISED AUGUST 20

Hon. A. K. McLean Issues Statement Following Conference.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8. — Hon. A. K. McLean, chairman of the sub-committee of the Cabinet in conference with the letter carriers and postal clerks, announced last night in an official statement that the Government's reply to the demand made by the postal employes would be given not later than August 20. The statement is as follows:

"The committee of the Privy Council on Tuesday heard representations on behalf of the letter carriers, railway mail clerks and postal clerks, in respect of the requests of these branches of the public service for increased pay and the establishment of minimum and maximum salaries. These several matters involve many important questions which will require some days for consideration. The sub-committee, however, promised the representatives of the branches of the postal service that their representations would be immediately taken into consideration and the conclusions of the Government would be announced on about or before August 20."

FINE POINTS OF BASEBALL WHICH ARE LOST ON CROWD ---TOLD BY TRIS SPEAKER

Why the Usual Baseball Audience, Though Keenly Intelligent, Fails to Appreciate Hidden Details Which Make Up a Star Outfielder.

The American public is unusually keen in its appreciation of good baseball. No doubt a large percentage of the average week-day crowd would be qualified to claim standing as good amateur experts. And yet my own experience has led me to believe that the crowd seldom appreciates the really fine points which go to make up the professional outfielder.

In making this statement I am not criticizing the crowd. I fully understand the reasons which make it impossible for them to comprehend fully the intelligence or lack of intelligence, which guide the outfielder in making the moves he does. For in order to fully appreciate the latter's work it would be necessary for the spectator to know as much baseball as the player himself, which, of course, is obviously absurd.

The point I am trying to make is rather obscure and hard for me to define. Perhaps I can best do this by citing an illustration. I played in a game not long ago where a certain outfielder (I will not give his name for obvious reasons) entirely misjudged the player at the bat. He should have taken his position considerably to the right of where he actually stood and much farther back. The batter, connecting with the ball, drove out a long fly to approximately that position on the field where he would naturally be expected to hit, and where the trained outfielder, knowing the batter's characteristic tendency, would have stationed himself in readiness to catch the fly when it came his way. This particular outfielder, however, did not do so. What he did do was to make a surprisingly long run and a truly brilliant one-handed catch of that long fly. The crowd, which appreciates a play of the kind, roundly applauded him. Now there is no discounting the fact that this particular player deserved much praise for what he did do in that he made a difficult catch in a spectacular manner. But he played atrocious baseball in not being where he should have been at the time. The crowd, however understood none of this. They sensed nothing of the fielder's failure to judge the play correctly. They judged entirely by what they saw, which was a brilliant run and catch, and they went away from the ball park fully convinced that the outfielder in question had made the star play of the game.

TYPE OF PITCHING.

At another time in a recent game a certain player, who knows outfielding as the spectator knows the scoreboard, stationed himself at an unusual position in the outfield. His position could be justified only by a thorough knowledge of the batter's peculiarities, taken in conjunction with the type of pitching he was receiving. In due time the batter met the ball and drove it on a line out to where the outfielder caught it without moving from his tracks. This play involved a lifetime of accurate study and an absolute mastery of the outfielder's principal art, namely, playing the batter. But because the catch was an easy one the crowd, no doubt merely thought the batter unlucky to hit directly into the fielder's hands and gave the latter no credit whatever for what was in reality an unusually able play.

An amateur may go up to the plate and by bull luck drive out a crashing three-bagger which wins the game an makes him the hero of a day. The past-master of batting may go up to the plate and strike out, after following the most scientific and approved batting methods in existence. But the crowd knows little of the elements of skill with which he approached his problem. They judge solely by results. One batter struck out; hence, curtains. The other came through in the pinch; hence the usual popular ovation which greets the man who makes good.

PRINCIPAL WORK.

I have said that the principal work of the outfielder is to play the batter. I believe this to be true. Almost every batter has his peculiarities, which the outfielder should know and make allowances for. Perhaps 10 per cent. of the good batters in the league can hit to either field more or less according to their will to do so. The remaining 90 per cent. hit customarily into one field or the other. And the 10 per cent., the batting elect, with all their ability, can never quite divest themselves of the natural tendency to hit to a certain field. Take Ty Cobb, for instance, the most illustrious of batters. Ty is versatile almost beyond belief.

He can hit in any direction he pleases as nearly as any batter can do so. And yet Ty has his tendencies and his preference. When Ty is at bat I do not play him exactly in thecenter of the outfield. I play him in the left center, for experience has taught me that he will hit more the opposite field. Of course Cobb is one of the hardest men in the world to play for. Many outfielders make little or no attempt to play for him at all. But the average player is by no means in that category.

Take for instance a man like Peckinpaugh, of the Yankees, a fine shortstop and by no means a bad hitter. Peck usually hits a solid rap when he does connect with the ball. But he has the known tendency to hit toward left field. Consequently at least four men are laying for that tendency of his—the left fielder, the center fielder, the third baseman and the shortstop. They encroach on the territory where Peck is most likely to hit and greatly cut down his chances of hitting safely. A straightaway hitter whose tendency was unknown might hit safely to left field where the very same rap by Peckinpaugh would be easily caught. This example illustrates the manner in which the fielders make capital of the batter's tendency and thus greatly curtail his chances of hitting sefely. I cannot pretend to say how such a conspiracy of fielding will affect a batting average. But it might very well cut into such an average by from twenty to fifty points from the average batting record is a serious loss indeed. This also illustrates why the .350 hitter is so successful. He gets a grand lead on the rest because the fielders cannot play for him so well.

"My feelings have been hurt;
There is no baseball any more
And I can not expert."

Miller Huggins' says a ball player who is a real crab is worth several hundred dollars more to a team, everything else being equal. On the theory, we presume, that the crab is there in a pinch.

Home Run Baker has broken up many a ball game, but he is not in the same class with his namesake, Newton D., in the matter of busting up the old pastime.

A Duluth shipbuilding concern having signed Hub Perdue is now looking around for a good second string pitcher. Overtures have been made to Walter Johnson.

"You show much improvement," said Cobb, strolling up to Benz with the ball under his arm. "You know, I think you're going to make a batter. I like the way you stand up at the plate."

In a game between the White Sox and Tigers Ty Cobb, playing first base, trapped Joe Benz off the bag after the Chicago pitcher had singled. A little flattery did the trick.

NO REJOICING BY LABOUR MEN OVER NEW FUEL COMMISSION

Two of the Members Regarded as Millionaires, and Third is Suspected of Having Lost Some of His Ardour Through Associations With Coal Men.

WATCHFUL WAITING

The distribution of coal continues to be the chief concern of the Trades and Labour Council. Hot as it was last night, the delegates shed their coats and warmed up to the subject as ardently as if it were winter and their worst wears of a shortage for the workingman had materialized. There were no regrets expressed at the retirement of Alderman Edgar as Fuel Commissioner, neither was there elation over the appointment of the new Fuel Commission of three citizens, Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, T. H. G. Denne and M. L. Campbell, the latter a member of the Labour Council. In the first place the delegates were dissatisfied with the method by which Mr. Campbell was selected. They were ready to acknowledge the recognition the Council had evidently intended by nominating him, but it was not strictly according to Hoyle. The proper procedure, it was stated, would have been to consult the Labour Council asking them to name their representative on the new Commission. Mr. Campbell might have been chosen accordingly, and then again he might not. Some of the members were inclined to view with suspicion his change of reart toward Alderman Edgar and the coal dealers, and to doubt his zeal as a member of the new commission. It was recalled that Mr. Campbell had formerly been as censorious toward Alderman Edgar's administration as any of the other members, but since he had sat at the inner councils of the local coal authorities his opinion had undergone a complete change.

Replying to these remarks, Mr. Campbell stood his ground in his attitude toward the late Commissioner. The coal men, he admitted, needed watching, but even they had been ready to open their books to his inspection. Alderman Edgar, Mr. Campbell maintained, had endeavoured to influence the coal men to adopt a twenty-five per cent. distribution of coal, but they had contended that there was no emergency to warrant his proposal. And Mr. Campbell declared that even the latest bulletin from the Fuel Controller, authorizing a more general distribution of coal, was conditioned by the existence of a local emergency.

The two other members of the Commission were classed as "millionaires" with little sympathy for the workers, but on the whole the Labour men were prepared to withhold judgment on the coal triumvirs until their plan of action was displayed. The Labour men fear that in the meantime the weeks will slip by unless the Commission makes an early beginning, and the supplies of coal arriving in that time will be distributed on the present basis.

Mr. Campbell remarked that there were several methods of dealing with the coal men. One was to jump on them and attempt to force the coal from them, the other, the method he favoured, was a tactful approach with a presentation of the facts and the needs of the people, and an appeal to the retailers to give the workingmen the immediate deliveries they demanded.

Some of the members were sceptical of such suavity. "If you don't want to carry the gun," said one of them, "hand it over to some one who will." However, Labour's representative on the Commission will carry on. When he asked for suggestions to lay before his colleagues, his marching orders, so to speak, he was reminded that the all important objective was to get coal, if possible, for those who have thus far been unable to place their orders.

"It looks now just as we always expected," said one delegate. "The persons with money have got their coal, and the poor people have had to wait until now, and have to pay the higher prices. The ones I am sorry for are those who have had no regular dealers. They got a half ton here and another there, and now when they try to get coal they are informed by the dealers that their regular customers have not been supplied."

Fine for Speeders Is Boosted to $10 By the Magistrate

The price of speeding soared to $10 and costs this morning, Magistrate Dumble concluding that the $5 touch had failed as a deterrent to those drivers who crave the sensation of hitting the high spots. Louis Florence pleaded not guilty, but P. C. McIntosh testified against him, and asserted that he had had considerable experience in catching the fast ones. Mr. Florence was fined $13.10, and a like sum was taken from Herb Duffus for driving a car without a marker.

A. Parker, of Norwood, paid $9.60 for neglecting to observe the regulation giving the man on his right the right-of-way.

Joseph Fontaine rented one of his automobiles, and while it was out the driver passed a street car that was stopped. The police caught the number of the car, and on the strength of that information the owner was fined $8.10.

Alexander Hamilton, a stranger, was remanded for a week on the charge of not being usefully employed. He was acting strangely near the Lift Lock yesterday afternoon. The police will investigate the account he gave of himself, and will seek information from other cities.

AIRMEN LOCKED TOGETHER.

A flying officer's escape and another's death in a collision at a height of about 700 feet were described at an inquest in England.

A brother officer of Lieut. Owen Hewitt Dampier Bennett, who was killed, said the latter was flying between 300 and 400 feet over him when he suddenly fell. Witness tried to get out of his way, but had not sufficient speed. The nose of his aeroplane jammed in the under carriage of Lieut. Bennett's machine, and they locked together. Both machines rolled over and over for 300 feet, when witness' machine broke adrift and smashed the lower planes of the other machine, which crashed to the ground. Witness came out of the lock in a dive and then planed down.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

BENNY BROUGHT ABOUT RETURN OF DUNDEE TO ROSS

Benny Leonard is said to have had something to do with making up the differences between Johnny Dundee and Scotty Montieth, who is back on the job again as Dundee's manager. Leonard, who is a staunch admirer of both Dundee and Montieth, patched up their affair by declaring he would give Dundee a title match if he went back to Montieth. He went back. Curiously enough, the same Leonard is held, indirectly, responsible for the split between Ted Lewis and Jimmy Johnston. Johnston has not been on good terms with Billy Gibson, Leonard's manager, for years, and there was no chance of Lewis getting a match with Leonard so long as that difference existed. So he quite Johnston to get a crack at Leonard. At least, that's what he says.

AN INDIVIDUAL MATTER.

Poverty is an individual matter. It does not belong to any particular class. Some people tell us that our country is divided into two great classes, the capitalistic and the proletariat; the wealthy and the working class.

There are really four kinds of people in the world to-day:

The poor poor—those who have no money and nothing else.

The rich poor—those who have no money, but who have the other things that make life worth while.

The poor rich—those who have money, but nothing else.

The rich rich—those who have money as well as the other things.

The last class, as a rule, ought to be the happiest people, but if I had to choose between being a "RICH poor" man or a "POOR rich" man, I would rather be a "RICH POOR" man—and anybody may be a "RICH POOR" man.

Poverty cannot be abolished by wholesale, for the reason just given. Scores of schemes planned for the abolition of poverty have been tried, but have all failed. No matter how they may have been advocated in good faith, and no matter how earnest and sincere were the men who promoted these schemes, yet selfishness and laziness, the lack of individual effort dependence upon the community — these are the reasons given for their failure.

No society can do for a man what he will not do for himself.

The best kind of an anti-Poverty Society is an organization composed of one member. — Rev. Charles Stelzle in Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

City Secures Estimates on the Work of Checking Over Plans of the Overhead Bridge

Work Will Cost Thirty Dollars a Day With an Extra Amount for Assistants, Travelling Expenses, Etc.—Committee Appointed to Deal With Matter—Meeting of the Board of Works.

ROUTINE BUSINESS DISPOSED OF

At a meeting of the Board of Works held last evening, Mr. E. M. Proctor, consulting engineer of the firm of James Loudon and Hertzburg, Ltd., of Toronto, submitted his tender re the overhead bridge.

Thirty dollars a day would be charged by the firm with $15 a day for assistants to make and check the plans, and should this be more than one percent. of the total cost of the bridge, they agree to accept one per cent. Railroad and hotel expenses would be extra under the $30 a day plan. And if they work in conjunction with the city engineer the cost would be one per cent. To take over making and checking of plans and supervising of construction of the bridge four per cent. would be charged. All responsibility would be assumed by the engineers.

Mr. R. O. Roberts was present in the interests of Mr. Frank Barber, consulting engineer of Toronto. His firm also charged $30 a day and $15 per diem for assistants for making and checking of plans. If the whole job was taken over 5 per cent. of the total cost would be charged.

Mr. A. J. Meyers, who supervised the designing of the Quebec Bridge, would charge 2½ per cent. Each representative was asked what they could do with the city engineer's plans. As none of the trio had seen the plans they could not make an estimate.

At last it was decided to appoint a committee to select one of the firms, and if necessary call in another firm in consultation. Mayor Duncan was appointed convenor with Aldermen Weir and McIntyre, and City Engineer Parsons as members of the board.

Loading Platform.

The necessary permission was also given the Peterborough Machine Company to erect a temporary loading platform at the rear of the premises on Water street. The structure will cost the company $1.00 a year rental. It will be nine feet high, four feet wide and twenty-five feet long, with an approach 100 feet long.

Will Repair Pavement.

The Board of Works will recommend that the pavement at the north-east corner of King Edward Park be repaired so that it does not hold back water which accumulates there. City Engineer Parsons will have charge of the work. A letter was also read from the Board of Health asking that sewers be placed on a section of Bethune street. The motion was finally carried by a majority of one.

Cleaning the Streets.

The Dustless Sweeper Co. wanted to know what they would receive from the city if they kept the city pavements clean. This was shelved until a representative of the company could consult with the Board.

Trees Removed.

Mr. A. E. Dixon asked permission to cut down two trees on Aberdeen avenue. One of the trees has already blown down. They were ordered to be removed under the direction of the city engineer.

Mr. Sarginson, of Sherbrooke street, was also present concerning two trees which had been cut down. On motion of Alderman Worth, and seconded by Alderman McIntyre, no action was taken.

Interview With Peterboro Nurse Now Overseas

Matron McCarney is Now in Charge of a Hospital at Aldershot

Representing one of Canada's big newspapers in order to get an idea of camp life at Aldershot the writer while visiting the different departments came to the hospital staff in connection with which Matron Cathrine McCarney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCarney, 21 Bethune street and niece of Mr. George Graham in in charge. In describing his visit to the hospital staff he, describes his interview as follows, the Major refered to being Major McDonald, O.C.A.M.C.

To look at Miss McCarney, one could hardly conceive that she is a veteran of the results of a dozen or more battles; one who dearly loves her work and of whom it can be said with all sincerity that she is beloved by her staff and the patients. It was hard to get from the lady her experiences, but eventually she told where she had been, as follow:

The first time I went to France ,we were turned back several times owing to submarine activity. Finally we landed and remained over night at the port. We left early in the morning for the Champagne district, arriving at our destination about 1 a.m. the following morning. We were to take over a two-thousand bed hospital from the French Medical Corps. For days, owing to the bombing ,etc., of stations, railways, etc., we were forced to work in the attire in which we left London and what we could carry in a hand bag Our hospital began operations the day after we arrived, and patients from various frontiers poured in. They consisted of troops from the French, Belgian, Italian, English armies composed on the aforesaid nationalities, as well as Zouaves, Singalese, Swiss, Algerians, Portugese, Spaniards and almost every foreign countrymen who had taken up arms with the Allies. Most of the sisters were in a position to speak French, which enabled them to find out the patients' ailments. Our work continued — admitting and evacuating—henceforward our hospital and staff continually increasing; the most of our admissions, etc., going on at night, during which I was Night Supervisor. I left the Champagne District and came to the English districts, being stationed in Rouen, Abbugville, Winneroux and Bologne at different times. according to transit. Coming back to England again, one feels as if they have accomplished and done their bit. Then the ambition to return to Canada and help carry on the care and treatment that war science and inventors have established in France and England in 1918.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

SOLDIERS HUNGRY FOR MUSICAL MESSAGE.

While the guns are thundering on the battle front and the boys are holding the line have you ever thought what comfort and pleasure you could give by sending some musical message "over there." The Red Cross is calling for your assistance. Those whose duty it is to minister to the comforts of the brave lads who are fighting the battle for democracy are alive to the benefits which music has in the lives of the soldiers. If you want to cheer the men you can do nothing better than send to the Red Cross some tangible musical recognition say in the form of a gramophone and records of some old sweet song that the boys once heard in a happy days gone past. The soldiers are hungry for music. They know the value of a good song, the uplifting effects of an excellent violin or orchestral number. Yet what are we doing at home to send them the message of music. We hear a good deal about soldiers comforts. Did it ever occur to you that music is one of the most lasting comforters in the world today. Our music lovers at home should see to it that the gospel of music is sent broadcast to our soldiers.

A MISTAKE TO PROFIT BY.

For some time the school children of a certain town have by holding concerts, bazaars and such events been building up a fund for the purchase of a piano to meet their singing, marching and concert requirements. Just recently the necessary amount was reached and they chose a splendid instrument. Naturally the boys and girls were much elated over their new possession. But in one particular it would seem they made rather a serious mistake. The purchasing committee chose a beautifully finished piano with a mahogany case. The mirror-like surface would appeal to anyone; and still, though the mistake is quite a forgivable one, an oak case would have been much more appropriate and unquestionably more durable.

In pre-war days when some of our Canadian titled gentlemen had maids enough to keep the glossy mahogany or walnut piano constantly polished the choice above reefred to could not be questioned but for a schoolroom an oak case would be more in keeping with the other appointments. Then, too, oak does not show greasy finger-marks. It is not easily scratched with the buttons on the clothes of romping children Furthermore an oak piano does not suffer from those mischievous little hair-lines caused by varnish checking from the extreme changes in temperature. Especially in schools and churches where the building is frequently not in use and no fires on, a highly polished surface of mahogany or walnut is bound to prove disappointing, for while science has done a great many things for us of late, it has not discovered a varnish that will not check in a changeable climate as ours. In a school, closed for the summer Christmas and Easter holidays an oak piano is the thing.

MUSIC IS A GREAT UNIFYING ELEMENT.

What music expresses may be denoted by the words love, sorrow, joy, aspiration, but it invariably loses by definition. It makes audible the vague stirrings of the soul, but only to him who understands its own speech; for any translation into familiar terms, robs it of its reason to be, the art tha appears where words fail.

There is something in the nature of sound which differentiates it from other modes of communication an element of direstness and immediacy. Probably long before the evolution of language, communication between members of the higher species of animals, apart from suggestive action as in the herd, was limited to the call or cry and the song of birds. The meaning of both cry and song is that they give intimation of states of feeling. This deep elemental character of sound expression has been maintained in the evolution of music. Other arts repend upon a machinery to mediate between person and person, and the emotional value given to this machinery had to come into being through long association. Persons, things, incidents must have their feelings values put into them before they can serve as means of emotional communication. It is different with musical sounds. There is something of the profundity of life itself even in the most elaborately formalized music.

It is this character which makes music the great democratic art. The materials of painting and of literature have been in the main specialized toward class supremacy. Princes and warriors, the great of the earth in terms of the dominant made of evolution, have been immortalized by art to the cost of the simple, profound and real. Folk songs express the life of a people far more adequately than monuments, pictures or even poetry. Music is a unifying and stabilizing element even when the institutions of civilizations are being shattered, for that which is expressed in music is the eternally human.

THE EFFECT OF COLD ON VIOLINS.

Though not as injurious to a violin as damp, cold should be avoided. It does not affect the violin materially as does damp, but it does have a bad influence on tone. Chilled fibres like chilled fingers refuse to work. Many violinists playing at concerts in the winter time go very early in order to get their fiddles warmed up before it is time to go on the platform.

"I once had the necessity for keeping a violin warm brought home to me in a very forcible manner," said a prominent musician. "I was giving a lecture on violins, and had all my specimens laid open on a table on the platform so they would be right at hand for the various illustrations. They had all been brought to the hall in warm cases, the room in which I tuned them was comfortably heated so I thought all was well. But owing to some break in the heating system, the hall itself was extremely cold. My first illustration, an unusually sweet and mellow fiddle, sounded unpleasantly thin and unsympathetic. Since then I always keep them shut up in their cases until the time comes to play on them, unless it is in the heat of summer."

The advice is therefore given amateur violinists—always commence to play on a well warmed violin.

GERMAN HARVEST OF FRENCH WHEAT UPSET BY ALLIES

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE SOISSONS-RHEIMS FRONT, Aug. 8. — Thousands of bushels of French wheat have been shipped home by German soldiers. The French and Americans during their advance of the last few days have discovered that systematic schemes had been laid by the Germans for reaping the harvest in the country from which they have been driven.

The territory stretching northward from the Marne is virtually one great wheat field, broken by forests here and there. The wheat was sown by peasants before the Germans advanced from the Aisne late in May and early in June and began ripening early in July.

Everywhere in the German camps the Allies have found large stacks of canvas bags to be distributed among soldiers to be filled with wheat. These bags have a capacity of nearly two pounds. In many places the Allies found them filled and addressed to soldiers' families. The Germans were compelled to leave them behind owing to their retreat.

Prisoners say that these sacks were supplied the soldiers by the army, which had also arranged to collect the filled sacks and forward them to Germany.

Thousands of acres of wheat were harvested by the Germans, who used large knives or improvised implements in the absence of reapers. The grain was thrashed with flails and the straw was carefully stacked for further use. The Allies, however, nipped the German plans for the completion of the harvest, many thousands of acres of wheat being saved. Harvesters are being rushed to the region to cut the wheat which the Germans did not harvest or which they failed to destroy during their retreat.

Military News

General Maunsell, G.S.O., acting G.O.C., inspected the N.C.O.'s class at Barriefield camp to-day. He is eminently satisfied with the progress being made in the training of these men, every one of whom will be qualified as drill P.T., bayonet fighting and musketry instructor. It is the aim of General Maunsell to have each N.C.O. efficient in every branch rather than to have specialists. The class consists of 150 men.

Another Change.

Major A. E. Latta, who has been assistant to the A.D.M.S., has been appointed medical officer of the Invalided Soldiers' Commission in Kingston. Major Latta saw service overseas. He succeeds Capt. A. Enviable Record.

Sergt. A. H. Platford, son of Lieut.-Col. Platford, D.S.O., of the London Scottish, who was killed at the battle of Mons, was discharged from Barriefield camp on Aug. 3rd, being medically unfit for further service. He served in France for two years, being wounded and gassed. His twin brother, second lieutenant in the London Scottish, was killed at the battle of Messines, and his sister was killed in a Paris bomb outrage in November, 1914. His mother is now working as a Red Cross nurse in Paris.

BYRNE SAYS COURT GIVES HIM FORTUNE

Beneficiary, Formerly Kidd, is Well-Known in Peterboro.

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.— Rev. David S. K. Byrne, ordained minister of the Christian Workers' church here and founder of several missions, has just been declared the sole heir in the American courts to the estate of the late W. G. Byrne, an American millionaire. The heir was formerly David S. Kidd, and on the death of the daughter of the millionaire, whom he rescued in Chicago in April, 1907, was adopted as a son. The girl died in Florida a year later and Kidd was left her share, amounting to $10,000,000, providing he adopted the name of Byrne and carried out the conditions of the will. One of the conditions is that he erects and endows in Toronto a memorial tabernacle, for which the sum of $1,580,000 is set apart. The building is to be used for Christian and uplift work. Byrne has all the papers complete and will start soon on the erection of the building.

The story is familiar in Peterborough—that is, the claim made by Mr. Kidd or Mr. Byrne has been published in Toronto many times. Enquiry in Montreal merely elicits the further information that "Mr. Byrne has wires from Washington that "judgment has been given in his favour."

He originally resided at Bewdley, in the Rice Lake district.

To Overcome Redness, Tan, Freckles, Blotches

If your skin is unduly reddened, tanned or freckled, just dab a little pure mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually and gently, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles are affected. The underlying skin which gkqj bgkqj jpjpjpjpjp is so clear, fresh and youthful-looking, you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug-store, is sufficient in most cases.

To clean a copper kettle, make a strong solution of water, soap, and soda, and let the kettle stand in it for a time. Then mix some fine coal ash with a little paraffin to form a paste, and rub it well on to the kettle. Afterwards polish with dry, powdered brickdust.

Piano Stolen? It Didn't Walk Away On Its Own Legs

NEITHER NOTE NOR CHORD DID STATEN ISLAND OWNER HEAR WHEN IT LEFT.

NEW YORK, Aug 8.—The means employed by modern burglars, sneak thieves or parlor pickpockets to remove a piano without disturbing the owner remain a complete and paralyzing mystery to William Sheeley, contractor, of Amoury road, Great Kills, S. I. The piano in question was removed painlessly in the afternoon while Mr. Sheeley slept within sound of its sweetest note, and he is convinced that it might as readily have been stolen if he was engaged in playing a sonata on the ever popular "Chop Sticks."

The detectives of the New Dorp station, willing to investigate anything once, have found no foot, teeth or elbow marks about the Sheeley home indicating the course of the piano movers. As nothing else in the contractor's home was disturbed they are, to use the oldest of police terms, baffled. They are that way after years of association with crime and criminals. Mr. Sheeley—who is merely a lay person and was lying down when the melodion escaped —is simply baffled.

According to the trifling evidence thus far obtained in the case, Mr. Sheeley was lying on his right side in a bathrobe in a room adjoining the music room. At two o'clock he heard a rustling in the adjoining room, but never susnecting that any one could be rustling the piano, he dropped off to sleep. He awoke at half-past four, and sensing a feeling of loss, went into the music room and shrieked once. Where the square piano had stood there was nothing but a pencil box. No music lover could be deceived by this absurd Staten Island deception.

Neighbors came running as neighbors ever will, and all declared that they had been sitting out on their porches and had noticed no one going in any direction with a piano. There was nothing left to do then but to call the police and Detective O'Connell.

Mr. Steele was not sure whether on the head with a blunt instrument, on the bear with a blunt instrument. Assisted by Detective O'Connell and the Staten Island police, he looked in vain for a bruise, after which an equally unsuccessful search was continued for the piano.

Mr. Sheeley stated that the piano was the very one upon which Jenny Lind learned to play. At the time of the statement he seemed to have entirely recovered from whatever indignities the burglars may have seen fit to heap or lean upon him.

The Grind of Munition Labor

The spirit with which we commence each day's work depends largely upon our mental attitude towards it. Most exalted labour palls after a time; and it requires great will power to overhaul ones viewpoint and rekindle enthusiasm.

This applies particularly to munitions labour. The work requires great physical strength, and it is tiring because it imposes continuous mental alertness.

For these reasons, munitions workers are in a class by themselves. And because they are above the average, public appeals are being made to them to speed up their efforts and get back to the large per capita output of munitions that they produced in 1917.

On hot sweltering days it requires resolution to keep up the grind; but remember, it needs even greater resolution to be fighting. As the most vital force behind the man behind the gun, Canada expects her munitions workers to keep on producing with the same determination that our armies keep on fighting.

Letter Suggests That Firemen Are Not Hired by the Pound

Members of the Fire Department Take Exception to Remarks of Chairman of Police Commission and Chief Thompson—"A Huge Frame and a Big Pair of Mawlers" Would Not Constitute a Good Fireman.

To The Editor, The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—

Re report of meeting of Police Commissioners, in reference to salary schedule for Police Department:

First of all we wish to congratulate the members of the police department over the substantial increases in salaries granted them by the police commission. However we are sorry that the members of the Fire Department were discussed and such dog-in-the manger tactics were used.

The salaries of the firemen are, at present, $1,000 per year despite the statements in last night's paper. We did receive 15 per cent. bonus, but this can be cut off any time after the expiration of the current year. The salaries (bonus included) of both departments are about equal. To earn this amount the police work about 11 hours daily, while the firemen are on duty 24 hours daily. This statement however is not made in the same jealous state of mind that characterize the utterances of the police officials but merely to enlighten the public regarding the different conditions under which the several municipal bodies operate.

As to the matter of the police being necessarily of a higher type than firemen, it might be interesting to note that each are up against entirely different conditions. A police chief can take some time to map out his policy regarding a case and he also has information and rules to govern him but when a fire chief arrives at a fire he realizes that he is up against a different combination of circumstances at nearly every fire and has to adjust and formulate his plans immediately. This quality is necessary not only for the chief but for every man, although probably in a lesser degree. Now judging from the following example, this quality is not so necessary in a policeman. Sometime ago, we had employed on the fire department, a man who did not possess these qualities of activity and versatility, he was released from the fire department, turned over to the police department and at present occupies the position of Chief of Police.

In some large American cities, large overgrown men were imported for the police department, a huge frame and a big pair of mawlers being the only attributes necessary.

It has been the aim of the fire department, under its new management to co-operate with other municipal bodies in the endeavor to render the best possible service. It is disappointing, to say the least to see men occupying the positions of Chief of Police and County Judge endeavouring either willfully or ignorantly, to cause ill-feeling and strife, at this time when harmony is so necessary.

In the interests of all concerned, for the promotion of harmony and in order that the city may be best served, we believe that a public apology through the press) should be forthcoming from the two officials named above, and have written them requesting the same.

Thanking you for the space occupied by this letter, we are,

Yours truly,

GEO. GRANGE, Chief,
HERBERT JOHNSTON,
Assistant Chief

On behalf of Peterboro Fire Dept.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Don't you think it would be more to the point if Mr. Burnham would first find out if it is agreeable to the owners of properties in the city, to hand them over for different purposes, before giving publicity to his suggestions.

It is mighty easy to suggest what to do with other people's property.

Yours truly,

J. B.

Peterborough, Aug. 8, 1918.

Editor of Examiner, Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—The following is a letter published in an American journal of recent date and goes to prove that people generally are awakening to the knowledge of conditions under which workingmen have to live.

To the Editor:— The opinion that seems to prevail, that a double shift for the firemen would require twice the number of men now on the payroll is in error. As at present constituted each hose has five men who the companies have their quota of men, which is not always the case. These men are on duty day and night continually except as follows: Each man is allowed nineteen hours off every fifth day, starting at twelve o'clock noon, and ending at seven o'clock the next morning. Each man is allowed for his meals one hour three times a day except that one man must carry supper when a man is off. Under this arrangement there are seven hours a day, during meals, that there are only three men with each hose company, and five men with the company only from nine o'clock to eleven o'clock each morning; the remainder of the time there are only four. Now in order to give the men a twelve hour shift and still have the present efficiency of the department, it would be necessary to add only one man to each hose company, three working days and three nights. As there are sixteen hose companies, this would require the addition of sixteen men and possibly three or four more for the hook and ladder and fire alarm service, not exceeding twenty in all. For the first year this cost to the city would be $15,600, increasing to twenty thousand dollars the fourth year.

Exchanges at the Court House

MR. G. N. GORDON WORE OUT HIS WELCOME ON THE FARM.

As the Court House nears completion the officials from within its precincts are beginning to enjoy the new entrance which only wants the marble floor for completion and some confidences surprising to the visitor are being exchanged. Only through this medium the truth of Mr. G. N. Gordon's non appearance on the farm this year was learned. It appears the farmer he hired with in 1917 doesn't want him. Last year while his work was above reproach his destruction was horrible including the breaking of a hayfork, hayrack and mowing machine. As yet this year Mr. Gordon's only continuation of this work has been a collision with a load of hay on Tuesday night on the Otonabee road. While he is not actively interested in farming this year he is willing to cheer fellow toilers on and only last evening passing Mr. Joseph Wearing toiling he help out production called the cheerful message "Work like the deuce Joe, it'll make vegetables cheaper for me in the fall!"

FORMAL OPENING.

There will be a formal opening of the new building the date, however, has not been set.

Food Board Flashes

Are you insisting on getting wheat substitutes from your grocer and are you, as a housekeeper, trying them out in your kitchen? There is no use saying they are not available because with possible exceptions in some districts, they are, and if your dealer does not carry them then that is his fault and yours. Next week the largest substitute milling concern in Canada is to be opened at Peterborough by the Quaker Oats Company. Cornmeal, oat flour, oatmeal and cornflour will be turned out at the rate of 7,000 barrels a day.

The darker the bread you have these days the more patriotic you are, so don't insist on getting light bread from your baker. On the contrary encourage him to go even further than the regulations specify in the use of substitutes.

FIFTEEN FORD PLANTS TO CLOSE.

Henry Ford, who was in Omaha Friday, announced the closing down of fifteen Ford automobile plants in various parts of the country. The plants in Chicago, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Long Island City, Buffalo, and Detroit will continue operations. Lack of materials for construction purposes is the cause of the shutdown.

BRITISH SALVAGE HUNDREDS OF SHIPS SUNK BY U-BOATS

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Not all the vessels which German torpedoes and marine collisions send to the bottom of the sea stay there. In less than three years more than four hundred sunken merchant vessels have been restored to service. And more than one ship has been raised, repaired, sent forth on a new career and then sunk and raised anew for a third lease on life.

This rescue work is done by the salvage section of the British navy. Before the war no one thought of attempting to save such wrecks as are now brought up from the depths, but ships now are priceless. The financial value of the salvage work is enormous The cargoes salved are themselves worth many millions of dollars.

Recently a big American tanker collided on a dark night in the English Channel with a sturdy British standard ship carrying oil. There was an explosion of benzine and both vessels were quickly wept by flames. Of the rew of the British ship only eight men, who jumped overboard were saved.

Salvage work on both sides began with the arrival of tugs, which, after overcoming many difficulties, managed to tow them close to shore. There it was necessary to sink them by gunfire. They are now being brought to the surface, a long arduous task.

The tanker, a fine vessel some five hundred feet long and new built, had on board 16,000 tons of oil, and though she blazed for four days half of the cargo was salved. When thoroughly repaired the tanker will be returned to the United States not much worse for wear, the damage estimated at $570,000, a small amount in marines figuring in these days when persons think in millions.

STORAGE BUILDING COLLAPSES WITH DEAFENING CRASH

Thousands of Bags of Sugar and Flour Heaped in Gansevoort Street Cellar.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.— With a roar that was heard for blocks the three upper floors of the building occupied by the Atlanta Warehouse Company, Nos. 1 to 13 Gansevoort street, caved in. Thousands of bags of flour and sugar on the floors sank to the cellar of the building. The ripping of the support beams from the side walls caused them to bulge and become a menace to traffic in the streets surrounding the structure. No one was in the building at the time.

Persons in the street turned in an alarm of fire and summoned policemen from the Charles street station. The police roped off a danger zone in Gansevoort and West Thirteenth streets and permitted vehicular traffic in Hudson street to pass only at intervals. It was feared a sudden jar would cause the other sections of the flooring and the side walls to collapse.

"Smoky Joe" Martin, Deputy Fire Chief, examined the building and ordered the Building Department to shore up the bulging walls and directed that both Gansevoort and West Thirteenth street be closed to traffic. He said he believed the remendous amount of provisions in the warehouse had caused the beams to give way. The loss will be trifling, Chief Martin believed, because the greater part of the flour and sugar can be salvaged.

It was rumoured that the contents of the warehouse was the property of the Quartermaster Department and was for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces, but no official of the company could be reached last night to verify the fact.

OREGON PRUNE CROP BREAKS ALL RECORDS

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 8.—Two records were broken this year in the prune growing industry of the Northwest. First, this year's crop is estimated as the greatest in the history of Oregon and Washington. Second, before the fruit is ripe on the trees, the crop has been sold. Under the regulations of the dried fruit division of the United States Food Administration, growers and packers were not allowed to make contracts for sale or purchase until July 15, but since that time practically the entire crop of between 45,000,000 and 80,000,000 pounds has been marketed.

W. K. Newell, Assistant Federal Food Administrator, in discussing the favourable situation recently said:

"The real size of the crop will depend upon the evaporator capacity for it is certain that it will tax the drying capacity of the Northwest."

The government has given notice to all packers and growers to reserve all the 50-60 prunes for army and navy supplies. The packers are reserving 30 to 40 per cent. of their prospective output to cover this reservation by the government.

LARGER MUNITION CONTRACTS MAY COME TO CANADA

Labour Situation Is Causing Trouble In Some Localities.

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets for week ending August 8, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Toronto, makes the following observations: Dealers in Canada who are trying to spread around the available supply of steel, among the many firms that present orders for same, are having troubles of their own during these months. It would appear that the procedure is this way: The authorities at Washington, through the war board there, give a certain proportion of the output of U.S. mills to Canada every month. It is then up to the War Board at Ottawa to distribute this supply. This really means that the War Board at Ottawa has got to take on itself the onus of stating which firms in Canada shall have a preference on available supply of material, and the agricultural and other interests are not going to stand aside while the distribution is taking place unless they are being favourably considered in it.

Larger Contracts.

Although nothing definite has been given out yet, it would not be surprising were an announcement to appear in the near future that the American war contracts in this country were to be considerably enlarged. Rumours from some of the steel centres in the U.S. which are very reliable, state that new sizes are being considered there and also draw attention to the fact that a very much increased output of shell steel is asked for in the next few months. Canadian firms have made an enviable reputation for themselves by the way in which they have handled U.S. business on previous occasions. No doubt they would be favourably considered in any extension to the war programme of the republic.

Although reports have not indicated it, the labour situation is causing some trouble in certain localities. One place where it shows very plainly is in regard to the scrap metal situation. Reports from a large number of the big centres in the U.S. state that the labour shortage is causing some delay not only in the bringing in of material in the first place but also in the sorting after it reaches the yards. In this way it is retarded from a quick move to the foundries, where it is very much needed at the present time.

Shipping Facilities.

Agents in this country who are handling British high speed steel believe that an effort may be made by the firms in the Old Country to get better shipping facilities to this land. In the last few months there has been a tremendous demand for high speed steel by almost every factory handling war orders in Canada, and U.S. firms have cut into his business to a very great extent. And in order to protect their interests here, British firms are likely to make a very determined effort to get their goods into the Canadian market as quickly as possible. Shipping facilities have worked against them in this regard in the past in no uncertain way.

Prices, as a general thing, have been holding remarkably firm during the week. As a matter of fact the whole range of prices has shown very little tendency to change. Reports today indicate that galvanized sheets are likely to go up. The mills cannot secure the black sheets, for galvanizing, and the chances are that as a result all light gauges of sheets will go up. Apart from this no price changes or indication of changes are reported during this week.

Funeral Was Held Yesterday

Late Mr. Airriess Was Faithful Member of Park Street Church

Yesterday the remains of the late Mr. Alfred G. Airries, 193 Westcott street, who died in Nichol's hospital on Tuesday morning the 6th instant, were laid at rest.

At 10 a.m. in the absence of Rev. Dougald Brown, Rev. J. R. Webb conducted the funeral service at the home of Mr. Airriess's brother, 88 McDonnel street.

Mr. Webb spoke very feelingly of the consistent Christian character of Mr. Airriess, especially under the very trying conditions of his daily life.

After the service the cortege proceeded to Little Lake Cemetery where the last rites of burial were observed.

Immediate relatives were represented by his sisters-in-law, brothers-in-law and two nephews; together with other friends.

Park Street church was represented by Messrs. Follis, Matchett, Riddell and Goodwin.

Mr. Airriess was a faithful worshipper at Park Street Church having been received into membership in April 1917. He also took active interest in week night services and cottage meetings.

HOMES FOR WORKERS IS CRYING NEED IN TORONTO

Some Six-Roomed Houses Built, But Lowest Rent Is $30 Monthly.

NORTH TORONTO, Aug. 8.—"Such a thing as a workingman's home is practically impossible to secure," said a well-known North Toronto realty man yesterday, when engaged in conversation regarding the rental situation in North Toronto. There have been quite a few six-roomed houses built in the Eglinton district during the past summer, but none can be rented cheaper than $30 per month. There are very few houses for rent today in North Toronto, certainly no six or eight roomed houses. As this builder pointed out, there is a very great need for smaller houses in North Toronto that will be within reach of the labouring man's pocket book, for if a community fails to provide such accommodation it has failed in its value and services to the people.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 to 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.

The majority of farmers ino Peterborough County are more than satisfied with the crop outlook, now that they have had a chance to get in to it and see what there is. A large portion of it is already tucked away and another two or three weeks will see the finish of the harvest. The yield promises to be higher than last year.

CAN'T CHEW TOBACCO.

Among the American soldiers who have gone to France there has been a decline in the American habit of chewing tobacco, according to reports, and Y. M. C. A. Secretaries who sell tobacco in canteens in France say that modern warfare rather than prejudice is responsible for it. It's the gas mask that's done the trick, they say. A devotee of the plug is seriously embarrassed when called upon to don the gas mask. One Southern soldier is said to have put it like this: "With terbacca bitin' inside yer cheek, the ol' gas mask anchored 'tween yer teeth, mustard gas all about ye an' no chanc ter open yer mouth—war sure is hell!"—Charlotte Observer.

See Mae Marsh To-night

Playing "All Woman" at the Empire Theatre.

At the present time Mae Marsh is the moving picture idol, and she is to be seen to-night at the Empire in her latest Romantic Drama, in five acts, entitled, "All Woman." This is one of her best pictures and you will miss a treat if you do not see it.

In addition there is a fine comedy, "Skidding Hearts," in two parts, with Ora Carew featuring.

The educational series of American Game Trails, which is the picture on to-day is also a picture worth seeing.

It's a fine programme and deserves another big house to-night.

The British Troops Have Pushed Back the Centre From Five to Six Miles

Ten Thousand Prisoners and Over One Hundred Guns Captured in the First Rush—Canadians Are in the New Drive—Fighting Front Has Been Extended Several Miles.

ALL FIRST LINE OBJECTIVES REACHED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Aug. 9.— British have pushed back the centre from five to six miles. Troops engaged yesterday on the British front were the British Fourth Army, which included Canadians, Australians and the French First Army. The offensive was on a twenty-six mile front.

NO TIME GIVEN.

PARIS, Aug. 9.— No time is given the enemy now to reconstruct his forces. Foch is keeping them on the move.

ALLIED SUCCESS.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 9.—British heavily attacked the enemy south of the Ancre, to where right rests on the French, a distance of twelve miles. French also took up the battle and extended the fighting several miles. Hundreds of tanks moved with the infantry. All first line objectives were reached before eight o'clock in the morning. Ten thousand prisoners have been taken and over a hundred guns.

CONTINUED PROGRESS.

LONDON, Aug. 8.— Late afternoon despatches indicate continued progress by the British and French in the new drive.

HOME RULE BILL.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—It was announced in he House of Commons that the new Home Rule Bill will be drafted, and is likely to pass the House at the next session.

BOLSHEVIKI WILL FIGHT.

LONDON, Aug. 8. — Bolsheviki and Germans have agreed that the Germans shall advance no further into Russia and the Bolsheviki will fight the Allies and the Czech Slovaks.

300,000 SHELLS TAKEN IN ONE WOOD ALONE

Captures Show Huge Preparations By the Germans.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, August 8.—The army of General Berthelot, whose operations had a marked effect in bringing about the retreat of the Crown Prince across the Vesle by breaking down the eastern pivot of his line southwest of Rheims, effected heavy captures of material during the fighting.

In one wood alone, 300,000 shells of heavy calibre were taken, in addition to immense quantities of other material.

This army also captured several batteries of heavy and field guns, which are now being used against the enemy. Its booty comprises likewise, in addition to 378 machine guns, hundreds of light trench mortars. The army's bag of prisoners exceeded 2,000.

FOOD ITALY'S GREAT NEED.

Member of Editorial Mission Tells of People's War Sacrifices.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Italy's need for food and men from America was described yesterday at the McAlpin by the Italian editors who are visiting this country. Antonio Agresti of La Tribuna, Rome, said the food situation in Italy was grave, and that the people were looking to this country for supplies with which to maintain the army and the civilian population.

"Food and men are Italy's great needs," Mr. Agresti said. "At one time last spring we had only enough flour for a few weeks. The stringency was relieved by four ships laden with wheat, but the need still exists. The new harvest is good, but it will not supply the wants of our people.

"Italy's bread is entirely black. It has a basis of wheat, but contains many doubtful substitutes. And of this the Italian is allowed only 250 grams a day. No civilian is allowed more than 250 grams of macaroni a month, but before the war each person ate at least 100 grams a day. Olive oil is almost as scarce. The normal consumption of oil per person before the war was from fifteen to twenty grams a day. The allowance per person now is fifty grams a month.

"Two things constitute victory in the eyes of Italians," Mr. Agresti explained. "First, we must have back Italia Irredenta, and, second, we must secure justice and liberty for small nations which have hitherto been oppressed by Austria and Hungary. In asking for the return of her former provinces, Italy has no imperialistic aims. Her claims are the same as those of France to Alsace and Lorraine. Italy asks for nothing that is not Italian by location, language and history."

MRS. LUCAS FELL AT CHURCH DOOR.

DOWNEYVILLE, Aug. 8. — Mrs. Albert Lucas met with a serious accident Sunday, when she fell backwards on the church steps, cutting her head severely. It required several stitches to close the wound and Mrs. Lucas was unconscious for over six hours. So serious was her condition that her relatives at a distance were sent for, but she is recovering nicely.

Lightning's Pranks.

The recent electric storm did a lot of damage in this vicinity. All of the rural telephones were put out of order and lightning struck the barn of Mr. Patrick Meehan, leaving a hole in one end of the roof and running along the hayfork track to the other end of the building, where it split posts and rafters and knocked off some of the gable and boarding. Mr. Meehan's house was also struck, and one of the chimneys was demolished, but there was, fortunately, no fire in either case.

CANADA MARU IS PRIED OFF LEDGE

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 7.—The Canada Maru was successfully floated Monday from the rocky ledge on which she had rested near Cape Flattery for the last five days, and is now on her way up the straits under her own steam. The salvage of the Canada Maru is one of the most remarkable feats ever accomplished in salvage history on this coast, as the liner was considered a total loss and had been practically abandoned by experts who had been working on the ship from the time she piled up.

AN ARMY OF 5,000,000 FOR THE UNITED STATES

Carrying Out Policy Agreed Upon at Military Conference—Men Given Exemption Are Not Likely to Be Re-Examined.

3,000,000 NOW ARMED

Washington, August 9. — In urging enactment of the Administration manpower bill extending draft ages from 18 to 45 years, General March, chief of Staff, told the Senate Military Committee that the War Department plans an army of approximately five million men to be raised as soon as possible.

While realizing the importance of the measure, General March said he did not believe it necessary to recall Congress before the present recess bill expires on August 24, providing the bill could be reported at that time.

About July 30, General March said, the United States reached a decision to enlarge its military programme to carry out the policies agreed upon at the recent inter-allied conference at Paris to speed up prosecution of the war and to bring it to an early conclusion.

While about three million men are now under arms, army officials think there should be approximately five million men at home and in France. In order not to disturb the present draft system and to avoid calling men who had been given exemption, extension of the draft ages is necessary.

From General March's testimony and other information received the committee has gained the impression that while all men between the ages of 18 and 45 would be subject to military duty under the new law, it is proposed that those between 18 and 20 years of age shall be kept in this country until the last.

Upon the suggestion of Senator Wadsworth that the draft system be extended to the navy, Senator Chamberlain announced that either Secretary Daniels or Admiral Benson would be asked to appear to-morrow before the committee to discuss the advisability of the subject.

Senator Chamberlain said he was not sure just when the committee would be able to report out the bill. Secretary Baker, who is now out of the city, is expected to return Saturday and the committee desires to hear him before taking any action.

General March said the shipment of men overseas would be continued according to the programme now in effect for the present.

STAR ENEMY AIRMAN LOST WITH ZEPPELIN

CAPT. STRASSER AND CREW PERISH WHEN CRAFT IS SHOT DOWN AFTER RAID.

Amsterdam, August 9. — Captain Strasser, one of Germany's most successful squadron commanders in Zeppelin attacks, and the entire crew of the Zeppelin which led the attack toward the British East coast Monday night, perished when the dirigible was shot down over the North Sea. An official communication from Berlin dealing with the attempted raid on the East English coast was received here to-day. It said the raiders caused heavy damage in bombing attacks, but that Strasser and his crew probably met with a heroic death.

The text of the communication follows:

"Monday night one of our airship squadrons, commanded by Captain Strasser, who so often has successfulwrought heavy damage on the east ocas t Eglnod, by ffovneaeciedT coast of England by effective bombing attacks, particularly on Boston and Norwich and the fortifications at the mouth of the Humber.

"With his brave crew, Capt. Strasser probably met with a heroic death. All the other airships participating in the attack have returned without losses or damage, in spite of strong resistance."

Had Rather Take a Beating Than Work

Toronto Man Felt Drowsy All the Time Before Taking Tanlac—Feels Fine Now.

"When I began taking Tanlac I was actually too weak and rundown to stand on my feet or even to do a lick of work, but I am now putting in full time on my job and feeling betbetter than ever," said William Comstive, who is employed in the ammunition department of the Fairbanks-Morse Company and lives at 34 Rosedale Avenue, Toronto, the other day.

"My trouble started about four years ago," he cotinued, when I first noticed that my appetite was failing. I soon got so I didn't want to eat a thing and would bring half my lunch back home, and more than once I have actually gone for two whole days without eating a bite. What little I did manage to force down would soon sour on my stomach and cause me to belch up so much gas and undigested food that it would almost turn me sick. I had a dull pain right in the pit of my stomach most of the time and was so badly constipated that I just had to take something for it all the time. I felt mean and drowsy and good for nothing, and sometimes would actually rather have taken a beating than go to my work. I have been on the night shift now for some time, and after knocking off in the mornings I would feel so exhausted that I could hardly drag one foot after the other. I was getting worse all the time, and when at last I became so weak that I had to stop work entirely for a couple of days I knew it was time I was doing something to save me from having a breakdown.

"I had been reading so much about Tanlac that I decided to try it and sent right away for a bottle. Before I had finished it my appetite came back, and I was eating and enjoying my meals like my normal person and that misery in my stomach was completely gone. That mean, tired feeling left me, too, and I was back on my job again. I have taken only two bottles so far and feel just fine all over. Why, I can work all night now and don't feel tired a bit when I knock off to go home. And it has made the greatest difference in the way I can turn out my work, too, for now it is a real pleasure and I can do anything without a bit of trouble. They say that a friend in need is a friend indeed, and that is exactly what Tanlac has been to me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

QUIT SEARCH FOR MAJ. SHARP'S BODY

Foul Play Theory Discounted by Local Officers—Dominion Officers Asked For—An Unconfirmed Rumour

KINGSTON, Aug. 9.—During the past twenty-four hours there have been no new developments in the mysterious disappearance of Major W. J. S. Sharp. Every effort to locate the missing man is being kept up, but as the hours pass nothing new is brought to light. It was learned today that the search for his body among the weeds at the deserted spot where his uniform was found has been abandoned, and hour by hour the evidence produced by the action of the bloodhound Sandy is becoming more important. Many friends of the missin gman now incline to the the missing man now incline to the ers of Cataraqui Bay. In fact a rumor that Major Sharp had been seen in Montreal gained currency about the streets to-day, but no one in position to know could be found to say that it had any foundation.

DISCOUNT THEORY

Local members of the Dominion police who have been working on the case from the first discount entirely the theory of foul play. They point out that there was absolutely no trace on the neatly piled clothing of any struggle, that the boots were neatly polished, and that no part of the ground about the spot where the clothing was found gave a single evidence that a struggle had taken place it seems impossible, they assert, that foul play could have happened without leaving some trace, and that if it had, more than one trail would have been left which would have been picked up by the bloodhound Sandy.

This is the first instance in this district in which the services of a bloodhound have been used in connection with police work, and many who are familiar with the actions and the work of these famous dogs are convinced by the actions of Sandy on Sunday morning last that little information can be gained by a search along the river bank. This seems to be now admitted by the authorities by the abandonment of the search there.

The disappearance remains as much a mystery as ever, but the greatest efforts to uncover the whereabouts of the missing man will be maintained by his friends and the authorities as well.

"GONE WEST."

(By Mrs. Helen Combes.)

"Gone west," we say with tender reverence, speaking
Of those for whom thus early sets life's sun,
Whose souls, realeased from strife, at last are seeking
A quiet surcease from their work well done.

Death is an ugly word, and so we name them
As those who venture forth on some far quest,
Knowing full well our hearts again will claim them,
Not lost, but for a little while "gone west."

Note.—The English no longer speak of their soldiers fallen on the field of battle as dead. Instead they refer to them tenderly as having "gone west."

Both corn and oats were on the upgrade yesterday on the strength chiefly of the earlier reports, which spoke of considerable damage to crops due to the prevailing heat wave, and also in anticipation of the Government crop report to be issued later in the day. Subsequently the report came out and confirmed reports of great loss from former estimates, but at the same time pointed out that the crops would be heavy despite the losses. Rain was reported in Missouri and other States, which tended to check any very substantial advances.

In the Ontario crops section today's quotations show a big change in the quotations for the new crop barley, and also for new crop oats, the changes being in the downward direction, though largely nominal only.

WOMAN SAVED MUCH SUFFERING

By taking Friend's Advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

West Plains, Mo.—"I was all run down in health, had indigestion and terrible cramps every month so I was unable to do anything. I had tried every doctor in West Plains, also every remedy I could think of, without relief. One day when I was suffering greatly a friend was at my house and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' So I did, and through it, I found relief from my suffering and I really believe it saved my life. It does not seem as though I can say enough in praise of this wonderful medicine for the health it has brought me."—Miss DORA LEE HALL, West Plains, Mo.

Perhaps it may seem an extravagant statement to say that this great remedy saved a life; but women like Mrs. Hall, to whom it has brought health, appreciate the danger and suffering they have escaped too well to doubt it! All who suffer should try it. Why risk life and health without it?

The Woman Who Changed

THE RESULTS

CHAPTER CXL.

The next morning after George and Mr. Babcock had left for the office, Mrs. Babcock remarked:

"I know you are going to be busy this morning so please do not think of me. Just let me take care of myself."

I was wondering how I should entertain her, and also attend to my plans for my dinner party. Her thoughtfulnes left me free. And yet I did not exactly like to feel that she had nothing to do all the morning.

"I have some things to attend to," I admitted, "but instead of remaining in wouldn't you like to have the car and take a ride?"

"Yes, thank you, I should enjoy it very much. Do you suppose Mrs. Reeves would lend me your little namesake for an hour?"

"Indeed she would!" I replied pleased that Mrs. Babcock should propose it. Perhaps Evelyn would go, too, if you would care to have her?"

"That would be delightful."

I immediately telephoned Evelyn, and she gladly accepted Mrs. Babcock's invitation.

"She is so lovely and I haven't a thing to keep me at home, this morning," Evelyn replied.

After Mrs. Babcock had gone, I went into the kitchen and Mary and I discussed the dinner. Of course everything was practically ready but I was leaving nothing to chance. It must be as perfect as possible.

GEORGE TELEPHONES.

Just as the flowers came George telephoned:

"Julia Collins is back! Hadn't you better ask her?"

"But, George—my plans are all made—the table"—

"I think you had better ask her! The table can easily be extended. If it makes an odd number get Gray too."

"Very well, I will call her up," I turned from the telephone rebelliously. I didn't want Julia Collins. My list was very complete with just the people I thought Mr. and Mrs. Babcock would enjoy meeting, or those whom for business reasons, we were inviting.

"It's a pity she couldn't have stayed away until it was over," I said to myself, as I gave central her number.

"I am giving a dinner to-night, Mrs. Collins. I just heard that you had returned. If you will accept this eleventh hour invitation, I should like you to come."

"Indeed, I will come! and thank you. It was good of you to ask me."

With the feeling of a distasteful duty done I then called up Merton Gray:

"Oh, Merton, will you be real good to me again, and come to dinner to-night? I didn't mean to have you; I have invited an entirely different set—older people most of them. But Julia Collins has come back; she knows the Babcocks, and I want you to come to make an even number."

"I am at your disposal, fair lady. I feel that I owe Mrs. Collins a vote of thanks for coming home and so securing me an invitation."

A PERFECT DINNER.

The day flew by on wings, so busy was I. My dinner was to be at eight o'clock. When I went into the dining room for the last time before I went up to dress it looked so lovely that I could not repress an exclamation of delight.

"It is charming," George said. I had not known he was behind me, and so was startled. "I am growing very proud of you."

"Wait until you see the bills!" I said gayly. I felt happy, through and through. His praise meant so much to me.

My guests all arrived on time and my dinner was a perfect success. Not a hitch anywhere. I had enlisted Mary's best efforts by telling her it would react on me, if everything was not just as it should be; and had put James on his mettle by praising the service at Mrs. Babcock's home.

George fairly beamed, all through the meal. I had never seen him more gracious more entertaining. He was a perfect host at all times; yet to-night I thought I detected something a little different in him and it puzzled me—until it came to me, all suddenly, that it was a something in his attitude towards me, the hostess. A new deference, a pride he never had shown so plainly before. Everyone else was so gay as well, that I forgot my animosity toward Julia Collins, and laughed at her witticisms as heartily as the rest.

"You certainly are a wonderful hostess," she whispered as we rose from the table, leaving the men to smoke and talk business if they wished. "I am quite jealous of you."

I thought it only fair; I had always been jealous of her. But I only smiled and assured her that I should never usurp her place.

The dinner guests all left about midnight. When we were at last alone, George kissed me and said:

"Your dinner, everything, went off perfectly. I can see that you are going to shine as a hostess. I was delighted with you and all that you did."

To-morrow: Alone once more.

SHIPBUILDING IN HALIFAX.

New Industry That Has Been Fostered by the Submarines.

Shipbuilding on a large and modern scale will be undertaken at Halifax, a result of an arrangement announced by Hon. C. C. Ballantyne Minister of Marine. Since the Government decided to embark on a shipbuilding policy to help meet the shortage of merchant shipping Hon. Mr. Ballantyne has taken steps to bring about the establishment of a plate mill at Sydney, Cape Breton, and has been engaged in negotiations looking to the erection of a modern shipbuilding and ship-repairing plant at a point on the Canadian Atlantic seaboard. These negotiations have now borne fruit.

The present drydock at Halifax, which was slightly damaged by the Mont Blanc explosion last winter, has been acquired by the Government, and will without delay be equipped with up-to-date machinery for the repairing of ships of the largest size. The property immediately adjoining the drydock and known as the Acadia Sugar Refinery property, has been acquired by the new shipbuilding enterprise, to be known as Halifax Shipbuilders, Limited. There three shipbuilding berths will be laid down, on which ships of approximately 10,000 tons may be constructed.

The Minister of Marine has announced that plans, specifications, etc., for the first three ships were already receiving the attention of his officers, and keels would be put down just as soon as the ways can be made ready to receive them.

He expressed the opinion that the first of these ships, which would be the largest hitherto built in Canada, would be ready for commission inside of fifteen months.

It is understood that the principals in this new enterprise are interests represented by Mr. James Carruthers, Mr. J. W. Norcross, president and vice-president and general manager, respectively, of the Canada Steamship Lines, Ltd., and Mr. R. M. Wolvin, president of the Montreal Transportation Co.

They contemplate an expenditure of $3,000,000 on plant and equipment. The only assistance the Government is giving or promising is the placing of a limited number of contracts at fixed prices for the construction of modern steel freighters of the highest class, and of about 10,000

ONE LIGHTNING BOLT KILLS THREE DRIVING HORSES

EPHRATA, Wash., August 8.—Lightning killed Don Williamson J. Higgins and Alfred Powers while the men were driving teams on their way home, about six miles northwest of Ephrata.

Roy Billingsley, a boy who had been riding on the seat with Powers, had jumped to the roadside and was walking alongside the Powers team when the bolt came. Billingsley was thrown about fifteen feet, but was not badly hurt.

Higgins was standing behind the seat of the waggon when struck and was killed instantly.

Williamson was thrown from his waggon by the bolt. He got to his feet and walked a short distance before falling dead.

Powers appears to have been killed instantly. He was thrown across the seat and bruised and badly burned.

A MODERN SLAVE MART

On a Certain Day In Each Week In Fez and In Marrakesh Men, Women and Children Are Offered For Sale—Auction Begins With Public Prayer and Then the Buyers Examine the "Goods."

I had for many years had an idea that slavery to-day was dead, even in Africa, so far as the buying and selling of men and women were concerned. But I know different now. And I suppose my mistake arose from having heard so often when a boy at school about the "Abolition of Negro Slavery," the "Putting down of the Traffic in Slaves," etc., etc., with sundry eulogiums on Britain's glory thereat! However, as I have just said, my eyes were opened three years or so ago, when I spent some time in Morocco, says a writer in a London magazine.

I do not intend here and now to describe at length the mysterious city of Fez. There is the new town and the old one, respectively named Fez-el-Jedid and Fez-Bali. The streets are very tortuous and extremely narrow, as in most Moorish towns; there are many fine gardens, especially those belonging to the Sultan. Of course, all the houses are flat-roofed, and generally of three stories; the number of mosques is great, and many are very beautiful.

Under the guidance of my astute and clever Moor, who seemed to know all sorts of folk in Fez, both high and low, and got leave for me to view many things I should certainly not have viewed otherwise, I had two or three very interesting days in Fez. But the chief attraction to me—for it was the one thing I was never likely to see outside Morocco, was the slave market.

Here, on a stated day each week, you can buy almost any sort of slave you may wish. They stand in rows, or in small gangs—men, women, and children, though the two latter classes predominate, and the woman-class is largest of all. Sometimes they are fully dressed, generally they are not. For when a Moor wants to purchase a slave-girl he usually is very far from being willing to buy "a pig in a poke," as we say in England. He has a keen eye for appraising a good female figure and beautiful features, whether white, black, or copper-colored. And he is not giving any big price for an old or incapable slave, even of the woman kind, let alone of the male type.

My guide, friendly and somewhat old acquaintance as he was, could not be got to say where the slaves came from. He professed utter ignorance of this, beyond saying that caravans brought them from across the desert! Sometimes the slaves are sold privately, and sometimes by auction, for there are regular "auctioneers" engaged in this business, and the slave goes to the highest bidder. There is often strong competition for a really fine-looking girl, of from sixteen to thirty, and the bidders often get excited over this, not a common thing for Moors in most matters.

The buyers walk leisurely round the market, surveying the slaves offered for sale, feeling their limbs, and examining them, much as men buying horses or cattle do in our land. And the slaves themselves, for the most part, are sullen, or at least indifferent, though now and then you, watching closely, may see the scornful curl of the lip of a young woman, as some fat, old, ugly Moorish leers at her when about to bid, or feels her arms and body in order to place a value on her. And sudden flashes of eyes and quivers of lovely nostrils prove that these slaves have not lost all interest of feeling, despite their wretched plight.

It is something, however, to be able to record that, for the most part, once they are bought, the slaves are generally well-treated. The Moor does not like to lose the full value for money spent; also the authorities, so far as they can keep an eye on the women in a house, and, whilst allowing the Moorish master a very wide latitude indeed with regard to his wife, or wives, and female slaves, they do not allow him to ill-treat even the latter on the lines of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." And so the slave, once purchased, whether meant to live in Fez or in a distant part of Morocco, generally settles down to a more or less prosaic and satisfactory life, as an inmate of the Moorish household.

These slave markets at Fez and Marrakesh, known as the "Sok-el-Guezel," are unique of their kind in Northern Africa. A visit to the latter market was at Fez. The ground of the "Soks" is strewn with clean sand, and the walls enclosing the Sok have several recesses, covered so as to shelter buyers and spectators from the hot sun. The slaves at Marrakesh stand within little places in an arcade, about the middle of the market; and one custom obtains there which was not in evidence at Fez, or at least I did not see it namely, when the auctioneers wish to make a woman slave appear specially attractive, after first showing her more or less a la the Garden of Eden, they dress her up in really fine clothes, borrowed for the occasion, ere they offer her for sale, to show prospective buyers what a beauty she would make, as an additional wife or inmate of the harem.

It certainly made me think furiously, as the French say, to find that the Dllals (auctioneers) began the sale with public prayer.

The auctioneer lead the slave by the hand round a circle, for general inspection. After a bid is made the auctioneer tries to get a higher one, by constantly repeating this bid, and enlarging on the beauty, or strength, or capability of the slave.

Pour boiling water over raisins, and let them stand a minute; then pour off and you can pinch the seed off at each end.

THE OLD TRADE DOLLAR.

And the Exact Ratio of Gold to Silver in the Year 1870.

Three mining engineers were gathered together the other day, and the question as to the value of an old trade dollar came up. Strange as it may seem, no one knew its value, and there was considerable haziness as to the exact value of an ounce of pure gold or of the old fashioned value of an ounce of silver, says a correspondent in the Engineering and Mining Journal. Calculations which I made seemed to indicate that the ratio of gold to silver in 1870 was not exactly 16 to 1. Possibly it may be of interest to the profession to know the exact figures which I have received from the assayer of the mint bureau, United States treasury.

Coinage value of one ounce pure gold is $20.6718434025. A convenient fact, easy to remember, regarding this figure is that forty-three ounces of coin gold, 900 fine, are worth $800.

Coin value of an ounce of silver 1870	$1.2929
Coinage value of a trade dollar in 1870	1.01815
The coinage value of a Mexican dollar in 1870	1.0159

The trade dollar was coined so that it might be used in the orient on a parity with the Mexican dollar, which it slightly exceeded in value. The Mexican dollar, no longer coined, weighed 417.74 grains and was 902.7 fine, slightly in excess of the United States fineness of 900.

In 1870 the ratio of gold to silver was not 16 to 1, but 15.9884— to 1. This silver ratio has been discontinued, and the ratio for the present subsidiary coinage is 14.95349 to 1.

12 MEATLESS WEEKS ANNOUNCED BY BAVARIANS.

ZURICH, Aug. 8.—Von Brettrech, the Bavarian Minister of the Interior, announces in Parliament 12 meatless weeks to save the needful 300,000 heads of cattle. He says that the milk and fats supply is unsatisfactory and the whole food supply is seriously endangered by profiteers who continue to hide food. He denies, however, that the Bavarian food supply is desperate, and says that rumours calling it black are lies.

Famous Hymn Was Romance

THE poem, "There were ninety and nine," etc., from the Presbyterian Hymn Book, is the most popular one of this generation, and hymns of the past English-speaking person this continent and that of Europe. The young enter heartily into the swing of the tune, while older persons look back over life's associations and remember many a "lost sheep" that had strayed "away on the mountains wild and bare, away from the tender Shepherd's care, ere He found His sheep that was lost."

How many prodigals have wandered far from home, and yet, in a quiet hour, have heard the beautiful words pathetically sung by some sweet voice, "There arose a cry to the gate of heaven, rejoice, I have found my sheep," and at once decided to lead a better life.

Probably few people even in the busy town of Fergus have known that the "wandering sheep" about whom the authoress, Miss Elizabeth C. Clephane, wrote, was her only brother, and that his remains rest in the old cemetery at the rear of St. Andrew's Church, Fergus.

Anyone paying a visit of exploration recently to this quaint enclosure with its stone "dike" will find a marble slab bearing the following inscription, quite close to the rear of the church:

In Memory of GEORGE,
Oldest son of Andrew Clephane, Esq.,
Late Sheriff of Fifeshire, Scotland,
Ob. 2 May, 1851.
Ae. 32.

Just adjoining is another stone for a young man whose career ended very suddenly in the bloom of early manhood, and which shows the age of "God's acre," where so many have returned to the dust from which they were created:

Sacred to the memory
of
William Renny, Esq.,
Son of Alexander Renny Tadyour, Esq.,
of
Drumfield, County of Fife, Scotland,
who departed this life
October 14, 1845,
aged 25 years.

Highly esteemed and regretted.

This young man took his mother's family name to enable him to inherit some wealth in the old land.

The Misses Young have unmistakable evidence that young Clephane was the brother of the author of "The Ninety-and-nine," and was the "wandering sheep" about whom she so pathetically wrote, for was he not an only brother?

Miss Mary Baker, who was later Mrs. Thos. A. Young, mother of the above ladies, along with three sisters, came to Canada on the "Souter Johnnie," the vessel arriving in port on the 16th of October, 1842, she marrying two days afterwards. On this boat was George Henry Clephane, a handsome, fair young chap, over six feet tall, and also a young man who afterwards became Dr. Daniels, nicknamed "Bones," who later went to India, and died of cholera the day he should have sailed for Canada.

Accompanying these was Henry Hardy, afterwards Dr. Hardy, who died in Toronto of blood-poisoning, and Fred Pew, later a surveyor, who died near Hamilton. All were young men from good families and well connected, Clephane being a "remittance" man, and really hastened his end by drink. He was very fond of a sorrel horse, and the Misses Young have a most beautiful riding whip said to have been young Clephane's. The handle is of brass roughened as a seal, below which is a hunter and hounds, the stock itself being pleated leather.

George Henry Clephane died in Dr. Mutch's house. Mr. Young knew the Clephane family quite well, and the daughters remember distinctly the above facts, which they often heard their father relate.

Mr. James Ross, one of the oldest residents, can corroborate the above statements. He is quite active, although in his 93rd year, and gives every prospect of being the second centenarian for Fergus. He was a carpenter by trade, and still does considerable light work along that line.

"Just as young in spirit as ever," he replied to an inquiry as to his health, "but the body is weaker."

Mr. Ross came to Fergus "in September, '49, just the night before the Fergus show," he remarked.

"Did you know a young man who lived here over sixty-six years ago, by the name of Clephane?" we asked.

"Yes, quite distinctly," he replied, and then corroborated most of the statements previously made by the Misses Young.

"There is no doubt whatever that he was a brother of Miss Elizabeth C. Clephane, who wrote 'The Ninety-and-Nine,' and that he was the lost sheep," said Mr. Ross.

"Rejoice, for the Lord brings back His own."

Tribute to Canada.

Canada has done wonderfully well thus far with its war finance, and there is every reason to expect that she will keep this pace to the end. Canada is enormously rich in undeveloped resources and her promises to pay are among the best securities in the world. As a matter of fact, there is practically no difference between Canada and the United States so far as financial responsibility is concerned. After the war there is bound to be a rapid development of Canada's resources with great increase in the visible wealth.—Buffalo Express.

STUDIES FROM MOVIES.

The Deposed Emperor of China Has a Novel School.

The dethroned Emperor of the Celestial Empire—still a mere child—is permitted to retain his full rule over state in private life.

He is living with a dozen or so of very exalted relations of the Imperial clan in a great country palace some distance outside Peking, and is being educated almost entirely by picture films.

"The boy," says a Chinese maquess of the third degree, involuntarily inclining his head as he referred to his fellow emperor, "is a fine little fellow, and could be very happy if circumstances would permit of his living in Europe on the enormous income which still remains to him and has been guaranteed by the Republic.

"But, unfortunately, the Imperial one must be jealously guarded and preserved from outward communion with ordinary people and especially from 'foreign devils.' Otherwise most extraordinary revolution is occurring in what is the usual education of an imperial prince of China, and particularly in that of a young emperor," continued Mr. Thang, "that there are other lands outside China, and of equal, even greater, power; that there are a fair number of kings and emperors on this earth, and that they are not barabarians, as was ever the creed in China in regard to other nations, but might be considered by an unprejudiced mind as passably civilized. These things are being impressed upon the boy-emperor largely by kinema pictures.

"Hundreds of films have been imported into China showing European cities, and also Japanese and Indian scenes. The interior as well as the exterior of houses and palaces are depicted, and everyday life of prince and peasant, with all the grades between, have been filmed for the imperial teaching. The emperor is being made acquainted with the faces of monarchs and statesmen and of other leading men of the world outside China.

"The boy is shown pictures of marching armies and of fighting ships of every description. He is not bored with technical scenes, first, because he is too young; and, second, because wonders of machinery or intricate manufacture are hardly novelties to the Chinese mind.

"But the boy is being taught the history and habits of Europeans and many other things which, if he lives, may inspire him some day to place himself and his acquirements at the service of his country.

"What may happen then is, as you say, on the knees of the gods—we say that also; but if ever the millions upon millions of China become civilized and capable of taking the initiative like Europeans—well, there will indeed be something of a Yellow Peril.

"Chinamen, properly armed, properly drilled, and instilled with the lust of conquest, could sweep Europe even as the Tartars, who became Teutons, did in the days of Attila. I am an educated Chinaman, was sent to Europe for schooling. Fortunately for 'foreign devils'—perhaps for us also, you are thinking,—there are not many of us who are educated."

Her Choice.

They were sisters-in-law and reasonably well disposed toward each other. One was the mother of George, aged six months, and the other was the mother of Marian, aged six months and four days.

"Marian does not seem to grow very fast," said the mother of George, with a suggestion of commiseration in her tones. "George is much taller"—(height being measured in inches).

"Perhaps he is," replied the mother of Marian coldly, "but Marian weighs more."

"Oh, well," responded the sister-in-law, with a smile of high bred superiority, "of course I should not wish George to be gross."

The Green Sailor.

Mark Twain was once talking about a play that had failed.

"No wonder it failed," he said. "It's author was a greenhorn. He knew no more of stagecraft that young Tom Bowling knew of sailoring when he shipped before the mast.

"Greenhorn Tom, you know, being told to go aloft one dark, wet night, started up the rigging with a lantern and an umbrella."

Most Important.

"The customs inspector evidently realized that we were important people."

"So?"

"Yes; he passed some baggage with hardly a glance, but when he came to us he was careful to go through everything."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Leading Part.

"My brother has a leading part in that drama."

"What part?"

"He leads a horse across the stage in the last act."

Not Yet Acquainted.

"And what do you know about Moses?"

"Please, teacher, it's my first Sunday here and I don't know anybody."—London Punch.

Fundamentally there is no such thing as private action. All actions are public in themselves or in their consequences.—Bovee.

Not Worrying.

"Oh, Luella! There's a man just fallen off that next pier, and I think it's your husband."

"Well, dear, don't get excited; we'll soon know. If he doesn't come up it's probably Jim—he can't swim, you know."—Life.

900 Huns—Our Consuls.

(London Globe.)

Lord Morris, formerly Prime Minister of Newfoundland, in urging the importance of trade, said that before the war broke out we had a thousand Consuls, and of these 900 were Germans. That was a fact, and he challenged anyone to disprove it. If the German Emperor had done nothing else, he had proved, as no number of conferences or anything else could prove, the complete unity of the British Empire.

FOOD SUPPLIES AFTER THE WAR

ANY movement that has for its object the encouragement of the live stock and allied industries is worthy of commendation at the present time. For many years after the conclusion of the war the people of Europe will be largely dependent upon the farmers of the Dominion of Canada for their meat and dairy supplies. The replenishment of the depleted herds of Europe will also cause a demand for live stock on the American continent such as has never been experienced before. It follows then that the farmer who is maintaining or increasing the number of his live stock at the present time is the one most likely to benefit by after war conditions.

Western Canada, despite its enviable record for grain crops, is preeminently a live stock country. In addition to having sufficient land suitable for the growing of grain crops to supply much of the needs of the world, the three prairie provinces: Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, are capable of supporting millions of cattle, sheep and hogs. Many of the settlers, however, have found it difficult to get a start, or have not been convinced of the possibilities of live stock, but these obstacles are being gradually overcome by the assistance of the provincial government, and such companies as the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Although still in an experimental stage the schemes that have been adopted in Manitoba and Alberta are proving very successful. Through its Department of Agriculture the Manitoba Government buys cows and sells them on credit to farmers. During the first year or so some 3,500 cows were supplied in this manner to farmers. Almost the whole of them went to one part of the province and the success of the scheme is seen in the fact that in these districts four new creameries and two cheese factories have been established. Besides, the creameries of Winnipeg also report larger shipments of milk and cream from this territory. At the present time the government is not able to deliver cows as fast as applications for them are received and has now orders on hand for about 3,000 animals—a fact which shows the popularity of the scheme.

The plan adopted by the Government of Alberta is somewhat different from that of Manitoba in its method of operation. It is embodied in an act of parliament, which, briefly stated, provides that any five or more farmers may make a joint promissory note for an amount not to exceed five hundred dollars for each signer for a term of five years. The Provincial Treasurer guarantees the payment of these notes. The money thus borrowed must be invested in female cattle, except that the borrowers may if they choose invest not more than ten per cent. of their total amount in a pure bred bull. The cattle must be branded with the government brand, and, with their female progeny, remain the property of the government until the note is paid. The male progeny becomes the property of the purchaser immediately. This scheme has been in operation a little more than a year, and already more than seven thousand head of cows have been placed in the hands of farmers. Not only has the scheme enabled them to increase their incomes considerably and enhance the prosperity of the province, but it has also shown the possibilities of live stock in the country, with the result that they are being acquired in increasing numbers by farmers outside of the plan as well.

By reason of the enormous crop of fodder that can be raised in the irrigation districts that are being developed by the Canadian Pacific Railway in Southern Alberta, the raising of live stock is one of the most profitable branches of farming there. This is recognized by the company and in order to encourage the practice of mixed farming among settlers on irrigated land, it assists buyers of its lands, if they are able to comply with certain conditions, by advancing live stock to the value of $1,000, on a cash payment of twenty per cent, credit being given for the balance.

All these schemes are proving of great benefit to the settler in Western Canada. Their full value to the country will not be apparent for a number of years, but meanwhile their influence is demonstrating to the settler that the possibilities of live stock raising in Western Canada are equally as good, if not better even, than the growing of grain.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"I Don't Want to Get Well"

By KITTY PARSONS

Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

After a three days' lapse from consciousness, Dick Pennock woke up in a base hospital, somewhere in France. He ached miserably and his head was on fire, but he had a dim remembrance of one thing, and put out his hand gropingly. There was nothing there. He wondered if there ever had been—his thoughts were so confused. He was a long way from home, and he thought Vida had forgotten him, too.

Pennock's wounded arm was slightly better, but that night his fever went up and for a long time he was delirious. And through all the days and nights that followed, he called for Vida continually.

"I will be Vida, Doctor Daudet," announced the little nurse with the red hair and the laughing eyes. "The poor boy will die—he is so lonely for someone from home, and I can pretend. I know all about this girl—she does not love him. But he need not know it yet, and afterwards when he is strong, we can tell him."

After a long time, he opened his eyes and looked at her in a puzzled way.

"Vida, you kiss me, Vida," he asked her.

The face was so white and drawn and the plea so pitiful, that the girl knelt beside the bed, and kissed him gently on the forehead—as a mother might kiss her young son.

"You are so beautiful, Vida, and so kind," he told her. His tired lids drooped again and he fell asleep.

For a long time she stayed there, then at last, the hand that held hers relaxed, and she slipped exhausted to the floor. The doctor found her there and carried her to a couch, where she slept dreamlessly for three hours.

"I am so sorry to wake you," said the head nurse, as she bent over her, "but your patient keeps calling for someone and we can't seem to help him at all. Will you come?"

Patty was on her feet instantly, and hurried to him. She saw at once that he was now perfectly rational, for he immediately asked her where Vida was.

"She had to go away," she told him gently, wishing she could tell him the truth.

"She was so changed," he went on. "She was so gentle and she kissed me—I don't see why she went away if she kissed me." He looked at the nurse questioningly, and to his surprise her face flushed crimson.

"He's much better," the doctor told her late that afternoon, and sent her off to get some well-earned sleep.

When she went back to her duties, late that night, she found Dick flushed with fever, looking about the room anxiously. At sight of her he lay back on his pillow with a sigh of contentment.

"I knew you'd come," he exulted. "That red-headed nurse lied to me—I knew you hadn't gone."

The doctor winked at the nurse over the patient's head.

The patient took Patty's hand. "Tell me she lied, Vida," he begged.

Patty dropped his hand and her face flushed with anger. So this was to be her reward—he would probably hate her.

"Yes, she lied," she agreed, and slipped her hand back in his.

"I love you," he breathed with a new ring in his voice.

There was a long silence and then he went to sleep.

Patricia Carol sat in the same position till she fell asleep. When she woke up, she saw her patient staring at her intently.

"Were you Vida?" he asked her directly, and she told him the truth.

"I was Vida, and the red-headed nurse all in one. You were not over complimentary in your delirium."

He laughed happily. "I'll tell you the real truth and you can hate me or not—I was no more delirious than you are—just at that moment. I just wanted to have you sit with me and hold my hand. Please forgive me. I don't really care for Vida, anyway—I thought I did, but I was wrong. I care very much about a very different girl—with red hair."

Patty was scarlet again. She never could get over the blushing habit, try as she would.

"I'll send another nurse to you now that you're so much better," she declared professionally.

"If you do, I'll jump out of bed and have a relapse right off. Do you want me to die?"

"Don't be foolish. I'll come back in a little while, but you don't deserve to have me." She walked towards the door.

"Do you know the song: 'I Don't Want To Get Well,'" he called after her.

"I've heard of it," very distantly.

"Well, when you read all the words of the chorus, you'll know what's the matter with me now. Will you let me tell you when you come back?"

No answer.

"When will you come back?"

"I shall be back, sir," she told him, "just as soon as I can find the doctor to come with me and tell me if you are perfectly sane."

"Well, if you don't come soon, I won't be." And the red-headed nurse disappeared down the hall, laughing happily.

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

ELECTIONS IN FRANCE.

They Are Held on Sunday and Rarely Finished In One Day.

In France elections are held on Sunday. Universal manhood suffrage is the rule. Every Frenchman of twenty-one years of age, on proof of six months' residence, is a legal voter at the elections to the chamber, saving only soldiers on active service and others disqualified for bankruptcy and criminal reasons. Because of the number of candidates the first day's polling in many districts is not final. Where no candidate receives an absolute majority, a second election is held. It often happens that from one-third to one-fourth of the elections for deputies are not finally decided until the second poll, when not infrequently one or more candidates in a district have withdrawn.

The polling begins at 8 in the morning and lasts until 6 in the evening. Instead of regularly appointed clerks and election officials, three volunteers take charge of the "urn" in which the ballots are deposited and conduct the proceedings. One of the penalties of being first to appear is the likelihood of being impressed into service as one of the assessors, of whom two, both independent voters, must serve with the "president of the ballot." The counting of the ballots is also done by volunteers called for from among the electors.

In the absence of the party system it is difficult strictly to classify the candidates. In a general way they range themselves in groups around certain well known political leaders.—New York World.

George Eliot Seldom Read.

George Eliot was a writer almost omnipotent in her power to charm at once the great multitude and the austere critic of her time.

She was taken more seriously than any writer of today ever has been or ever will be taken.

Yet to the great bulk of educated criticism of today George Eliot has become a writer unreadable in herself and negligible as a critical illustration.

Her character drawing appears to be singularly wooden, her books without any form, her style entirely pedestrian and her solemnity intolerable.

And it is probable that it was this very solemnity that gave to her works all the qualities that make them to men in touch with the life of today so entirely unreadable, so exactly like so many heavy cakes.

George Eliot was, in fact, a great figure. She was great enough to impose herself upon her day; she probably never sought, though she certainly found, the popularity of sensationalism.

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

How We Go to Sleep.

Sleep begins in its first phase by a state of distraction, which brings on states of absentmindedness, accompanied always by numerous and separate hallucinations, closely connected with the length of the absentminded states immediately afterward. In a second phase, these states of distraction pass into a very delicate motor disturbance, due to the absence of parallelism in the axes of the eyes or by the deviation of their conjugate movements, says the Family Doctor. Finally, in a third and final phase, which indicates the very near approach of actual sleep, the vasomotor system seems to conform to laws very different from those that regulate its mechanism during waking hours.

Under a Banyan Tree.

The first parliament house of the Boers was under a banyan tree, under which the rulers of the Transvaal gathered in the early days of the republic to discuss questions affecting the country, and the tree became known as the "first volksraad of the Transvaal." ADHESIVE POSTAGE STAMPS.

The First Crude Ones That Were Issued by Great Britain.

The adhesive postage stamp had its origin in England as a direct outcome of the postal reforms introduced by Sir Rowland Hill, whose master mind created not only the inestimable boon of penny postage, but the means by which it was carried into effect—the adhesive postage stamps.

At the time of the passing of the uniform penny postage act in 1839 all postal charges were paid in cash (usually on delivery), involving an enormous amount of bookkeeping on the part of the postoffice, which would have been increased a hundredfold when the reduced rates of postage came into force but for the suggestion of the great postal reformer for "a bit of paper just large enough to bear the stamp and coated at the back with a glutinous wash," being subsequently embodied in the famous one penny black postage label and its consort, the twopence blue, which made their debut in May, 1840, and were the progenitors of all adhesive postage stamps.

For three short years Great Britain enjoyed a monopoly of this novel and handy method of collecting postage, until in July, 1843, the enlightened empire of Brazil followed suit with a series of unprepossessing adhesive labels of native manufacture, adorned with large numerals of value in place of a design.

In 1847 the United States entered the field with two beautifully engraved portraits of Franklin and Washington, while the head of Ceres, the goddess of agriculture, found place on the first stamps of the French republic, engraved by the elder Barre, which made their debut on Jan. 1, 1849.—Strand Magazine.

PROCLAMATION

GEORGE the FIFTH, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, KING, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come or whom the same may in any wise concern,—GREETING:

A Proclamation of conditional amnesty respecting men belonging to Class 1 under the Military Service Act, 1917, who have disobeyed our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, or their orders to report for duty, or are deserters or absent without leave from the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

E. L. NEWCOMBE, Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada.

WHEREAS considerable numbers of men belonging to Class I under our Military Service Act, 1917, called out on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada under Our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, although they have thus become by law soldiers enlisted in the Military Service of Canada,

Have failed to report for duty as lawfully required of them under the said Military Service Act and the regulations thereunder, including the Order in Council duly passed on April 20 last,

Or have deserted,

Or absented themselves without leave from our Canadian Expeditionary Force,

And it is represented that the very serious and unfortunate situation in which these men find themselves is due in many cases to the fact that, notwithstanding the information and warning contained in Our Proclamation aforesaid, they have misunderstood their duty or obligation, or have been misled by the advice of ill-disposed, disloyal or seditious persons.

AND WHEREAS we desire, if possible, to avoid the infliction of the heavy penalties which the law imposes for the offences of which these soldiers have thus been guilty, and to afford them an opportunity within a limited time to report and make their services available in Our Canadian Expeditionary Force as is by law their bounden duty, and as is necessary for the defence of Our Dominion of Canada.

NOW KNOW YE that we in the exercise of Our powers, and of Our good will and pleasure in that behalf, do hereby proclaim and declare and cause to be published and made known THAT THE PENALTIES OF THE LAW WILL NOT BE IMPOSED OR EXACTED as against the men who belong to Class 1 under Our Military Service Act, 1917, and who have disobeyed Our Proclamation aforesaid; or who have received notice from any of Our registrars or deputy registrars to report for duty on a day now past and have failed so to report; or who, having reported and obtained leave of absence, have failed to report at the expiry of their leave, or have become deserters from Our Expeditionary Force, PROVIDED THEY REPORT FOR DUTY ON OR BEFORE THE TWENTY FOURTH DAY OF AUGUST 1918.

AND WE DO HEREBY STRICTLY WARN AND SOLEMNLY IMPRESS UPON ALL SUCH MEN, and as well those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist them in their disobedience, that, if they persist in their failure to report, absence or desertion until the expiry of the last mentioned day, they will be pursued and punished with all the rigour and severity of the law, SUBJECT TO THE JUDGMENT OF OUR COURTS MARTIAL WHICH WILL BE CONVENED TO TRY SUCH CASES or other competent tribunals: and also that those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist such men will be held strictly accountable as offenders and subject to the pains, penalties and forfeitures in that behalf by law provided for their said offence.

Provided however that nothing contained in this Our Proclamation is intended to release the men aforesaid from their obligation to report for duty as soon as possible or to grant them immunity from arrest or detention in the meantime for the purpose of compelling them to perform their military duty; Our intention being merely to forego or remit the penalties heretofore incurred for failure to report, absence without leave or desertion incurred by those men of the description aforesaid who shall be in the proper discharge of their military duties on or before the said twenty-fourth day of August, 1918.

Of all of which Our loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Victor Christian William, Duke of Devonshire, Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Earl of Burlington, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Cavendish of Keighley, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter: One of Our Most Honourable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, this FIRST day of AUGUST, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and in the ninth year of Our Reign.

By Command;

MAKING A BIG GUN

One of the Amazing Conquests of Modern Engineering.

WEAPONS WITH SHORT LIVES.

The Monster Twelve Inch Rifles Are Useless After Firing a Hundred Rounds, and That In Actual Time of Shell Passage Means Three Seconds.

In the manufacture of big guns the engineer has certainly achieved some of his most daring conquests, for it is doubtful if there is anything more wonderfully fashioned or scientifically constructed than the monster weapons found on the latest battleships and in large forts.

From their muzzles they are capable of launching into space shells weighing as much as half a ton at a speed of thirty-five miles a minute, or 2,100 miles an hour. These death dealing missiles may be so designed as to burst after they have forced their way through a ship's side or immediately they strike an object or at some point during their flight.

The big gun itself consists of several tubes, or cylinders, slipped over one another and named after the letters of the alphabet. "A" is inside and scorched by the powder gases. "B" goes over "A," and so on, the outside tube of all being known as the jacket.

Each separate tube, or cylinder, is fashioned in much the same way. In the case of the "A" tube for a twelve inch gun a huge solid steel ingot is cast, weighing upward of thirty tons. The ends having been cut off, the ingot is mounted in a lathe, and a tube-like "trepanning" borer removes a long core from the center. The ingot is then dismounted from the lathe and heated. A long, hollow bar somewhat smaller than the destined bore of the gun is passed through the central hole, and the ingot is placed under a 2,500 ton forging press, which gradually thins and draws it out along the bar, which is kept cool by water circulating through it. After being turned outside and bored inside the tube has to be tempered, and this is done by dipping it into a tank filled with thousands of gallons of cottonseed oil.

As it would be impossible to slip the "B" and "C" tubes over the "A" tube when cold, this difficulty is got over by heating them. The work, however, requires great care and constant attention. The heated cylinder, of course, decreases in length as well as in diameter as it cools, and, unless great precautions are taken, it would naturally cool at the ends first, and cause the central part of the tube to cool in a state of dangerous tension. To avoid such a thing happening one part is cooled artificially by means of water jets, while the other portions are heated by gas flames.

We now come to the wiring process. Layers of ribbon-like steel wire are wound outside the innermost cylinder but one, as metal arranged in this manner withstands bursting strains better than anything yet devised. A twelve inch gun consumes no fewer than 120 miles of wire, one-quarter inch wide and one-sixteenth of an inch thick.

That the shell may travel "business end" foremost throughout its journey it must be given a twisting motion round its axis—in other words, be made to spin. This rotation prevents its turning head over heels, as it undoubtedly would do if not spinning, and makes it travel farther and more accurately. The spinning motion is brought about by rifling—the cutting of spiral grooves in the bore, or inside of the gun. This is done by a long, hollow steel rod, which carries three tools at the end and cuts three grooves at once.

As the rifling comes so near the end of the manufacture of a big gun it must be conducted with the greatest care, for a single badly cut groove would spoil the gun, now representing perhaps $50,000 in work and material. Indeed, extreme care and accuracy characterize every process in the making of heavy ordnance. The steel for the tubes is made carefully; the ingots are cast carefully and forged carefully. Every tube is bored and turned to the five-hundredth part of an inch. Though a twelve inch gun is nearly twenty inches thick over the powder chamber, each of its various jackets must have its proper tension in order to receive its fair share of the shock of explosion.

Finally, there is the breechblock—the door through which the shell is inserted. It moves on a hinge and is a very massive affair, weighing about half a ton. Thanks to the presence of certain levers and the perfection of the workmanship, any one who has the knack can move it quite easily. It can be slammed and locked in about five seconds. The door gives entrance to the twelve foot chamber where the shell is placed.

The active life of a gun is made up of the total of the very short periods occupied by the various shells passing through its bore. The bore of a twelve inch gun is about forty-five feet long, and the average rate at which the shell travels through it is halfway between no motion at all and the muzzle velocity of, say, 3,000 feet per second, or about 1,500 feet per second. The rifling of a big gun is worn out after 100 rounds have been fired, so that the total life is the time taken for a shell moving at 1,500 feet per second to travel 4,500 feet—that is, just three seconds!

TURKISH WOMEN.

They Are Gradually Obtaining Their Emancipation.

It is generally thought that Turkish women are far behind their Western sisters in intelligent and independent thinking.

This, however, is not the case, for during the last few years, the Turk's womenfolk have made great progress in learning. In fact, the educated Turkish women, the writer of the article continues, is in many ways far ahead of our Western sisters, for she is generally a linguist, and while we allow our daughters to spend most of their time in sport, the Turkish girl is kept as a rule more strictly to her studies, and as a result she can discuss politics and most other subjects of general interest with an ease that would astonish the average English girl.

It is obvious, therefore, that the Turkish woman should assert herself and emerge from her seclusion—not by discarding the "Charchaff," but by seriously taking up some work that will either help her financially or give her some more wide and general interest than she can possibly find if she remains at home hiding her talents behind the "kafess."

Europeans are too apt to imagine says a Turkish correspondent, that Turkish woman as some one clad in diaphanous draperies and completely shut off from the world. It is for the Turkish woman to prove that she is, if anything, more capable and able to take her part in life than many of her European sisters.

There are many large companies and institutions in Constantinople that would be only too willing to employ women clerks could they but find good and accurate workers. Why, therefore, should not Turkish girls apply for such employment, especially as several are already employed in the new telephone company?

The Turkish woman has again an important part to play in her country's history (she did great things in ancient times) I am quite convinced, and I believe that she can only begin to play that part by associating herself more closely with the business and public side of life, and by doing so she will not only help herself, but her country also in a very real and efficient manner.

I think I am right in saying that there are many Turkish women today who would like to take up some serious occupation, either from pecuniary motive or merely as a matter of interest outside the home life. For obvious reasons this was impossible in the past, but now, with the constitution and its happy relaxation of many of the old restrictions that so handicapped the Turkish woman, things have changed somewhat, and the time is right for her to take a part in the outside world.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

A sports coat of natural camel's-haircloth is splendid for many occasions.

SEIZE YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

Get Out and Hunt For It if It Doesn't Knock at Your Door.

Lots of fellows have overlooked an opportunity simply because they were too close to it.

Don't be like the sick man who heard of the curative properties of the waters of Carlsbad and went there to take them. After he arrived he consulted a physician who carefully diagnosed his case and then told him that his particular ailment would respond better to the waters of a certain spring in America. "Which spring?" asked the patient. "One of the springs in Saratoga," replied the doctor. "That's certainly tough!" said the sufferer. "I live in Albany."

If you're made of the right stuff you'll find plenty of room to create something for yourself in the job you've got. You can grow just as big there as you can in something of your own building.

They say that opportunity knocks once at every man's door. I don't know the name of the scientist who managed to get such a fine line on the habits of opportunity, but if opportunity does announce itself the chances are that it misses many a door, and in some cases when it does knock I presume "there's nobody at home."

My impression is that opportunity as a rule doesn't knock at all—or very rarely. Opportunity consists of thinking, doing, having plenty of patience and perseverence, possessing the ability to size up a situation and having the nerve and willingness to take advantage of it.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Not Used to Wholesale Business.

A small party of prospective investors were on a tour of inspection in the oil fields. Having smoked all the cigars previously provided by the agent who conducted the party, they all went into the one store of the village to get a fresh supply. An awkward clerk came up to wait on them. The cigar stock consisted of a limited assortment of stogies, "two-fers," and one box of a supposedly extra choice brand that sold for 5 cents each. The host of the party looked over the stock and said, "I suppose you sell six of these nickel cigars for a quarter?"

The clerk took on a puzzled look, scratched his head and drawled: "Waal, I dunno. We never sold six to any one man."—Indianapolis News.

Helping Others: Luke 10:25-37; Galatians 6:1-10.

Golden Text: Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. Gal. 6:2.

1. Verses 25-28. Why did Jesus say nothing about faith as a condition of inheriting eternal life?

2. If a man anxious to be saved, should know nothing of the doctrine of faith, but hearing and heeding these words of Jesus, how long need it take him to find rest for his soul?

3. Explain how it is possible for a mortal man to love God with all his heart and his neighbour as himself?

4. Verse 29. What does it imply to be a neighbour?

5. Verse 30. Suppose it had been one of the thieves that they had found half dead; would he have had the same claim or not, and why, upon the kindness of the good Samaritan, as in the present case?

6. Verses 31, 32. Which should have the prior claim upon our sympathy and help, and why, the physical or the spiritual needs of man?

7. When is it a matter of relieving physical suffering, or rescuing people from danger? What evidence is there to show that church members are more ready to help than outsiders? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

8. Verses 33, 34. Which is more pleasing to God, and why, an atheist who is always doing good deeds like this Samaritan, or a professed Christian who rarely puts himself out to help those who are in distress?

9. Was this Samaritan, judging him alone by this good deed, necessarily a good Christian?

10. Verse 35. If a man does not gladly hold his money subject to the call of God and his work of mercy, what would you say is his spiritual condition?

11. Verses 36, 37. Which is the more important for us to cultivate, and why, the sentimental, or the practical part of Christianity?

12. Gal. 6:1. What sin, if any, is sufficiently grievous to turn a minister or a member out of the church, if genuine sorrow is expressed for the sin?

13. If a brother Christian has done us personally a great wrong, and made no apology, what would Christ have us do in the circumstances?

14. Verse 1. What is your duty, as Christians, to the liquor seller?

15. Verse 2. What are the "burdens" of the average man?

16. To what extent are we to bear one another's burdens, and how can it best be done?

17. Verse 3. How much credit is due us for our life, health, mental ability, early environment and our present providential circumstances?

18. Verse 4. Which is the happier, and why, of two men who always do their best to please God, one caring nothing for human appreciation, and the other who longs for it?

19. Verse 5. In what sense must every man bear his own burden, when compared with the invitation to cast our burdens on the Lord?

20. Verse 6. Would you say or not, and why that it is our duty to tell the pastor or other Christian teacher, if we have been helped by his teaching?

21. Verses 7-10. What should be the master passion of every good man?

BED OF FAMOUS LAKE NOW GREAT FIELD OF WAVING CORN

BLOOMINGTON, Aug. 8.—Illinois is responding to the call for increased production of food in the effort to win the war by reclaiming its swamp lands. Spring Lake, west of here, famous the country over for its duck shooting and black bass fishing, is now but a memory. Grover Cleveland, former President, and many other famous nimrods have sought game birds upon this body of water, while the hook and line fishing was unsurpassed. Now the lake is a corn field. "Advertise NOW, and never let up."

WITT K. COCHRANE, the well-known Advertisement Agent, thus cleverly "sizes up" the advertising situation:—

"It is inconceivable that any merchant or manufacturer should cease—or even curtail—his advertising just when the country is on the threshold of a tremendous double harvest—the NATURAL harvest of our own unprecedented crops and the LOGICAL harvest consequent on the war in Europe.

"It is under such conditions as these that advertising reaches the zenith of its power. The man who listens to the yellow pessimist and sits back to 'wait for things to settle down,' is yielding his common sense and enterprise to the baleful influence of idle sentiment, and actually starving the goose that lays the golden egg.

"Keep the columns of the daily newspapers bristling with your announcements and thus open wide your doors for the flood of prosperity that is bound to rush in. Make hay while the sun shines. We won't have another chance like this in a hundred years."

"I have noticed with a feeling of profound disgust the conservatism and business cowardice that have set in in America since the Kaiser threw down the guage of battle. We, the very people who will logically profit by the war abroad—and profit immeasurably—are acting as though we were at war ourselves. We are talking blue things, pinching the pennies cutting down our advertising and forcing prosperity to stand back.

"As a matter of fact this is the very hour when we should rush into print to a greater extent than ever before, because, unless the earth opens and swallows us up, there will be greater prosperity in America this fall than ever in the history of the Republic.

"We are not at war. We are not likely to be. The warring world looks to us for its supplies and we can't keep posperity down no matter how hard we try.

ALLIES HAVE CAPTURED 20,000 PRISONERS

New Offensive Is Developing Favourably For Allies

Powerful Allied Cavalry Forces Are Now In Action

British Forces Still Pushing Forward in the New Offensive Powerful Cavalry Forces Are in Action—Allies Have Made Favourable Progress.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, August 9.—Reports received up to this hour of the fighting on the Franco-British front indicate that it is developing most victoriously for the Allies.

The battle on the front south of the Somme was resumed early this morning and Franco-British forces made favourable progress from the start, reaching various selected objectives. Powerful cavalry forces are in action. During the night there was a good deal of activity on the part of the German artillery forces in the Champagne. The Germans undertook several raids in regions of Prosnes and Souain. They were repulsed.

Advices from the battle front south of the Somme to-day report British cavalry, armoured cars and tanks in advance of the infantry to have reached within a mile of Chaulnes railway junction.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, August 9.—Fourteen thousand prisoners and guns too numerous to mention, have been taken in the British drive on the front south of the Somme. The cavalry is still pursuing the enemy.

From Lihons the line runs now southward to Meharicourt, southeast to Rosieres. This represents a total maximum advance of eleven miles. It will be impossible for the Germans to hold their Montdidier positions, it is believed here. The Allied progress is continuing. The French have taken Fresnoyen, Chaussee, while the British have reached a poin teast of le Quesnel and Caix.

The Germans are evacuating their positions in the Lys valley on the Flanders front. On the Lys front the British now hold Locon, Lecornet, Malo, Quentin, Le Petit, Pacaut and Le Sart. Above the Lys region on the front north of Kemmel, the British carried out a local operation last night in which their line was advanced somewhat more than a thousand yards.

THE STATEMENT READS.

Our progress on the battle front continues. The French have taken Fresnoyen Chaussee. British troops are east of Le Quesnel and Caix. North of the Somme the enemy is making a vigorous resistance to our advance. Heavy fighting has taken place between Chipilly and Morlancourt. The number of prisoners taken by the Allied armies yesterday exceed 14,000, and the number of guns captured cannot be estimated. During the past day the enemy has continued to evacuate forward positions held by him in the Lys valley. Our line there has advanced along the whole front from Laverister to the Bourre Riv-

FOES MAN-POWER IS DIMINISHING

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, August 9.—"The American soldiers 'hardly landed' are making the disconcerted enemy feel the force of their blows," General Petain, commander of the French forces on the western front, declared in an order of the day issued to French troops. "The foe's man-power and morale, are diminishing."

Will Have a Big Influence

The Americans Have Improved Their Positions Along the Aisne-Vesle Line.

(By Fred S. Ferguson—United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 8.—The Franco-British attack in Picardy is likely to have a big influence on the situation along the Aisne-Vesle line, where there has been no great change in the past twenty-four hours.

The Americans improved their positions again by several attacks, but for the most part were busy repulsing German counter attacks. Five of these enemy assaults were broken up to-day. The British line at Fismes was raided during the day. The city is now entirely cleared of Boches, who have shunted out of cellars and have been captured or exterminated.

Artillery exchanges continued throughout the day, the rains have passed an dthe roads are drying out, simplifying transportation. However, the Germans are strongly entrenching on the heights north of the Vesle in caves and deep dugouts. Our artillery will literally have to blast the sides off these cells before we advance.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, August 9.—The Associated Press war summary says to-day:

German lines on the Picardy front south of the Somme have been badly broken by the savage thrust of the British and French armies. A wedge has been driven into the enemy territory to a depth of eleven miles along the Amiens-Chaulnes La Fere railway, and early to-day the British were only a mile away from the Chaulnes-Roye railway, which runs southward from Chaulnes and forms the chief artery of supplies for the German troops fighting in the Montdidier sector of the front. The result of this attack loosed against the Germans on the Amiens front Thursday morning appears to have eclipsed those obtained by the Germans on the first day of any of their terrific offensives of the past spring and summer. So far as reports show, in the progress of the fighting south of the Somme, the Allies are going forward almost without serious opposition. On the north bank the Germans have held their lines strongly, but have lost Morlancourt, their stronghold there, after hard fighting.

Present Offensive Complete Surprise

Enemy Was Caught Unawares—Considerable Quantity of Material Captured.

ADVANCE CONTINUES

(By William Philip Simms.)
(United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 9.—The British Fourth Army and elements of the French First Army, under Field Marshal Haig have penetrated the enemy lines for a distance of several miles and have captured a large number of guns, many prisoners and considerable material.

Out of Range.

Our artillery had to limber up and advance in order to keep the retiring enemy within range. The Paris-Amiens main railway line is now out of range of any but the heaviest German guns, while the Paris-Compiegne-Rheims road is cut only at Montdidier. The latter city is now directly threatened.

British airmen, despite heavy weather, low clouds and showers, are hampering traffic in and out of the enemy salient, especially along the Peronne-Roye and Amiens-Ham railway. Their junction at the Chaulnes bridge across the Somme, over which every ounce of supplies and reinforcement divisions must pass, likewise is being parried.

Enemy Attacks Feeble.

With the Allies' heavy guns pounding the German military centres far in the rear, Prince Rupprecht's reply—by infantry, artillery and air—is very feeble so far. Some counter attacks were attempted, but they were easily repulsed. With the coming up of reinforcements, however, it is inevitable that the enemy resistance will stiffen.

Our casualties are exceptionally light. At some casualty clearing stations few patients had been admitted up to a very late hour last night. One entire army corps estimated its casualties in the first twenty-four hours' fighting at two officers and fifty men.

This is absolute proof of the complete surprise of the attack. Some high German staff officers were captured. Others escaped by the skin of their teeth, fleeing in scant attire and leaving everything behind save their pajamas and their hides.. Among the prisoners were some so clean nad unruffled that it was obvious they had been called out of their beds and dressed only in time to be captured. One division reported more prisoners than it could handle and had to employ slightly wounded men to escort the captured Boches back to the rear. None of the unwounded Tommies wishing to leave the fighting.

Tanks Did Good Work.

Every variety of the hundreds of tanks' staff kept in touch with their the infantry. Big tanks surrounded by the little "whippets" looked like dreadnoughts escorted by destroyers. The "whippets" are able to dodge and turn faster than a man. Opereating over rough ground they run down enemy groups and individuals, flatten out machine gun nests, grinding the crews into the mud and terrorizing whole sectors.

Caught Unawares.

I was told that members of the tanks' staff kept in tuoch with their machines from low flying aeroplanes, thus covering the whole battle field and returning with first hand information regarding the enemy situations.

Neither the tanks nor the troops encountered a great deal of barbed wire or trenches. Obviously Prince Rupprecht over-estimated himself, or under-rated his opponents. It is clear that he little expected a serious Allied offensive. Rather, he was aiming to push on himself.

Marshal Foch and Haig have apparently caught Von Hindenburg unawares. If he escapes a bitter drubbing the present signs are totally mistaking.

German Resistance Apparently Lacking

Names of Places Captured by the Allied Forces—Germans Become Panicky.

LINE STRIPPED

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 8.— One thing apparently revealed by the lack of German resistance at some points of the Albert-Montdidier front to-day was the degree with which the enemy line was stripped to furnish men for the disastrous Marne campaign. The part played by the French in to-day's battle was comparatively small, merely sustaining the right wing of the British advance. They actually started on a front of only four kilometres (two and a half miles) but later this was widened.

At the beginning of the attack, the French line was below Bourges and west of Morizel, south of the Amiens-Roye road. With the widening of the line, it included the whole of the Aure river as far as Hargicourt, from the north of Montdidier.

Stiff Resistance.

Three hours after the French infantry dashed forward it was holding the Wood north-east of Moreuil and the town of Morizel. In the latter place stiff resistance was encountered, necessitating a flanking movement. Four hundred prisoners were taken there and many Boches killed.

The Avre was crossed between Braches and Castel, a front of about four miles, the infantry wading, swimming and utilizing the few bridges because of the steep bank opposite, as well as the steep ground behind. This was a difficult feat, but the Poilus accomplished it and threw a bridge across afterwards so the artillery could come up.

After the fall of Moreuil the Germans became panick and fell back rapidly, the French taking La Neuville, Braches and the heights north of it in quick succession. Later they took Villers-Aux-Erudils and carried their guns forward to a line running through Merciers and the heights east of La Neuville, including Hill 102, making a total advance of from six to seven kilometres (3 3-4 to 4 1-2 miles.)

Freedom of Manoeuvre

This is the Main Object of the New Allied Offensive.

LONDON, Aug 9.—(Canadian Press Despatch from Reuter's)—The battle blow delivered by Field Marshall Haig yesterday, is regarded not as an attempt to break through, but as part of the great strategic plan which Marshal Foch is carrying out, now that he has initiative for purpose of relieving Amiens and for recovering perfect freedom of manoeuver. Marshal Foch by an offensive pressure on Germans, not merely embarrassed them in the desperate delaying battle they are fighting on the Vesle in order to secure their retreat across Aisne, but threatens their general positions, for, if the drive is pushed far enough it may compel a withdrawal from the Apex of the Montdidier salient which threatens both Paris and Amiens. Such development however, is pure speculation at the present stage.

Result Gained

The result gained already are sufficiently remarkable in themselves in view of the water logged ground and fact that the enemy was completely surprised in a sector which he thought it hardest to conquer and which as his recent counter attack on Ancre showed he regarded as most important. Much gratification is expressed in London and Paris at entrusting of Field Marshal Haig with command of operations which shows a new development in principle of unity of command.

The Somme Salient is a Nasty Tangle of German Transports and Troops—New Offensive Opens in Flanders.

CAVALRY IN ACTION

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 9.—British cavalry detachments are reported approaching Chaulnes. Prisoners taken in the drive to date totalled 20,000, according to estimates. The cavalry took a number of additional villages from the Germans.

The whole area included in the great bend of the Somme is a nasty tangle of German transports, artillery and troops all struggling along the same roads. These masses of men and material are being attacked by low flying airplanes, which maintain a constant machine gun fire, accompanied by bombs, day and night.

New Offensive.

LONDON, Aug. 9.— British troops, while sweeping forward on their offensive from Picardy, suddenly advanced in Flanders to-day. An initial progress of two miles on an eight mile front along the south-western portion of the Flanders salient was reported by the British War Office, together with the capture of five villages. In Picardy the capture of Morlancourt and the arrival of British cavalary at Caulnes Junction were reported in unofficial despatches. The latter represents an additional gain of about four miles since yesterday, and a total penetration of more than twelve miles.

Preparing to Retreat.

Three o'clock despatch:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE(Reuters), August 9.—The Germans are blowing up their ammunition lumps in the battle area. This is considered an indication that they are preparing to retreat. The British casualties since the beginning of the present drive are but three-fifths of the number of the prisoners counted up to three o'clock this afternoon. The British cavalry has rounded up many prisoners, but the larger part of the 14,000 so far taken were captured by Australians and Canadians.

Canadian horse troopers co-operating with French cavalry, cut off a large force of the enemy in to-day's operations on the Somme front.

Stores Abandoned.

(By the Associated Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, August 9.—An enormous quantity of stores and ammunition has been abandoned by the Germans in their hasty retreat.

British cavalry and some infantry were signalled in the neighbourhood of Chaulnes this morning. When last heard from directly they, together with armoured cars, were operating back of Framerville, and now have progressed many kilmotres beyond continuing the cleaning up of the country and capturing villages.

Cavalry patrols, accompanied by swift "whippet" tanks, are reported by airmen far out ahead of the infantry advance. The infantry at many places was apparently checked only by sheer physical inability to push any further. This afternoon the enemy's transport lorries have been rolling along the few good roads left in the Somme valley. They afforded excellent targets for airmen who played havoc with escaping convoys and spedily littered the roads so that they were impassable.

It is reported that a prominent German divisional major-general has been captured in to-day's drive by British forces in France.

LONDON, August 9.—More than 20,000 prisoners had been captured by the Allies in the Somme drive up to noon to-day. More than 200 guns also have been taken.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 9TH, 1918.

WELCOME NEWS.

The announcement that an agreement has been signed between the Canadian Railway War Board and the six Railway Brotherhoods, representing practically all employees of Canadian railways, by which all disputes between the companies and their men which cannot be settled by the interested parties, are to be referred to the Railway Labour Board, will be hailed with great satisfaction throughout Canada. The plan does away with all danger of a strike, and will be generally acclaimed on that account. The menace of a possible tie-up of Canada's transport system, with the resultant demoralization of the Dominion's war effort, has been removed, and the country will breath easier, knowing that a common-sense practical plan has been adopted. The board which will have the final decision in all disputes, whether as regards wages or working conditions, will consist of six representatives of the railways and six labour leaders, each representing one of the Brotherhoods. Their decision is to be final and both companies and men are bound to abide by the Board's ruling. It is provided that they may select a referee in case they are unable to reach an agreement upon any particular dispute, and if it is not possible for the board to coincide on the selection of such a referee the Governor-General in Council, through the Minister of Railways and Canals, will make the appointment.

HERE'S A SLAP!

Chief Thompson and the members of the Peterboro police department had better be careful; they have roused the wrath of the Belleville Ontario, and the glow of satisfaction aroused by the recent salary rise threatens to disappear in the face of the broadside published below, a tone of which leads one to wonder if the editor of our Belleville contemporary has had some personal experience with the local guardians of the police. The harrowing experience of the Belleville man who happened to sleep on the grass in the public park, is surely a grievance, because in the case of residents of Belleville, the policemen should always remember the fact that they are used to walking on the grass, even in the middle of the main street in that town.

The Ontario says:

"A Belleville man who has just returned from a business trip to Peterboro has told us of the uproar occasioned in the Quaker Oats city by the arrest of a number of citizens there, who had committed the crime of forgetting to carry with them their Registration certificates. The 'guilty' men were fined $20 and costs. Some of them were laborers.

"We are not aware whether the Peterboro police explained to the 'criminals' what the certificates were to be used for. If they did we would like to know. It was probably enough for the eagle eyed 'pinks' of that well governed city to know that the offenders had done something that was 'agin the law.'

"The Belleville man happened to sleep on the grass in the public park, and he was rudely accosted by one of the sleuths and told in a majestic tone of some things that might happen.

"There are right and wrong ways for policemen to preserve order in a city. Fussy interference, unnecessary meddling and ten-cent bumptiousness are not the outstanding requisites of good police service.

"It has always seemed to us that Chief Newton had the right idea — that is to keep the police force in the back-ground as far as possible. Belleville is decent, clean, orderly, admirably governed, and one would scarcely know that there was a policeman about the premises. There is action, and determined action, when necessary but every one who tries to keep within reasonable bounds can rest assured that he will not be pounced upon by some strutting blue-coat because he is walking on the wrong side of the walk or wearing his hat on the back of his head."

A MUNICIPAL PROTEST.

The action of the town council of Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, in passing a resolution condemning what it considers the inadequate pension granted to a citizen of the town, discharged after being wounded overseas, not only calls attention to an apparent injustice of this particular case but also opens a way by which municipal councils everywhere might help returned men to get a square deal when they come back. Protests, such as the one passed by the Annapolis Royal council, which is reproduced below, should carry considerable weight because aldermen and councillors are usually well acquainted with the circumstances, and by calling the attention of the authorities to any particular case, may greatly assist the returned men in obtaining justice.

Here is the resolution as passed by the Nova Scotian town:

"Whereas, it has come to the knowledge of the town council of the town of Annapolis Royal, N. S., that the Pension Board of Canada has granted to one Pte. S. J. Francis, No. 470211, who enlisted with the 64th Battalion, and was afterwards transferred to the 24th Battalion in France, the sum of $2.50 monthly; and

"Whereas, the said Private S. J. Francis enlisted in the King's service under the voluntary system on September 12th, 1915, and served his country faithfully and well, taking part in engagements at the Somme, where he was wounded in the back, left hand, both legs and ear, on October 1st, 1916, and

"Whereas, the aforesaid Private S. J. Francis, when he was no longer of use to King or Country, was honorably discharged from the service, and left in a position where he could do but light work, owing to the wounds he had received, having still shrapnel in his body; and

"Whereas, he has a wife and child absolutely dependent upon what he can earn; and

"Whereas this council knows of many cases where considerably larger pensions have been granted to enlisted men who have never been out of Canada, therefore;

"Resolved, that the town council of Annapolis Royal, N. S., consider it a disgrace to Canada and a most contemptible act on the part of the Pension Board at Halifax that they would consider for a moment the granting to one of our loyal and faithful sons (even though that son be an Indian) the paltry sum of $2.50 monthly, which is hardly the price of a loaf of bread daily. And considers that this act reflects no credit on Canada's Milita Service, and is one which will have a serious effect upon recruiting, if our broken men, after rendering such service to the Empire, are to receive such scant consideration.

"And in the name of the citizens of the town of Annapolis Royal, their town council demands that the Honorable Minister open up this case again and grant to the said Private S. J. Francis a pension worthy of the name.

"And further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Honorable Minister of Militia, and to the Dominion Member for Annapolis-Digby, A. L. Davidson, Esq."

THE PREMIER ON PEACE.

The following extract from Premier Lloyd George's great review of the war situation in the British Parliament may be taken as an effective and complete answer to the Lansdowne letter. The Prime Minister's words will ring throughout the British Empire and re-echo throughout the allied countries.

"I have only a few words to say about what has been said about peace. There are people who seem to consider any efforts to make peace as in itself dishonorable and treason to their country. That attitude must be steadfastly discouraged. But is this a moment, I put it those who only want an honorable peace, when such a peace could be made? Why did we go into the war? Because the the instinct and conscience of the British people told them that something which is fundamental to human happiness and to human progress was put in jeopardy by the great military power of Germany. That will remain indelible as long as the caste which made the war is in supreme command in Germany. Has there been any change in that respect? Let us take recent events, such as the treaty of Brest-Litovsk, when some German statesmen went in, I believe, with the intention of negotiating a peace which, according to their minds, would be fair. What happened? As soon as there was any indication that there was to be anything but a humiliating and drastic peace imposed upon Russia, the German High Command swept aside Count von Hertling, von Kuhlmann and Czernin, and imposed their own terms. The next step was the bumiliating and enslaving peace imposed upon Roumania. The third test was what happened after Baron Kuhlmann's speech in the Reichstag, in which he ventured to say things which I should have thought perfectly obvious to anyone who had witnessed the course of the war from the point of view of the Germans. In a few days he was swept away. What did that mean? It meant that the people who made the war were still prosecuting their sinister aims. You cannot have peace as long as they are predominant in the councils of our chief enemy.

"I believe in a League of Nations, but whether a League of Nations is going to be a success or not will depend upon the conditions under which it is set up. Some of us here have been members of representative assemblies for a generation. Everyone knows that when any great decision is to be taken what determines it is not so much what is said as the fact that there is some power behind which takes a certain view, and has the power to enforce that view. It is an electorate here. In any League of Nations let us take care it is not the sword. The same thing might conceivably happen to a League of Nations unless you started under favorable conditions. You might enter it. The Germans are not saying, but are saying in their actions: 'We have invaded your lands, we have devastated them; we have trampled you underfoot. You have failed to drive us back. You have made no impression upon our armies. They were absolutely intact when peace was declared. Had it not been for our economic difficulties you would never have won, and we will take great care next year. We shall not be short of rubber, corn and essentials.'

"Every time you came to a decision, the Prussian sword would clank on the council table.

"What is the good of entering into a League of Nations of that sort? We all want peace, but it must be peace which is just. It must be peace which is durable. We don't want to put this generation or the next through the horrors of this war. To be durable it must be just. It must be more. There must be a power behind it, a power which can enforce its decrees, and all at that conference must know that inside that league such a power does exist, and when you have demonstrated even to the enemy that such a power does exist, a durable peace will then come, but no sooner."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A German war critic describes the German defeat in the Marne salient as "an unpleasant interlude." A very mild way of putting it.

"Black and dark is the hour," says a German Socialist newspaper. The description seems to be an accurate one from the enemy standpoint.

The Toronto Army and Navy Veterans have joined with the G.W.V.A. in denouncing the Toronto riots.

Among the people who should be interned is the citizen who persists in telling you that it is hot.

The remarks made at the Police Commissioners' meeting in regard to the Fire Department seem to have caused a blaze of indignation in the ranks of Chief Grange's organization.

WHAT BETTER COULD BE EXPECTED?

(Baltimore American.)

A Swiss lawyer pleaded for leniency for his client accused of robbery, on the ground that he had lived a long time in Germany. That is the way the rest of the world will look at it for a long time to come.

A CONDITION OF TRUST.

(Lake Johnstone, Sask, Star.)

W. L. Woodger is the name of the gentleman who will in future preside over the local destinies of the C.P.R. at this point. Aside from the fact that he is a gentleman without family encumbrance, we don't know much about Mr. Woodger, but if he has the good sense to hunt up the editor of this rag and chuck a dollar and a half into the jack pot, we are willing to take him on trust for the time being.

TAKE THE BONES.

(Toronto Star.)

The Regina Leader refers to the fact that butchers used to "throw in" the soup bone with a meat order. To-day they weigh and charge for bones, and then at the buyer's request, cut them out. The thrifty housewife asks for the bones she has bought as well as the meat—but a lot are not thrifty.

PLURAL ENOUGH WITHOUT AN S

(Exchange).

Soldiers and civilians on the western front drop the "s" from the plural of shell. With the fighters it is never "shells" but always "shell," no matter how many. When 250,000 gas shell, to say nothing of shrapnel and H. E., come over in twenty-four hours an extra "s" is too trifling to bother with. For purposes of accuracy, the letter might be left out of the word altogether.

NEEDS CENSORING.

(Hamilton Times.)

The peace that Lord Lansdowne is agitating for would mean another war as soon as the Central Powers felt themselves strong enough to wage it. His Lordship should be censored.

THINGS LOOKING BETTER.

(New York Times.)

The fifth year of the war begins with a fair prospect that the landing of British and American troops at Vladivostok and on the Murman coast to be followed in Siberia by Japanese disembarkations, will rally patriotic Russians to join with the Allies and the heroic Czechoslovaks in a campaign to redeem Russia from the German oppression. There may even yet be a Russian front in Europe, for it would be taking counsel with foolish optimism to expect an early ending of the war.

FORCE LIQUOR ON RUSSIA

UKRAINE TREATY TO OPEN COUNTRY TO GERMAN WET GOODS.

(The New York Tribune).

As a sequel to the Ukraine treaty, it now develops that Austria and Germany intend to force th import of spirituous liquor into South Russia. The former Russian Government took advantage of the state of war to curb the drink evil in Russia, but the beneficent plans of Germany are to restore it in full measure. Austria has announced that she is prepared to import spirituous liquors into South Russia ot the value of $200,000,000.

What the capacity of Germany, with her infinitely greater production of wine and beer, in this sphere may be can only be conjectured. From first to last there has been no indication that either the Kieff Rada or the Moscow Soviet was prepared to contemplate a forced import of liquor on this or any other scale.

In further execution of the provisions of the Brest treaty regarding the importation of Austrian industrial products as a set-off to the food levy on the Ukraine, the Austrians are arranging to disapatch at an early date up to 770 truckloads of goods, valued at less than one-tenth of the proposed liquor import. Up to May 1 there had left Vienna goods to the value of under $2,000,000 including thirty-three truckloads of scythes and sickles, seven trucks of enamelled ware, twenty-one trucks of agricultural machinery, one truck of window glass, five trucks of miner waters, two trucks of lamps and other lighting material, and one truck of miscellaneous goods. A shoddier consignment has never crossed even the German frontier.

Beginning of the Submarine

The submarine is far from being a new idea. In the American Revolutionary War, a boat was built on the Hudson that appeared to be capable of being submerged and, with the aid of this craft, an attempt was made to fasten a torpedo with a clockwork attachment beneath the hull of a 64-gun British frigate lying in New York harbour. The torpedo failed to stick and came to the surface where, in due time, it did explode, to the consternation of the crew of the frigate.

If Napoleon Had Used This?

During the Napoleonic wars, again, Fulton, who navigated the first steamboat on the Hudson, submitted to the French Government, for its approval, a submarine craft to be used against the British fleet. This craft was cigar-shaped, 21 feet 4 inches long, and 7 feet in diameter. The hull was copper, with iron ribs. There was a collapsible mast and sail for use when on the surface, but when under water the boat was propelled by a wheel or screw in the centre of the stern, which was driven by a hand-winch. The boat was tried in the Seine in May, 1801, at which time Fulton and one assistant remained below 20 minutes and then made their way under water back to the starting-point. On June 3, 1801, Fulton was submerged for an hour. On June 26 he submerged and blew up an old hulk which was offered for the purpose, and on August 7 he introduced compressed air and remained below the surface for five hours.

The French Minister of Marine, Admiral Pleville le Pelley, however, finally refused Fulton to operate his submarine because, as he wrote, "It seems impossible to give a commission as belligerent to men who use such means for destroying the ships of the enemy."

If the French Government had used this invention the history of Trafalgar might have been written as "The Massacre of Trafalgar," with Nelson and his men as the massacred.

The Real Beginnings.

But the history of the submarine appears to go back beyond the American Revolution. In the American Machinist, H. H. Manchester traces the idea of the submarine to the efforts of divers to remain under water longer than nature had furnished them the means of doing. When those efforts took the form of vessels containing air and large enough to hold the diver himself, he may be said to have evolved the germ of a submarine. With some means of propulsion added, even of the rudest form, the resemblance went a good deal further. "A direct application of this conception was made by Robertus Valturius in 1460. The design he showed was for a boat of the form of a cylinder with a pointed prow and stern. Both prow and stern were detachable, so that the boat could be easily transported. It was intended for crossing rivers without being seen by the enemy, and for this purpose it was made water-tight all around so that it could be sunk below the surface. Two cranks, which drove two paddle-wheels, were also used to guide the boat. It was said to be capable of holding twelve men for the period necessary to cross a river.

Was Greenland First.

The next notice taken of submarines seems to be the one by Olaus Magnus, the Bishop of Upsala, in his "History of the North," published in Latin in 1555. He declares: "Halfway to Greenland there is found a kind of pirates that use leather boats. By a method of navigation not so much above as below the water, they creep up in ambush and bore holes in the ships of merchants below the pump. I saw two of these leather boats in the year 1505 on the west hall of the cathedral, dedicated to Saint Halvard, and hung up so as to be seen. These boats Haquains, king of the same country, was reported to have taken while passing near to the coast of Greenland with a fleet of war, when the pirates sought to have drowned his ships. The inhabitants of that country get no small profits by such treacherous acts, through boring holes secretly, as I have said, underneath the sides of the ships, letting in the water, and, presently, causing them to sink."

Secret Died With Him.

A noteworthy effort in submarine building was by Cornelius van Drebbel in 1620 and subsequent years. He built several boats for submarine use, which he made water-tight by stretching oiled leather all over the outside. . . . Besides what was then considered the remarkable success of his vessel, Drebbel claimed credit for an even more important invention in "the composition of a fluid that would speedily restore to the troubled air such a proportion of vital parts as would make it again, for a good while, fit for respiration." Possibly he had some recipe for releasing oxygen from water, but he died in 1634 without disclosing this part of his secret.

ARTISTS FOR THE CHAUTAUQUA

Remarkable Quartette Will be Heard Here.

Those who are qualified to judge always maintain that the highest form in which music can be rendered is Chamber music or the form in which the "Tschaikowsky Quartet" perform. This remarkable company of artists, namely, Mr. Leon Weltman, Mr. Frederick Blair, Mr. Henry Levine, and Mr. Edward Kowirski, are known the world over.

Mr. Leon Weltman is a graduate of the Conservatory of Moscow, and has been a conductor in both Manchester and London, England.

Mr. Frederick Blair is a pupil of the renowned Julius Kiengl, a well-known teacher and composer.

Mr. Henry Levine, an eminent Boston pianist, honour graduate of Harvard, with unusual artistic ability, and Mr. Edward Kowirski, violinist, Conservatory of Warsaw, student of Barcewick and Lotto, master of Regimental Band in Bendin, Poland, 1st violin in Boston Opera House Orchestra for 12 seasons.

These gentlemen all born, bred, raised and educated in the world's greatest music centres, studied and played the most classical music under the greatest conductors and players are in a class by themselves.

The music produced by this Quartet is of such a standard that lovers of the musical art travel miles to hear.

Peterborough citizens are very fortunate in having this array brought to their very door steps and will be heard at their best during "Chautauqua Week."

SEEKING AN OFFICER WHO SEDUCED GIRL.

Detective Looking Into a Sordid Case Regarding An Ottawa Girl.

OTTAWA, Aug. 9. — Presumably acting on instructions from either the Dominion Police or the Militia Department, a detective has been sent to Kingston to investigate serious allegations regarding the conduct in that city of an Ottawa officer, whose whereabouts are apparently not known. According to charges, the officer in question went to Kingston a short time ago with an eighteen-year-old Ottawa girls, and the two registered as man and wife. After spending about a week with the girl, it is said that the officer then telegraphed the girl's step-mother, telling her where the girl was, and asking her to come and get her. He then disappeared without indicating to the girl his intention of going away. The foster mother of the victim immediately acted upon the telegram and obtained from the girl a tearful confession of the sordid story, which was then reported to the authorities.

Train Set on Fire When It Hits Oil Truck; One Killed

Five Are Injured, One Fatally, in Wreck Near Ivyside, N.J.—Panic Among Passengers

CAMDEN, N.J., Aug. 9.—One man was burned to death, another is dying from burns and four other persons were injured when a New Jersey and Seashore Railroad train struck a standard oil tank truck full of gasoline at a crossing at Ivyside, N. J., twenty miles south of here.

The gasoline was thrown over the engine, and the first car of the train and caught fire.

The flaming gasoline on his cuothes and engine prevented any one from reaching him. The engine moved only twenty-five feet after striking the truck, as the engine driver had applied the emergency brakes when he saw the danger of a collision. Pancoast's clothes were soaked with burning oil, and he jumped from the cabin ziazing from head to foot. Sullivan jumped with his clother burning slightly. He struck on his head, but was not rendered unconscious. His hands were burned putting out the flames in his clothing.

There was a panic among the passengers, particularly in the first coach. Women fainted or became hysterical. Men and women jumped from the windows. Mrs. Peachy jumped and struck upon her head. Miss Sparks suffered her injuries when she jumped. Stock was burned when he led a squad of passengers into the burning car in an attempt to put out the burning car in an attempt to put out the flames and to rescue the unconscious women inside.

Physicians and nurses were called from all the nearby towns. The most seriously injured were brought to Camden in a special train.

Food Board Flashes

Le denier cri in Paris in for Milady to carry her tiny portion of sugar in a little painted or enamelled case and a few drops of condensed milk in decorative little bottle attached to her chatelaine when she goes visiting. In this way she saves her hostess embarrassment of depleting her own limited stock.

In England, where even the exigencies of war have not precluded five o'clock tea, if plain little cakes are served at the afternoon meal, there is no sweet for dinner. By such means is the balance evened up.

The "King of America" is a Good Indian---He Never Eats Boches

Wife of U-Boat Prisoner Here is Afraid Her Husband is Taking Long Chances With the American Savage and Begs Him to Appeal to King.

LONDON, August 9.—Letters from relatives and friends in Germany of U-boat crews interned in the United States are beginning to arrive in London. They throw little light on internal conditions in Germany, but some are very amusing as showing the appalling ignorance of the mass of Germans regarding the United States.

One letter from the wife of a prisoner, apparently written in all seriousness, says:

"We hope you will soon return. You are certain'y to be sympathized with. We are always praying with our deepest feeling that you may not be eaten up by Indians or hanged by cowboys with lasso ropes.

"If they should wish to scalp you you should first make appeal to the King of America. Is he also an indian?"

MUNITION PLANTS EMPLOY 215,000

Canada Now Has 450 of These Factories—5,000 Women Employed.

6,420 CONTRACTS HERE

Priority Branch of the Munitions Board Ensures Supply of Materials.

OTTAWA, Aug. 9.—How important a place the manufacture of shells finds in the present industrial life of the Dominion may be gathered from the fact that there are about 215,000 employees in the 450 Canadian plants now engaged in the production of munitions. Of this number approximately 5,000 are women.

The Imperial Munitions Board, the source of this tremendous activity, had placed no fewer than 6,420 contracts with Canadian firms up to the end of May last. This number, however, includes orders for steel and wooden ships, locomotives, cars, airplane engines and boilers, raw materials, etc., as well as for munitions and their allied products. To speed up production and ensure the continuous supply of necessary raw materials, in addition to performing the multitudinous duties of the board, a highly efficient organization has been built up, the staff at the Ottawa headquarters numbering 802. Of this number more than 50 per cent. are women.

It is the policy of the board to make all purchases, no matter what the commodity may be, in the open market, thus securing the benefit of competition, and at the same time placing the manufacturers on a fair and equal business basis. Upon receipts of tenders the purchasing agent examines the bids and allots contracts to the manufacturers quoting lowest prices consistent with rapidity of production, character of workmanship or other considerations. By this method, large sums of money have been saved for the Imperial Government without having anything but a beneficial effect upon the commerce of this country.

Keeping the Supplies Up.

The importance of a continuous and adequate supply of raw materials is fully recognized by the board, and in order that the plants may be continuously furnished with an adequate supply of material and components, a system has been established whereby a working balance of component supplies, equivalent to eight weeks' supply of component parts, is shipped to the machining plant so as to ensure continuous operations in the production of shells.

During last year 1,600,000 tons were handled inland to and from machining plants, and 785,000 tons were shipped overseas by the transportation department of the board.

Owing to new export regulations which were put into effect early this year by the United States authorities at Washington, restricting the export of certain classes of materials from the United States to Canada, it became necessary for the board to establish a priority branch to deal with all matters governed by the new regulations and to act as an intermediary between the Washington authorities and the board's contractors in Canada. The function of the organization is that of assisting these contractors in securing prompt delivery of materials ordered by the Minister from the United States, which are required in connection with contracts for the board and also to facilitate the obtaining of the necessary export licenses and priority certificates. The priority branch endorses only applications for materials and commodities entering into the manufacture of munitions of war.

RUSSIAN DESERTERS FROM FRANCE FLOCK INTO SWITZERLAND

Allies Are Glad to Get Rid of Them and Show Them How to Escape.

Russian deserters from the contingent fighting on the west front are flocking into Switzerland in such numbers that great difficulty is found in taking care of them. The small villages and towns in Switzerland along the French border are crowded with deserters. In many cases the town hall has been fitted with cots for sleeping accommodations, but in villages several hundreds of them are encamped in the open air, as no room can be found for them.

France is glad to get rid of them. In fact, the Russians have been frankly told that if they do not like it in France they can leave, and the road to Switzerland is pointed out to them. As a result hundreds are going over the border without being in the least molested.

A correspondent of a Zurich newspaper has been interviewing the deserters, and all are in accord that they are tired of fighting on the west front and want to get back to Russia if possible. The sentiment regarding conditions in Russia is divided among them. Some express confidence in the Bolshevik government, but the majority are against Lenine and Trotsky and express a desire to fight in Russia for a better government. Most of the deserters are socialists.

The Swiss government is puzzled as to what to do with them. Means are being considered of getting them back to Russia in some way, as Switzerland has all she can do to feed and take care of her own population.

War Birth Rate Shows Decline

Steady Falling-Off in New Arrivals Since 1914.

PROVINCIAL FIGURES.

More Boys Than Girls Are Born During Great War.

Ontario's birth-rate is showing the effects of war. The returns made to the Registrar-General's Department for 1917 show that during the year there were but 62,666 births, compared with 66,265 in 1914. The records also support the common belief that during war time nature gets to work to balance the loss of men by bringing more male children into the world than in times of peace. The ratio of males for 1917 shows an appreciable increase compared with pre-war years. In 1914 there were 1,050 males to 1,000 females, while last year in the cities and towns 15,982 males were born to 14,913 females, or about 1,060 males to 1,000 females. The 1916 ratio showed a still larger preponderance of males.

There has been a steady falling off in the number of marriages during the war. Last year there were but 21,493, compared with 23,401 in 1916, 23,506 in 1915, 24,245 in 1914 and 26,998 in 1913. Evidently while war has hastened many marriages, it has had the result of postponing matrimony for large numbers of young people.

The absence of so many healthy young men at the front might have been expected to increase the death ratio among the people at home. Instead of an increase, however, there has been a decrease, though the figures have fluctuated during the war. There were 33,268 deaths in 1917, compared with 34,317 in 1913. The highest rate since 1913 was in 1916, when 35,580 deaths were recorded. The other war years, however, have a lower rate than 1913.

THE ORIGIN OF "LUCIFERS."

Early Matches So Named Because of Their Brimstone Smell.

Now that matches are officially priced at a penny a box they are dearer, probably, than at any time within living memory.

Even at this figure, however, they would have been esteemed dirt cheap by our grandfathers. For the earliest matches, called Eupyrions, were retailed at a shilling a box.

Moreover, these matches were not complete in themselves. True, they had red "heads," not unlike those of the modern matches, but no amount of friction, whether on the box or anywhere else, would cause them to ignite. In order to attain this result the match had to be dipped into a bottle containing sulphuric acid and quickly withdrawn.

It was not until 1823 that this cumbrous method was superseded by the friction match proper, which was ignited by being drawn through folded sandpaper. It was the invention of a fireworks maker named Congreve, the same who afterwards gave his name to the famous war rocket, another of his inventions.

And because people deemed that there was something diabolical in these slivers of wood bursting into flame practically of their own accord, and because, too, they smelt so abominably of brimstone, they were promptly christened "lucifer" matches.—Pearson's Weekly.

SWEARING IN CANADA.

According to Gen. McDougall It Is a Universal Habit.

General Alex. McDougall writes to a London newspaper of a trifling difference in manners and customs. Apparently he has noted especially the greater, if not superior, retraint in language on the eastern side of the North Atlantic. Thus he tells the newspapers that there should be no surprise or shock at the language which the Canadians use abroad just as they do at home. In Canada, he says, everybody swears. He adds placidly:

"It is natural to us. In Canada every one swears. My little boy—he was 6 years of age at the time—was swearing one day in the kitchen and the cook told him if he was not careful his teeth would drop out. He looked up at her—only 6 years of age, mind you—and says: 'Daddy's teeth haven't dropped out!' What do you think of that?"

Now a statement like that from our own wild and woolly West would surprise no one, except that we should recognize it as less characteristic than it was some years ago, say about the time Dickens visited this country.—Hartford Times.

RECRUITING STARTS FOR AIR CADETS.

MEN IN CLASS ONE MAY JOIN BY ENLISTING FIRST IN C. E. F.

Recruiting of cadets for the Royal Air Force is now again in full swing, men are again being taken for immediate service, and those who are eligible are being sworn in for the reserve. The reserve is composed of men below the Military Service Act age, and therefore men who are in the nineteen year old class can now only be taken for immediate service. Candidates who are of Military Service Act age, single and under 30, after passing medical tests at the Royal Air Force Recruiting Offices, have to enlist in Depot Battalions. The officers commanding Depot Battalions are then requested by the Royal Air Force to send such approved men to the Royal Air Force for final approval. Married men under 30 years of age are also eligible. Men of the nineteen year old class must produce a certificate from the Registrar to the effect that they have registered.

Steam Yacht Docks at the Peterboro Wharf

Owner and Party are Giving Peterboro the Once Over—The Chef's Opinion.

The 'IKestrel" a long low steam yacht, with a rakish bow, suggesting one of Britain's torpedo-boat destroyers is anchored at the George street Government dock. She is 86 feet long just five foot shorter than the Stoney Lake. The hull is painted white while the upper works and fittings are varnished. She has a large dining cabin forward which contains all the reuisites of a dining room on land. Near the centre of the yacht is the bridge. Aft are the entrances to the staterooms and the storm deck which is furnished with luxurious cane furniture. Below is the fo castle where the crew sleep, then the cook room, the engine room and at the stern the commodious state rooms. There are two large life boats one of which is a gasoline boat.

CANAL WELL BUILT

The boat is owned by Mr. W. W. Near of Toronto, a wealthy lead pipe and munition manufacturer. He has on board a party of Toronto lawyers who have explored all parts of Lake Ontario this summer. The boat has been up the New York State Barge Canal but the chef is doubtful whether it is as substantial and well-built as the Trent Canal.

Mr. Near was formerly the owner of a large ocean-going yacht which used to sail to Florida every year. The owner is a great tarpon fisherman and as the chef expressed it

"Tarpon are about as numerous as gold watches on the street."

The crew consists of a captain, engineer, a waiter and a sailor. The boat is driven by two powerful 65 H.P. standard engines at a rate of 12 miles an hour.

The crew who are nearly all Americans expressed great surprise at Canadian cities and Canadians in general. They thought that Canada was nothing but an overgrown forest with about 35 degrees below zero in the winter time.

"This is a most wonderful and well built city," said the chef.

What ho, ye merry housewife, with smiles all o'er your face,
Get ready for to-morrow to run the bargain race.
The winner gets the prizes
The loser does a swear,
We get the fun as we see you run,
And we sing "Begone dull care."

AN ANALYSIS OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

Most accidents are avoidable and may be avoided if the danger is recognized or realized in time. Few motorists are careless, but many there are who do not possess the sixth sense of skill which enables them to see the crisis far enough ahead to elude it.

Motoring is a splendid game in which the object is to drive the car from day to day without even a close shave, let alone a damaged mudguard or possibly a wrecked car. Pitted against the driver and his mount are constantly changing currents of traffic which combine in various ways. To make it more difficult the direction and contor of the road and the quality of the surface vary in unexpected fashion. Obstacles such as ditches, telegraph poles, steep hills, stone fences and trees have a hand in making the game harder. Therefore it is only natural in the give and take of traffic movement that emergencies arise, and the driver must be trained to see the danger while it is still a potential one and not simply taught how to be able to wiggle out of it after it becomes a reality.

Car Without Brakes.

Give the average man a car without any brakes on it, but with the steering gear in perfect condition, to operate over a level stretch of country, and he will drive so slowly that the chances of an accident are very small. But give the same man a car with both brakes and steering, in good shape, and he will cheerfully enter a situation in which his brakes may not be available without slowing down. Why? Because he has failed to realize the seriousness of the situation. Take the brakes off entirely and he will be careful, but allow him to enter a situation in which his brakes are of no use and the chances are that he will become cautious until the unexpected happens and he is abreast of the danger.

Conversely, give him a car with brakes O.K. but with the steering gear so deranged that it may stick temporarily at any moment, with the wheels pointed straight ahead, and he will drive very slowly except perhaps when the road is clear. Yet he thinks nothing of dashing into a situation where it is impossible to steer to one side or the other, where the only way of preventing a mishap is by using the brakes.

Whenever it is seen that there is a possibility of either brakes or steering gear becoming useless it is advisable to proceed more carefully—so carefully that when an emergency arises, either one, whichever is available, will be sufficient for the exigency.

There is an element of surprise in every accident, and the motorist should be able to foretell a situation far enough in advance so that he rarely will be surprised. Suppose he is overtaking an open street car, when alongside a man jumps off without warning directly in front of the car. There is no time to stop—brakes ineffective—but he pulls up sharply to the right—steering effective—and avoides the man.

When he was approaching the car he should have had in mind the possibility of a man jumping off. In which case he would have left a comfortable margin of roadway between the motor car and the street car, or at least if passing close to the car he would watch vigilantly for any indication that a passenger was suddenly going to jump headlong in the way of his car. The road might have been too narrow to avoid accident, or he might have been passing another machine. The steering as well as brakes would have been useless. Therefore, in passing the street car he should have proceeded as slowly as seemed prudent, considering that the steering was temporarily useless.

In passing along a congested street with several lines of traffic from curb to curb, there is great danger when close to vehicles parked along the curb that somebody will dart out directly in front of the car. Steering is out of the question, and the time is so short that the brakes will not arrest the machine unless it is moving slowly. Hence it is advisable to watch the movement of pedestrians carefully to prevent accidents of this sort.

When two or three persons are crossing the roadway together it is necessary to be more careful how you steer than when one is crossing. No matter how badly confused a single person may become it is almost invariably possible to steer the car around him if there is not time to slow down. But with more than one there is danger that in their confusion they will scatter so that whatever path is chosen for the car there is the certainty of hitting one of them.

The point is that there are only two ways of avoiding accident, by using the brakes and steering. Most road mishaps are due to failure to realize their approach to a crisis which may render one or both ineffective, and it is not until both are useless that the smash takes place.

ARMED FUGITIVES 40,000 STRONG

Austria Going Gradually to the Old Mediaeval Days.

SOLDIERS ROAM COUNTRY.

Terrorizing and Robbing Peasantry and Defying All Authority.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONT, Aug. 9.—Prisoners taken lately on the Italian front tell of greatly increased disaffection in Austria - Hungary. Mutiny and desertion in the army and food riots and strikes among the civil population occur throughout the heterogeneous empire of the Hapsburgs. According to these accounts Austria seems to be going gradually back to the old mediaeval days when bands of discharged soldiers in arms roamed Central Europe terrorizing and robbing the peasantry and defying all authority. Scattered about in forest and moorland there are today many little groups of outlaws, and, as in Montenegro, more brigands who live by plunder. Deserters from the Austrian army rally to these bands of freebooters, more especially men who have returned from long periods as prisoners of war in Russia and find they are now required to rejoin as soldiers. Military patrols sent against them often go over to the mutineers. There is an organization of armed fugitives from military service in Moravia which is known as the Green Guards, and is said to be 40,000 strong, while in Hungary a sort of Robin Hood band has come into being which calls itself the Royal and Imperial Brigands of Bihar. These general outlaws are already the heroes of popular ballads, and have reserves of stolen ammunition and supplies hidden in the forests.

SOME ALDERMEN EXPECTED HOUSING COMMITTEE REPORT

Several of the aldermen expressed some disappointment on Monday night over the absence of the Housing Committee, which, it was expected, would present a report of their several meetings. If the committee depends upon the Council for assistance, they will first have to show some of the doubting aldermen that there is a local need of more houses, that a scarcity exists, and that the Government's assistance should be reached for.

There is a more or less indifferent attitude in the Council and elsewhere toward this question, which some citizens have deemed so serious that they have already identified themselves with the preliminary conferences to discover the city's housing needs. One alderman who usually takes a live interest in most problems admitted that he had not given the housing question much thought. He had been told, he said, that real estate dealers had twenty-five houses for sale, an indication that there was no pressing scarcity of houses. It was not stated whether these houses were situated in desirable sections or not. Opposed to the real estate men's estimate is the Housing Committee's report that one hundred or more employees desire to buy houses for themselves, and have signified their readiness to consider the plan of financing that was recently announced by the Legislature.

MILLIONS IN PETROGRAD ARE NEAR STARVATION

Food Constantly Growing Scarcer and Famine Winter Looming—Even Proletariat Often Hungry—Long Lines Form Before the Shops.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 9.— Petrograd is a city of despair and near starvation, or many months a threatening phantom, hunger, already has struck down thousands. A great majority of the 2,000,000 persons now crowded into the once proud capital of Peter the Great know what it means to be without food, and know that winter is coming with probably worse in store.

Long lines form early in the morning before the shop to buy food. Thousands storm incoming trains in a wild scramble for food brought in by peasants and travelling soldiers. In front of every shop window where foodstuffs are displayed people stand and gaze longingly with their eyes glued to the window panes.

Petrograd is a city with its pockets full of worthless money. Money presses are working overtime and wages are increasing, but neither can keep up with the rising prices.

The Nevsky Prospekt, "the" street of Petrograd, is a picturesque evidence of the city's interest in food. In this season of white nights every hour of the twenty of daylight sees it lined from one end to the other with street vendors selling cakes and chocolate and candies and queer little pancakes called "bleeneys" and sugar in lumps from carefully guarded little boxes.

Persons who formally owned limousines and lived in palace-like homes along the Neva are selling candy and biscuits in the streets to earn their living. Their customers are opulent sailors and workmen, who buy biscuits at fabulous prices because even they, part of the time, cannot get bread.

Theer is a daily sight that always brings hopeful smiles—the motor lorry loaded with flour on its way to the soldiers' bakery. There is some flour, after all, and that is worth a smile in Petrograd these days. Six cavalrymen ride in front of the lorry and six sailors, heavily armed, are perched high on the sacks.

One need not be surprised if the lady dressed in silks and satins— once a member of the bourgeoisie—who sells him a biscuit on the corner addresses him in any of the tow'or three foreign languages she knows. Then, one may buy newspapers from graybeards in frock coats and silk hats and former army officers in shiny boots. All are trying to earn a livelihood in the "commune" of Petrofrad, where property is confiscated and incomes have vanished.

Some of those on the Nevsky are girls, pretty ones, and they walk the long length of the street all the day and into the night asking for the little postage stamps that pass for money in Russia now—because they are hungry And then there are other girls, and the number grows larger every day, who do not exactly beg, but look wistful and hungry, and sell themselves, instead of biscuits, or chocolate, or newspapers, to the rollicking sailors and debonair speculators.

One of the mysteries of Russia is where the vendors of cakes and biscuits get the things they sell. There is absolutely no flour to be had, and the bread allowance per person, which one sometimes gets and sometimes doesn't, is one-half of a pound daily for the proletariat and one-eighth of a pound daily for the bourgeoisie. The bread is black and heavy, and its ingredients cannot be identified. Sugar cannot be obtained in the shops.. In the homes, horse meat, dried cabbage, and what bread is available constitute the principal diet for the majority. Eggs, butter and milk are high in price and extremely scarce.

Formerly an income of 200 rubles a month was comparative opulence. Now, according to the best estimates available, it costs from 2,500 to 3,000 rubles a month to maintain a family of three in anything like comfort. Most of the families in Petrograd, even with wages soaring, have less than 1,000 rubles a month. But even the wealthy suffer hunger pangs, because transportation is crippled and the city is cut off from the Ukraine, its principle flour and sugar producing territory, and from the nearby Finnish and Baltic communities that once supplied it with butter, milk, eges and vegetables.

In the city's largest hotels, some formerly among the show places of Europe, there is no electric light, no elevators, no hot water, and generally no food. One provides always his own bread, and must keep it under lock and key. A dinner in one of the better class restaurants to-day costs forty rubles.

But the city struggles on. Now desperately and now nonchalantly it strives to adapt itself to the topsy-turviness of its present life.

"Chautauqua" Explained A Great Event

Week's Enjoyment of Music, Lectures and Other Educational Features.

During the fifties and sixties of the last century there sprang up in the States what was known as the Lyceum System, by which eminent and renowned men of the republic, who were placed before thepublic. Lecturers, preachers, soldiers, artists and even humourists were so exploited, to the infinite pleasure and good of the people.

Latterly, with the multitude of attractions offered the lyceum has gone out of fashion. But occasionally one can hear some noted and eminent man who delivers a lecture that has been known all over the world. Such an opportunity comes to you in the coming to Peterborough of the Chautauqua, next week. The whole week. You can go and hear, for instance, the first evening, "The Camouflage of Kaiserism" by Dr T. W. Davidson of Montreal. He is an Irishman. Born in Belfast and translated to Montreal he stands at thehead of Canadian orators an painters of pictures in spoken wors. His lecture is n open, up-to-the minute message, crowded with wit and wisdom.

On the second evening, you can hear (and see) the great illuminated lecture, "The Story Beautiful" by the noted Priest-Orator, Father P. J. MacCorry. It is said that this lecture is the most beautiful and impressive known to the Chautauqua. It is a remarkable treat and a liberal education as well.

Kentucky produces and has produced, among other things, Colonels, Majors, fast horses of large renown, and latterly has produced Col. Geo. W. Bain, an eloquent citizen, who has over fortly years of active experience on the platform. He is one of America's most beloved private citizens. Almost as much beloved as that other Colonel, the militant editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal. Both are fighters and both are eloquent. The lecture to be delivered by Col. Bain "If I could Live LifeOver," is a gem. Of engrossing interest. Most pregnant with what life has had and may have for us all. Don't fail to hear this brilliant orator.

Further mention will eb made of the other good things to be heard and seen. An remember, you can have the whole week, morning, afternoon and evening, for the price of two dollars. Get your tickets anywhere. Look at the advertising and it will tell you where to go.

Voice of The People

To The Editor of The Examiner:—

Dear Sir,—

Mr. Burnham's suggestion of the opening of the Golf Links for the public generally to use is one which will hardly be criticized except, perhaps by the Golf Club Officials, for there is nearer at hand an open space which has within the last few weeks become a most popular institution and this is Inverlea Park.

Sergeant Cooper is in charge and on hot afternoons and nights the park is literally crowded with women and children seeking relief from the heated parts of the city. Children as young as three and four years may be seen cooling themselves off between the retaining wall and the shore, while the expert swimmers enjoy the cool waters of the river outside the retaining wall where the current is just rapid enough at this point to keep the water clear and fresh.

However, one ground of complaint, which seems to be a fairly material one is that there are old stumps and roots of trees between the retaining wall and the shore covering a large area which makes this part of the river, in places impossible to be used by the bathers and as this is the only place for young children it makes dangerous footing under the water for the young children wading in this part of the river. In addition to that some marsh weeds and grass have grown up in one part which should be removed and if this were done it would make a most satisfactory bathing place.

It seems to me that if a few men like Messrs J. J. Turner, G. O. Cameron and B. D. Hall and a few other public spirited citizens who usually put energy into every movement for the betterment of local conditions were to form a committee with other public spirited citizens, a small fund could be collected to meet the cost of removing al lthe debris opposite the park and make it a satisfactory bathing place In addition to that there has ben some old cans and bottles submerged by thoughtless persons; which might be removed if the water was lowered for a day or so.

It may be suggested, however, that this bathing place is not used only by the north ward residents, for on several occasions when I have been there I have observed a larg enumber of residents from the south and west wards enjoying this great natural asset. I think that if a moderate sum of money were spent for cleaning this small section of the river shore it would be money, indeed well pent.

For myself I would be willing to assist in any way I could and would like to co-operate with Mr. Burnham in his desire to create a place where the public, particularly the children could be relieved fro mthe intense heat of the city, whenever needed.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—To settle an argument, will you please state in your valuable paper whether or not the 57th Band opens their Friday night concert in Victoria Park with the National Anthem? A says they do, and B says they do not.—Yours truly,

A.

Editor.—The National Anthem, "God Save the King," has been played at the first of every band concert up to the last couple of weks. In their last two weeks "O Canada" was played. It is at the discretion of the bandmaster whether a patriotic air shall be played first or not. This rule prevails in the Coldstream Guards' Band or any other Imperial Guards' regiment.

BASEBALL

Last night's League fixture between Matthews-Blackwell and the Riversides, which was postponed, will be played to-morrow at Riverside Park at 2.45 p.m. A good crowd should be on hand.

On Monday, Civic Holiday, there will be a double-header at the grounds. In the morning the Matthews-Blackwell nine will meet the Lindsay All-Stars. This should be a good game.

A twilight game at 6.30 will also be held between Cobourg and Jake Soloman's Riversides. Jake's men expect to turn the tables on the Lakeshore bunch.

Civic Holiday In Peterboro

If You Stay in Town See the Sports at Exhibition Grounds.

On previous Civic Holidays for years there has been no attraction in the city for those who were unable to get away for the day.

This year the Exhibition Board has arranged a programme for the holiday, which they know is one they can recommend in every particular. They say positively that the horse races will be the best seen here for years, as horses from Wolfe Island, Kingston, Belleville, Orillia, Colborne and other places have entered, and some of the horses here already.

The tug-of-war is going to bring out at least four teams in competition. Entries to be completed tomorrow night at the Examiner Office at nine (9) o'clock.

The motor cycle race entries will also be made up at the same time.

Vaudeville.

The Twirling Talbots have been engaged to give a grandstand performance, and "Raffles" will endeavour to extricate himself from a straight jacket built for the occasion by J. J. Turner & Sons. In addition, he has an excellent programme that he will "pull off" in front of the grandstand.

Living Pictures.

The Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E. are using the main building to give their living picture exhibit under the direction of Mrs. A. A. Perrin. Everybody should see this exhibit.

The 57th Battalion Band will put on a fine musical programme.

If you are in the city Civic Holiday be sure and see this programme. The cheapest and best amusement you can get for the day.

Admission to grounds, 35 cents.

When potatoes and other vegetables take place of bread at a meal, one may venture to have the dessert of shortcake.

THE ALLIES ARE MAKING PROGRESS TOWARDS NESLE

Enemy Has Suffered Heavy Losses —One Division Was Practically Decimated.

HEAVY FIGHTING

(By John De Gandt—United Press.)

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The Franco-British advance is continuing. Bouchoir, south of Bozieres, has been reached, and the Allies are making progress towards Nesle. According to press despatches to Paris newspapers this afternoon, the Allies are reported to have passed through Rosieres-in-Santerre, as far as Linons, where they are menacing Chaulnes.

Progress in the region of Foucaucourt may menace Peronne from the south, the despatches said.

Terrible losses have been suffered by the enemy. The 27th and 8th and 43rd German divisions were among the hardest hit. The 115th division, which arrived on the battlefield the night before the attack, was practically decimated.

In the region of Morlancourt the British were unable to maintain their positions.

The Chipillu spur around the foot of which flows the Somme, is the scene of very heavy fighting. The Wurtemburgers there were ordered to hold despite any losses.

THE END OF THE CONFLICT IS NEAR, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 9. — We have a right to feel confident in the good news the end of the tunnel is nearer, Premier Lloyd George declared today in a speech at Neath.

"We are fighting for the right. God, in his righteousness, will see us through. When victory comes there will be no greed, no tearing up, no vengeance. I have no apology for the part I have taken in this conflict. I propose to fight through to the end. I don't think I've been too optimistic."

Hit By G.T.R. Train Deaf Man is Dead Gates Were Down

George Morrison Lived Two Hours After Accident—Was an Old Man Over 90 Years, It Was Reported.

George Morrison, 281 Park street, died at the Nicholls Hospital at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon short two hours after being struck by the noon train from Port Hope at the King street crossing. Over 90 years of age, it was stated, the old man was deaf and lame requiring crutches. Approaching Bethune street on King street, he ignored the gates which were set against pedestrian traffic, walked around the shorter arm and without looking to either side continued to drag himself across the tracks.

John Horner, the gatemen, shouted a hurried warning to him, but Mr. Morrison showed no signs of having heard it. The passanger train from Port Hope was approaching comparatively slow for there was another train ahead of it. The old man had cleared the rails, and for a moment it seemed that he was safely across but it was only for one flashing anxious moment. Then the projecting buffer beam above the pilot, on the front of the engine, struck Mr. Morrison about the right shoulder and hurled him to the concrete sidewalk. His body was clear of the wheels, but the first examination indicated that he had been seriously injured about the head. Dr. Malcolm McCulloch was called and Mr. Morrison was hurried to the Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's ambulance. It was announced at the hospital shortly before going to press that he had succumbed to his injuries, the exact nature of which could not be learned.

At the G. T. R. station, it was stated that eyewitnesses, including the engineer of the train, had expected the old man to make the crossing securely. Not only had he walked past the gates which had been dropped, but when he reached tracks he looked neither up or down the tracks. He apparently could not hear the cries of those who saw his danger, and was both helpless and seemingly could not be helped. At least the eyewitnesses did not know of his deafness, and had no time to discover it.

Mr. Morrison is said to have been in his 97th year.

CHINESE LABOUR FOR COAL MINES

Carvell Declares Canada Must Get Out More Coal—Will Otherwise Be Suffering This Winter.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 9.—Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, in an interview yesterday takes a very serious view of the fuel situation in Canada and advocates strongly the temporary importation of coolie labour as the solution of the problem. The labour question has been before the Cabinet repeatedly this summer, but there is ground for the inference that in methods for solving the difficulties which are presented the Ministers do not exactly see eye to eye.

"There is likely to be untold suffering in the country next winter for lack of fuel," declared Hon. Mr. Carvell.

"The situation is that miners are working only about 75 per cent. of the time and getting such big wages that they can afford to loaf the rest of the time. There are industrial plants in Canada which do not know where their power is coming from next winter. This applies to steel plants.

"What is the remedy? I would put ten thousand Chinamen at work in coal mines, steel plants and railway construction gangs — put them where they can be segregated, and of course have them under indenture to go back when the war is over. This is what they are doing in England and France. Why not in Canada?

"There is time enough between now and next winter to do a lot and produce sufficient fuel to obviate a very threatening situation. It may not be popular to advocate such action as I do, but this is no time for pussy-footing."

British Forces Still Pushing

er, northwest of Merville, to a maximum depth of 2,000 yards. Our troops now hold Locon, Lecornet Malo, Quentin, Le Petit, Pacaut and Le Sart. We carried out successful local operations last night north of Kemmel, advancing our line a short distance over a front of 1,000 yards, and capturing thirty prisoners.

Turning Point.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, August 9.—The general feeling here of the importance of the successful new battle cannot be overestimated. It is regarded as the turning point of the year's campaign, and perhaps even the turning point of the whole war. It was only a month ago that all talk of the British military critics was whether the Allies could hold on in the face of the great German offensive which the German people had been told was to be the finish of the war. The initiative has now been taken from the enemy and within a month the Allies have engaged in two important battles with conspicuous success.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, August 9.—In the aerial fighting Wednesday, preceding the offensive in Picardy, British airmen accounted for twenty-two German machines, fifteen of which were destroyed, says the official statement on aerial operations. Eighteen tons of bombs were dropped during the day and night. One British machine is missing.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT.

His Grave Found in Reconquered Territory.

With the American Army on the Vesle, Aug. 9.—On a wooden cross at the head of a grave at the edge of a wood at Chamery, east of Fere-en-Tardenois, is this inscription: "Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, buried by the Germans." The inscription is in English.

Coal Distribution Considered Good

SAYS U. S. ANTHRACITE COMMITTEE.

More in Consumers' Hands Than Ever Before in August—Only Danger of Dearth in Labour Shortage.

More anthracite coal is now in consumers' possession than ever before at this time of the year, according to a statement made by the Anthracite Committee at Philadelphia.

During the four months just ended, far more anthracite was delivered to the ultimate consumers than ever before in the same period. Day by day, week by week, since April 1, the coal has been mined and prepared in the largest quantity possible with the greatly reduced labour power. In all, above 26,000,000 tons have been produced, and as fast as it has been taken out the coal has passed forward and into the actual possession of those who use it.

With a third of the coal year behind some 17,250,000 tons of anthracite of the domestic sizes have been actually delivered to householders and other consumers. They are numbered by millions. They live in a territory embracing twenty-four states and eastern Canada. Thus, has the anthracite industry been performing. A great task has been so far successfully accomplished.

It has been possible to do what has been done only because of the large advance development of the anthracite industry; its highly efficient organization and the complete co-ordination of its activities which were voluntarily arranged as an important war-time measure. The whole work has been carried forward in a quiet business way that reached the goal.

Labour Conditions.

"Since April 1, the anthracite industry has strained to get to market the maximum amount of coal," says the committee. "It has worked and is working with knowledge that the most it can do, running greatly short-handed as it is, will not fully supply the abnormally big and still expanding demand for anthracite which war conditions have created in urgent form.

"In previous years, the summer season has often seen reduced activities in the anthracite regions, and a big piling up of coal at the storage plants, which the various companies provided to hold anthracite which the markets could not immediately take. This year these storage yards are bare, but against this there is to-day a far greater proportion of next winter's anthracite requirements actually in the consumers' possession than ever before at the beginning of August.

"Were it not for the serious and increasing labour shortage, which holds down anthracite production fully 25 per cent. below what it otherwise could be, there would be no worrying in the possible danger of a lack of anthracite next winter, with the big preparedness start which has been made."

ONE SQUARE MEAL.

Burgomaster Bribes Residents to Bring in Supplies With Brandy Offer.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 9.—The Burgomaster of Arnsberg, Westphalia, Germany, having failed in all endeavours to induce the farmers of the neighbourhood to bring in supplies, placed this advertisement in the local newspaper as a final hope:

"This municipality will buy all agricultural products for cash at Government prices. Every person who delivers 100 pounds of bread grain or 300 pounds of potatoes will receive a ticket entitling him to buy a bottle of brandy or rum at reduced prices from the municipal cellars."

Within 24 hours the cellars were empty and the residents of Arnsberg enjoyed the first square meal they had had for weeks.

If Potatoes Were 50c Would You Pay $1.30?

Not on your bank balance. If you did, your address would soon be changed to the violent ward of the Court House jail.

Then why in the name of sane men do you keep on doing things that are just as bad. Why do you fellows not place your order for your fall suit and overcoat NOW and save 20 to 25 per cent. instead of hanging back and paying a huge price next November and December. Suits that the Scotland Woolen Mills Co will make up for you now for somewhere about $25 to $30. will, a sure as taxes, cost all the way from $40 to $50. next fall—at least that's the way things look just now. And this is not by any means an isolated case. Hundreds of thoughtful men are already making sure savings by booking their orders with Frank H. Hourigan the head push for the Scotland Woolen Mills Co. NOW. If you need a winter suit or top coat order NOW at the store with the tartan front, 161 Hunter street.

CHOLERA-INFANTUM

Cholera Infantum is one of the fatal ailments of childhood. It is a trouble that comes on suddenly, especially during the summer months and unless prompt action is taken the little one may soon be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets are an ideal medicine in warding off this trouble. They regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus prevent all the dreaded summer complaints. Concerning them Mrs. Fred Rose, South Bay, Ont., says:—"I feel Baby's Own Tablets saved the life of our baby when she had cholera infantum and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mortality is increasing and great numbers of Poles are leaving their country because of the rigorous conditiosn of life under the German rule.

Report on Condition of Field Crops in Canada Show Satisfactory Results

Hay is About Average in Ontario—Barley Will be an Excellent Yield—Corn is Now Growing Rapidly—Oats Will be a Good Crop.

APPLES WILL BE LIGHT CROP

A summary of telegraphic reports on the condition of field crops in Canada at the end of July was issued today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as follows:

Atlantic Provinces. — Prince Edward Island (Charlottetown): Frequent beneficial showers early in July greatly increased hay crops, heavy crops of cereals; rain has given all herd crops, except corn, a sturdy vigorous growth. Small fruits below average; large fruits now promising. Nova Scotia (Amherst): July weather very unsettled. All vegetables made splendid growth, present prospects for grain and root crops good. Hay only fair, potatoes good, bugs very bad, seed roots good. (Kentville): Rain early in July furnished much needed moisture, and very materially increased the hay yield, which will average 75 p.c. of normal. Grains are exceptionally good; roots are good; corn making strong growth; potatoes promise to be a fair crop. New Brunswick (Fredericton): Durfirst half of July every day was wet and precipitation totalled five inches. Much crop lost from flooding. An average crop of hay is partly harvested. All other crops on dry land; except wheat and apples, promise a fair yield.

Quebec. — Roberval (Chicoutimi and Saguenay): Everything favourable if weather continues fine; hay less than last year, corn good; early sown grain fine; potatoes will give a very good yield. Wheat not successful. Ste. Anne De La Pocatiere (Kamouraska): Weather unsettled rather cold, with excessive rainfall; damage to all crops during last half of the month; haying backward; hay an average crop, poor prospect for grain of all kinds; potatoes fair; tree fruits very light. Lennoxville: Hay, which is being harvested late this season on account of the wet weather, is giving nearly an average crop. The extra warm weather the latter part of the month, followed with showers, has done much to bring along the corn and other crops. Oka and Two Mountains (Vaulreuil, Soulanges): Crops in general abundant. Wheat exceptionally good. Oats and barley good. More smut and lodging than usual. Fodder corn improving since heat, but will not give more than 60 p.c. of good stand. Potatoes promising in spite of disease noticed on wet soils. Peas, beans, and vegetables, full crop. Apples, summer varieties, bear lightly, winter practically nothing. Makamik (Pontiac): Conditions materially improved by rain and warmth of the last fifteen days, hay especially; it promises average yield; wheat very fine; other cereals good and yield probably above average; garden potatoes very fine; no damage by frost.

Ontario.—The Ontario Department of Agriculture telegraphs as follows: "Hay about average, cut well cured; fall wheat small yield of good quality; barley excellent yield, but some smut; spring wheat, oats and buckwheat promising; all grains rather short in straw; corn now growing rapidly; beans and peas look better than for years; potatoes and roots promise good yields; field crop averages as a rule are larger than last season." Ottawa (Central Experimental Farm): Hay a fair crop; oats a good crop; spring wheat good, but very little grown; roots promise very well; corn will be a poor crop; it is very late and uneven and the seed was bad; uasture grasses fairly good.

Manitoba.—Brandon: Rain in last week came too late to save wheat, which will be less than half a normal crop. Hay crop a failure from drought; oats and barley very light, but late crops greatly helped by recent rains. Morden: Weather conditions have much improved; rainfall has been quite ample during the latter half of July. Temperatures are low for the most part, especially at night; no frost, no hail. Wheat promises fair crop, not greater than 15 bushels per acre. Perhaps ten per cent. blown out in early season and reseeded in some instances; oats and barley promise fair crop. Barley promises well, no rust in sight. Hay prospects decidedly poor. Potatoes promise big crop; flax not generally grown, uneven.

Saskatchewan.— The Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture telegraphs as follows: South-Eastern Regina, Weyburn and South Central Distircts. Heavy rains during the past week have greatly improved crop outlook; in some places crops are reported as equal to last year. South-Western District: Crop will average from fair in north to total failure in south. East Central, North-eastern and North-western Districts: Heavy frosts 24th and 25th, too early to estimate damage, but afraid it will be very serious as some wheat in blossom stage. Central and West Central Districts: Heavy rains have greatly improved conditions, especially north of Regina and Moose Jaw. In western part of district crops are reported almost a total failure. In all southern parts of the province many farmers are selling stock as no feed is available.

Indian Head.— July warm with heavy showers from 18th to 29th, crop outlook greatly improved; from 1 to 8 degrees frost reported on 24th; corn, potatoes and garden crops slightly damaged in this district; no damage to grain yet apparent, fallow wheat promises good average crop, stubble wheat and early sown oats will be short, late sown oats and barley greatly improved, hoed crops coming along rapidly. No damage from hail reported during month.

Alberta.— The Alberta Department of Agriculture telegraphs as follows: "Considerable damage has been done by frost throughout the central and northern portions of the province during the past week, the full extent of which cannot be ascertained at present, but the indications are that it is not general but more or less irregular. A large portion of the southern part of the province was visited by heavy rains during the past few days which will do much to revive late crops and pasture lands. Sufficient hay and pasture lands have been located in the northern districts to take care of all applications from the south." Lacombe: First ten days of July hot and dry; rains from 12th proved sufficient to carry crops and improve pastures; frost night of 23rd damaged crops in many points. From Wetaskiwin north and east and from Stettler east crop outlook poor to fair. Lethbridge: Drought in Southern Alberta partly broken by rains which were general during week beginning 21st, but as less than an inch fell more must come at once to improve conditions grain; everything failure except that grain; everything faiure except that sown on summer fallow, cutting commenced.

British Columbia.—Agassiz: Weather conditions during July hot and comparatively dry; crop prospects somewhat improved over June; harvesting of cereals just started; fall wheat premises good crop. Invermere: Crops under irrigation very good, dry farming a failure. Alfalfa, first cutting particularly good, second crop promises well; clover, peas, potatoes very good, roots and wheat good, oats and barley fair. Sidney: Autumn cereals cut, will thresh an average yield; Spring cereals short and ripening fast; corn and root crops below average; stock seeds very short; live stock at present in good condition.

Buckwheat Sweet Bread.

Two tablespoons of shortening, 3 tablespoons of sugar, 1 egg, 1 teacup of sour milk, @ teaspoon of soda, 2 tablespoons of wheat flour, and 1½ cups of buckwheat flour. Dissolve soda in sour milk, mix and pour into a small dripping pan and bake in a moderately hot oven.

This should be eaten while warm with butter, and is delicious. A larger amount can be made by doubling quantity given.

Armies

It is frequently pointed out that no comparison should be made between the Fighting Army at the Front and the Industrial Army at Home, because the former supports National Honour and the latter produces Private Gain.

This is good reasoning and doubtless if we had it to do again we should square the facts with the logic, but---

What we have to do is NOW, always now, and the "NOW" of the matter is---

Private Contractors manufacturing Munitions of War and---

Munitions of War never more urgently needed than at this very minute.

Therefore the obvious duty of the Industrial Army is to loyally back the Fighting Army, and this applies alike to the "Generals" in the office and the "Privates" in the shop.

The Fighting Army CAN'T stop to hold a Court-Martial: The Industrial Army SHOULDN'T stop to hold an arbitration but---it should arbitrate its differences because---

Both Armies have only one enemy---

CATTLE MARKET

Cattle prices from the opening of this week's market took on a decidedly firmer tone. A lighter run on Monday helped to stiffen the market, especially for the heavy steers, which scored an advance of 25c. to 50c. over the previous week, holding this advance through the succeeding markets up till the close on Thursday, when a load of 20 fancy quality heavy steers, sold by Rice & Whaley, beat the record for the past few weeks at $15.90. The improved tone of the market is not confined to the heavy steers' class, buthcers' steers and heifers of good quality selling firmer at an advance of 25c. to 30c. over last week. The week-end markets were comparatively quiet, with light runs of mostly poor quality, but anything of weight and quality holding the earlier advance, while the common stuff held steady, but with very little change from the past couple of weeks.

There has been a good demand throughout the week for fat butcher cows and bulls of good weight and quality.

The calf trade has been fairly steady, considering the large proportion of poor stuff offering.

The heavy run of lambs on Monday proved too much for the demand, and prices suffered a slump of from $4 to $5, and failed to make any recovery during the week. Light sheep were but barely steady, with a tendency lower.

the week, starting off at $0, fed and ih eweek, starting off at $20, fed and watered, maintaining this level to the close.

GRAIN MARKETS.

There were but fractional changes at the close of the markets. Rains in the South had the effect of checking the bull movement in the corn market prices inclining to sag rather than to continue the upward curve. Union Stock Yards— Receipts yesterday, 76 cars, with 814 cattle, 294 calves, 1,434 hogs, and 544 sheep and lambs.

The cattle market is suffering from the effects of the dry, hot weather. Trade is decidedly dull for the ordinary run of butcher steers and heifers. The demand is comparatively inactive, and very light supplies appear to be quite sufficient for all present requirements. There is a steady demand for the packers for anything in the heavy steers' class for the outside trade, and prices are holding good and steady. For the ordinary butcher steer and heifer the market is weak and 10c. to 15c. lower.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

ALONE ONCE MORE

CHAPTER CXLI.

Mr. and Mrs. Babcock left us immediately after breakfast the next morning. I rode to the station with them, as did George. Mrs. Babcock kissed me fondly and said she never had enjoyed a visit more, never been more perfectly entertained.

"Your little wife is a charming hostess," she said to George, thereby making me happy —happy that he should know how she felt.

"Look the other way, Howard! I am going to kiss this little girl, too," Mr. Babcock remarked. "May I, my dear?"

"Indeed you may!" I responded so heartily that they all laughed.

"Aren't they just lovely?" I asked as George and I stood, for a moment, watching them after they went through the gate.

"They are real people," he replied. "Come on, we'll take a little spin out in the country, then you can drop me at the office. It will do you good to stay out in the air."

I flushed with pleasure. It was lovely to be so appreciated. I felt all at once, repaid for all I had tried to do to win my husband's approval; all at once, I forgot everything that had been hard and disagreeable.

We had a lovely ride, George chatting gaily with me all the time.

When I dropped him at the office, an hour later, I said:

"Thank you for a pleasant morning, George."

A smile and a wave of his hand was hisonly answer, yet it made me happy.

Mrs. Babcock Was Right.

As I rode home, I thought of what Mrs. Babcock had said, and how right she was. If we gave the best of ourselves to others, they returned it in kind. I had lately given my very best to George, in every way. He never had been so appreciative, so evidently pleased with me, as now. When I grumbled, fretted myself and him because I wanted his approval (whether I deserved it or not), I was unhappy, and made him discontented also. I determined to try harder than ever to be all he wanted me to be — all a wife, occuying the position I occupied, should be.

TORONTO, CANADA

It may seem strange to some, that my husband should put so much stress upon my social success. But he was a man of affairs. It was necessary that he entertain —that he have, as a wife, a woman who could do her part. That he had chosen me, a country girl, in spite of knowing that I had no training for the part, did not (as I had long thought) prove that he desired to make me over, so much as that he loved me regardless of my deficiencies. He wanted to make over because of that love, George was wealthy, clever, handsome. He need not have married a simple little country girl. He had married me because he loved me. And I had come dangerously near to losing that love, by my worrying and fretting. I had not realized that he might be just as good a man, even though he was different from the men I had known—my father and my brothers. His life had been different; his outlook, naturally, was different also.

Whenever I thought of my feelings about our child —how I had misjudged him in that—I fel very humble, very eager to do him full justice in all other ways.

Mrs. Sexton Is Ill.

When I reached home, I found a note from Mrs. Sexton asking me to run up and see her, if it were possible. I went immediately. I knew she would not send for me unless it were important. I found her in bed, ill.

"I had been very ill for a day or two, and, although I am better now, there may be days when I cannot see anyone. I wanted to talk to you while I was strong enough to do so."

"But—"

"I shall never be well, dear. I have been ill for years. Don't look so distressed. In some ways, I shall be glad to go."

Until she said that, I had nto realized that she meant she was dangerously ill. It startled me.

"Oh, don't talk that way! You'll soon be better!" I exclaimed.

"No, I never shall be better. I have been ill for years. Perhaps you recall that, when I first came to you, I occasionally asked to use the car? It was salways when I was in such pain that I had to see a specialist."

"Oh, I am so sorry I ever was unkind to you." I leaned over and kised her. "You know I love you, now, don't you? Better than any other woman in Moreland."

"Yes, I know. You didn't understand; that was all. And that is one thing I wanted to see you about; you MUST try to understand your husband— his viewpoint—or you never will be happy. He is an undemonstrative, self-contained man. He loves you, I am sure. It will be your fault, my dear, if you are unhappy."

We chatted for an hour. I told her of my dinner, of my visit to Chicago, and how more than nice George had been to me of late —that he had seldom found fault, etc. When I left it was with a feeling that I might never se her again. I realized she was very ill.

OAT YIELD IN OXFORD.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 8.—Oxford County's oat crop this year will exceed 4,000,000 bushels. These figures are on a basis for an average of less than 25 acres of oats to each 100 acres under cultivation, and an average yield of 30 bushels to the acre. Farmers from the various townships calim in most cases that their oats will run from 50 to 60 bushels per acre, and that the harvesting operations have reached the stage where there is practically no guess work about it.

AN UNSAFE JOB.

To Be a King In Southeastern Europe Is Hazardous.

A king or an heir to a throne in the Balkan states holds the most hazardous position among royalties. The murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg added two more names to the list of royal murders.

Compared with other sections of the world, the 200,000 square miles of Balkan territory present the climax of murder and political intrigue, and the rulers therefore are forced to live in utter loneliness and seclusion.

In the few months that have elapsed since his accession to the throne of Albania Prince William has been in constant terror of his life. Austrian and Italian warships linger within range of his castle at Durazzo, while 500 of their sailors are in constant attendance on the prince.

Twice he has been forced to take refuge on men-of-war while Mussulman insurgents stormed the Albanian capital. Every possible precaution has been taken to guard him, but his life is constantly in danger.

The assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga of Servia at Belgrade in June, 1903, was one of the most tragic in history. With them were slain two of the ministry, the queen's two brothers and two members of the royal guard, who attempted to protect them.

There had been no previous hint of a plot or uprising. The city of Belgrade had been draped with flags in commemmoration of the anniversary of the assassination of Prince Michael, who was slain June 11, 1868, in the park at Topschider, and a requiem mass was being said in his honor.

March 18, 1913, King George I. of Greece was assassinated while walking on the streets of Saloniki. A previous attempt on his life had been unsuccessful.

Other regicides and political murders in this little territory include the following:

July 25, 1895 — Stanislaus Stambouloff, ex-Premier of Bulgaria, killed by four persons armed with knives and revolvers.

Sept. 7, 1878—Pasha Mehemet Ali, murdered by Albanians.

June 4, 1876—Hussem Avni and other Turkish ministers killed by Hassam, a Circassian officer.

June 4, 1876—Abdul Azis, Sultan of Turkey, assassinated.

June 10, 1878—Prince Michael of Servia, killed.

Aug. 13, 1860—Daniel, Prince of Servia, slain.

Oct. 9, 1831—Cato D'Istria, Greek count and statesman, tortured and killed.

The people of the various kingdoms are exceedingly patriotic, but when this passion turns against a king or official an assassination follows.

The Ancient Stone Slingers.

It has been said that Asiatic nations excelled others in the use of the sling, and the slingers of an ancient army used their little weapons with terrible effect. "These natives have such skill," says one old historian, "that it very rarely happens that they miss their aim. What makes them so great in the use of the sling is the training given them from their earliest years by their mothers, who set up a piece of bread hung at the end of a rod for a target and let their children remain without food until they have hit it, when the child who is the victor receives the bread as the reward of his skill and patience."

IF MORE MEN ARE NEEDED

Three Ways to Act—Steps That Can Be Taken By Dominion Governmen—New Military Service Act.

OTTAWA, Aug. 9.—There may be a new Military Service Act this fall if the exigencies of the military situation abroad call for it.

The present Act is specifically limited to 100,000 men. The next batch of figures by the Military Service Council will show that about 90,000 have been secured and the remainder are in immediate prospect.

When the total shall have been enrolled the question will be up to the Government as to what further measures are necessary, and this will involve consideration of the requirements of the forces overseas. In turn these will be governed by the extent of their activities and the resultant wastage. There will also be consideration of the extent to which the country's man-power admits of further being drawn upon.

If the Government considers it expedient to exceed the limit of 100,000 men there are three ways in which it may be done: By an amending act of Parliament; by an amending Order-in-Council under the War Measures Act, or by an entirely new Act passed by Order-in-Council as a war measure. The last mentioned course is not without its advocates, assuming that conditions are such as to justify it. The judgment of the Supreme Court is the Grey case, affirms the right of the Government to amend an Act of Parliament by Order-in-Council, and also places the broadest construction of the powers of the Government in dealing with any condition arising out of the war.

TEN ALLEGED FIT MEN ARE ROUNDED UP.

Captured by Police Squad in Woods in Gatineau District.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—Ten men alleged to be fit for military service, two shotguns and one rifle, were gathered in when Captain J. J. Graham and his squad of military and civil police last night raided shanties in the lonely woods of Cantley township, Gatineau district, opposite the cascades on the Bate & McMahon limits. The men claim they were employed by the foreman for Bate & McMahon, an Ottawa firm. They tried to run away, but did not show fight.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

SAYS WIFE TOLD HIM TO GET OR BE THROWN OUT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Cruel words from friend wife are alleged by William M. Blackman in reply to his wife's complaint in an action for separation brought against him in the Supreme Court. "Mlle. Francoise," as Mrs. Blackman is known in business, conducts a dressmaking establishment in the Hoffman Arms, Madison Avenue and Fifty-Ninth St.

"We were married on October 9, 1900," Mr. Blackman says in his answer, "and since 1911 the plaintiff has been cool, curt, lofty, insulting and superior in her manner toward me, refusing to accept the endearments customary between husband and wife.

"Early in 1918 my wife told me I was not in her social class. 'No, you are not,' she said, 'and I want the house to myself. You can get out at once or I will throw you out.'"

Every Corn With Blue-jay Users Now Has a Two-Day Limit

In the Days of Lifetime Corns

Wrong Ways
Which Millions Have Now Abandoned

THIS is why people kept corns in the old days, and why nearly everybody had them.

Most folks soaked and pared their corns—usually once a week. They never tried to end them. Many people then had corns half as old as they were.

To protect the corn—to stop the pain—they simply used a corn pad. Thus feet were always kept unsightly. And the corn stayed on.

Then someone found that a certain acid often loosened up a corn. A flood of "corn cures"—liquids and plasters—came out with that discovery. And hundreds yet remain.

They were both harsh and uncertain. And were rarely confined to the corn. They were spread on the healthy skin as well, and that often led to soreness.

People tried one, then another, but all were alike. So they finally became discouraged. Then they went back to paring and to pads.

In those days one or more corns deformed nearly every foot. A corn ache blighted nearly every occasion. Nearly every pretty foot had a pad on it. And paring was as common as the bath.

That is true of millions still. But other millions never suffer corns, and never will. Now let us tell you why.

Blue-jay Corn Plasters

Stop Pain Instantly
End Corns Completely
The Modern, Scientific Method
Large Package 25c at Druggists
Small Package Discontinued

The Right Way
Which Half the World Now Uses

A FAMOUS chemist, after years of studying corns, evolved the Blue-jay method.

Bauer & Black, well-known makers of surgical dressings, make and market Blue-jay.

Now anyone can stop a corn ache in a jiffy, and end the corn completely in two days.

The method is scientific. It is gentle and yet certain. It centers itself on the corn.

Apply the Blue-jay and forget the corn. Leave it on two days. Then remove it and the corn will disappear.

Nine corns in ten will do that. One corn in ten needs another application.

Blue-jay has ended in this gentle way, some eighty million corns. It is now removing tens of thousands daily. Perhaps half the corns which develop are now being ended in this way.

Millions of people—users of blue-jay—keep entirely free from corns. Ask the folks about you. You will be amazed to know how few people nowadays suffer corns.

Try Blue-jay on one corn tonight. Note the results. What it does to that corn it will do to all corns. Every new corn after that will have a two-day limit.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Raemaekers of Holland

THE Dutch cartoonist, whose sketches of "Schrecklichkeit" are now appearing in newspapers in Canada, has made mental neutrality impossible for everyone who believes that he has a message. It is a trite saying now that of the Allies Raemaekers, who was almost unknown before the war, is as good as an army corps, or that the Germans would rather lose a great battle if, by that loss, they could lay hands on the artist-Dutchman. It cannot be too often reiterated, however, that the reason why "Kultur" has placed a high price upon him is not merely because, with brutal frankness, he has depicted Germany as the Cain of nations, but because there is no gainsaying the inexorable truth embodied in his cartoons.

Louis Raemaekers spent his early years at Roermond, in Holland, and afterward studied art in Amsterdam and Brussels. Before the war he was living quietly with his family in Haarlem, the heart of tulip-land, where he was contentedly painting the canals, cattle, and windmills of beloved Dutch countryside. Four days after the war began, he drew his first cartoon, "Christendom After Twenty Centuries." He investigated the horrors in Belgium personally; since then, his chief thought has been of the war and how best to aid the cause of the Allies. His early cartoons appeared in the Telegraaf of Amsterdam, and at once attracted general attention. From the outset his works revealed something more than the humorous or ironical power of the caricaturist; they showed that behind the mere pictorial comment on the war was a man who thought and wrought with a deep and uncompromising conviction as to right and wrong. The leading newspapers, first of Holland, then of the Continent and Great Britain, reproduced his cartoons. Quick to recognize the significance of his work, the German authorities did all in their power to suppress it, and, failing in this, used every form of intrigue at hand to silence him. They charged him with endangering Dutch neutrality; they put a price on his head, and he was continually threatened with the vengeance of the central powers. Then Raemaekers removed with his family to a suburb of London. The English public accorded him a warm welcome. Great crowds thronged the galleries where his cartoons were exhibited. Later, in Paris, he was presented with the Cross of the Legion of Honor and was given a reception at the Sorbonne, which is said to be the highest purely intellectual honor Europe can confer.

He has a wonderful record for industry, for he has drawn more than 600 cartoons since the war began. There is scarcely a phase of it, political, military, or naval, on which his brush and pencil have not made their comment, and a line once placed is seldom altered.

To understand Raemaekers fully, one must first understand the Germans. Civilization expects implicit obedience to the accepted code by all its devotees. Now some of us have had a mental picture of the Germans, surviving from long, long ago, as a peacefully inclined industrious folk, as students, philosophers, efficient merchants, and domesticated men and women. But we did not understand the modern German, and, so soon as the war broke out and we began to reason from cause to effect, our appraisal of German ideals received a rude shock. We found "Kultur" in place of the familiar type, and one supreme man at the head of a caste using the people like pawns, teaching them the gospel of hate, and employing every material force at hand to achieve the destruction of other nations for the sake of national glorification and the aggrandizement of the German state. We found a people turned universal enemy, using war as a means to break down the morale of whole nations and as an agent of mendacity, misrepresentation, wholesale cruelty, and ruthless conquest.

Raemaekers revolted at once. He showed sheer, unadulterated facts in picture, drawn as it were with the point of a sword, or a bayonet. He showed that in face of "Kultur" no one could be neutral. There is no mistaking Raemaekers. No matter what its form, he loathes "Kultur," and against the dark background of evil he causes to stand out the nobility, endurance, and sublimity of the objects of "Kultur's" persecution, the sacredness of the allied cause. Never for a moment is he in doubt that that cause will succeed. Victory to him is inevitable. For that view he is more than an encouragement to the world; he is an inspiration, as much an inspiration as though the war had long since ceased and he were recording in bronze and marble the glorious victory of civilization, instead of merely presenting us with the first rough sketch.

Fighting For Happiness

When you get into a frame of mind that makes life seem one tiresome duty after another, with no pleasure in it; when ill-health seems to take all the joy out of life and you worry over things that are really not worth worrying about, then your nervous system is becoming exhausted, and you are on the way to a general breakdown in health. In this condition your health and happiness is worth fighting for and good, rich, red blood is what your system needs. It is a hopeless task to try to restore your health while your blood is deficient either in quantity or quality. And remember that no medicine can be of any use to you that does not build up your weak, watery blood.

To build up the blood and strengthen the nerves there is one remedy that has been a household word for more than a generation—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. It is the actual mission of these pills to make new, rich, red blood, which strengthens the nerves and tones the entire system. They give you a new appetite, make sleep refreshing, put color in the lips and cheeks, and drive away that unnatural tired feeling that oppresses so many people. If you want to experience new health and happiness give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHINESE HUMOR.

Illustrated by a Story of the Hospitality of Two Friends.

That the Chinese are possessed of a keen sense of humor is shown by the following anecdote which is related in the Spirit of the East Magazine:

"There were two men who had been friends from their school days. One lived in the town, the other in the country. After a separation lasting a whole year, the countryman decided to pay a visit to his friend the townsman. The latter gave him a hearty welcome, but the repast he furnished consisted merely of two bowls of rice and a single egg.

"'What a pity,' he said with a great sigh, 'that you came so early! If you had only waited for another year, my friend, we should have had fowl for our dinner, as this egg would have developed into a chicken!'

"Not long afterward the townsman returned the visit. For his entertainment the countryman cut a hard piece of bamboo rod into small pieces, salted them, roasted them in fat and served them up.

"'What a pity,' he ejaculated, 'you came so late! If you had only come a year ago, my friend, we should have had tender bamboo shoots for dinner today!'"

An Unrepresentative House.

One of the most elaborate calculations of the composition of the house of commons a hundred years ago is given in Dr. Oldfield's "Representative History." According to this, 218 members were returned by 87 peers in England and Wales, 31 members by 21 peers in Scotland and 51 members by 36 peers in Ireland. Thus just 300 members were returned by peers. In addition 137 members were returned by 90 commoners in England and Wales, 14 members by 14 commoners in Scotland and 20 members by 19 commoners in Ireland, while the treasury commanded 11 seats, the admiralty 4 and the ordnance 1. Consequently in a house of 658 members 171 could claim to be more or less independent.—London Chronicle.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

The Beer of Borneo.

Beer as made by the natives of Sarawak, in the northwestern region of Borneo, varies in its ingredients according to the different tribes who make it, the most intoxicating being that made by the Bisaiyahs of Limbank. These people make their beer by boiling rice, adding yeast, crushed wild chili, and a large lump of wood ash. This is all put into a jar till the jar is two-thirds full, and covered over with leaves which are held down with bamboo supports; water is poured on till the jar is full, and the beer is then ready for drinking. The drinking is performed by pushing bamboo tubes down to the bottom of the jar and then sucking up the liquid. So that no one shall have more than his fair proportion at a time, a system of floats is arranged whereby the amount of drink consumed by each man is registered.

Bismarck and Music.

Bismarck's utterances regarding music are compiled in a book by Kendell, "Furst und Furstin Bismarck, Erinnerungen aus den Jahren 1846-1872." Kendell once saw the man of blood and iron shed tears during a performance of Beethoven's Sonata Appasionata. His favorite composers were Beethoven and Schubert. The only thing he did not like in their works was the variations. These, he said, "do not speak to the heart." Concerning the sonata just referred to, he remarked: "This is like the singing and sobbing of a whole human life. If I heard this music often I should always be brave."

A Giant Power Light.

The giant 50,000,000-candle power light installed at Niagara Falls is one of the largest in the world and makes of its vicinity an exceedingly brilliant spot, but it has been demonstrated that it would take 32,500,000,000,000 of them to do the illuminating work of the sun. The figures are not guesses, but scientific calculations based on long and elaborate experiments.

CLASS A MEN MUST GO.

All Able Men Will Have to Drop Jobs Here.

OTTAWA, Aug. 9. — The Militia Department has adopted regulations which call for all Class A men under the Military Service Act now holding appointments in Canada going overseas.

There have been numerous complaints of young healthy men in this class holding down soft or safety first jobs, in some instances the complaints have been well founded. Certain cases have arisen where because of exceptional qualifications it is regarded as absolutely necessary that the men now filling certain jobs should stay there despite their fitness for trench warfare.

"Whenever a man in Class A can be at all spared it is now the well defined policy of the Department to send him overseas and replace him by some one in one of the lower categories," was the statement made by an official of the Department who deals with staff matters.

Sharp, evangelist, was in charge of the ceremony, and had assisting him Revs. L. M. Sharpe, S. F. Dixon, J. N. Clarke, Wallace, and Seymore, and other clergymen of the district. So great was the crowd that large numbers could not gain admittance. The following trustees were present upon the platform: Messrs. G. M. Sharpe, J. W. Seeley, K. A. Ketcheson, C. J. Massey, W. B. Tufts, D. H. Thrasher, Mark Holden, J. F. Rikley, J. Lott and S. D. Lloyd. Foxboro' band was in attendance. Mrs. J. N. Clarry, Belleville, was pianist.

SO EASY! LIKE ROLLING OFF LOG

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once and soon the corn loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A quarter ounce of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue or skin. After you lift away the troublesome corn or callus the skin underneath is as pink, firm and healthy as the palm of your hand.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

To bring up a child in the way he should go, travel that way yourself. Stories first heard at the mother's knee are never wholly forgotten; a little spring that never dries up on our journey through scorching years. The sooner you get a child to be a law unto himself, the sooner you make a man of him. Children need models more than criticism. We can never check what is in the young unless we cherish what is good in them. Line upon line, precept upon precept, we must have serenity, peace and the absence of petty fault finding. If home is to be a nursery fit for heaven growing plants. There are no men and women, however poor they may be, but have it in their power, by the grace of God, to leave behind them the grandest thing on earth—character; and their children rise up after them and thank God that their mother was a pious woman or their father a pious man.

We have not done our duty by our children until we have done our utmost to surround them with the best moral influences, to strengthen them with highest religious instructions within our power and to lead them on lines that are vitalizing by going that way ourselves. Morals are peculiarly contagous, life is communicated by life; sincerity and simplicity are not transmitted by precept but by example. "Whisper the word of God to the child," said Jean Paul Richter, "in the presence of the sublime and the majestic." "In the presence of things calm and soothing," said George McDonald, and we would add, "In the presence of the beautiful, the familiar graces, homely sanctities, the pansy, the swallow, the purring cat, the faithful dog, the gentle horse, the sleeping babe, a father's hug and a mother's kiss."

When the last word is likely to be an unkind one, let some one else say it.

There is a great difference between a home-maker and a home-keeper. There are women who are good home-makers and failures as home-keepers. In the flush of excitement incident to forming a new home, it is a pleasant task to arrange furniture. Everything is new and the housekeeper has little to doa side from suggesting the proper place for each article; and it is with pride she looks upon her home, be it ever so humble. This is especially true when an appreciative husband gives his earnest approval of every suggestion, but as years go on the wear and tear incident to use is plainly to be seen, and then the battle begins that discourages so many housekeepers. Faded carpets, tarnished furniture meet her eyes Vigilance gives place to indifference; discouragement takes the place of determined effort; the home is neglected and the home-maker is no longer as a home-keeper. This is the crucial that tests a woman's fidelity to duty. Many die with an uncrowned life work, but God's benediction, "She has done what she could," is more blessed than the world's applause bestowed upon an aimless life.

The humblest home may be made attractive with flowers and music, and these are factors of happiness far greater than the trappings of wealth.

Boys, the farm offers every opportunity one could desire. The soil lies laden with riches awaiting only our efforts to extract them. Every field or farm will respond willingly to our labours if we only study that farm or field, adapt ourselves to it and care for it. Let us rally around the standard of youth, remembering that the future of our country shall be what her young people make it. Let us show our fathers and mothers that the boys and girls of to-day shall be ready to stand forth fully equipped men and women of to-morrow. Let us show them that the rising generation which is following in their footsteps is fully competent to succeed them and shoulder the respousibility of the farm, the home and nation.

HIS MOTHER.

"I wish," wrote a boy "over there" to a pal still in the U. S. A., "that you'd drop around and see mother once in a while. She writes fine smiling letters, but somehow or other I have a feeling in me that she's hiding a lot of tears. Tell her I'm all right—and make her believe it!"

After publishing the above and exchange very truthfully says that not a few of our wonderful fighters standing there in the bomb and bayonet line are worrying more about their mothers they have left behind them than about the Boches in front of them. And, too, many of these mothers are hiding tears behind "smiling letters."

It would be mighty fine and of incalculable assistance in waging this war to lessen the soldier son's worry, and dry the soldier's mother's tears. We ought to make every boy "over there" feel sure that his mother is getting plenty of help, sympathy and sunshine of love from we who stay at home. That done, he will worry less, and fewer mother tears will dampen the letters she writes to him.

That is the supreme purpose of the War Mothers of America—and by doing that these mothers go far toward bringing final victory home to America. But this is not all the War Mothers' organizations hope to accomplish. They want to bring to bear upon all war work the great force of their united strength, in food conservation, in Liberty Loan drives, boosting wartime thrift and saving, and aiding all those war charities so necessary to relieve suffering and save life in our war camps among the peoples with whom we stand in democracy's war.

No person can help a War Mother as much, nor sympathize with her so sincerely, nor drive away her war clouds as well as another War Mother.

The happiest persons in the world are not those who have the most done for them, but those who do the most for others.

ADVICE ON MARRIAGE.

GIVEN IN A BOOKLET PUBLISHED BY THE STATE OF MINNESOTA.

Giving advice to those about to marry is the latest activity of the State of Minnesota. The State Board of Health has issued a booklet under the title of "Marriage and Engagement," which, while not pretending to be a compendium for the lovelorn, yet contains many gems of wisdom that many a couple would do well to heed. It bears the seal of the State, and is circulated at State expense. Its author is not revealed. Here are some excerpts from it:

"A young woman appears at her best in the presence of a man, especially if she likes him. A man, especially a young man, appears at his worst in the presence of a woman, particularly if he likes her."

"A woman should never marry a man to reform him. If she just must marry that kind of a man she should make him reform first and make him prove it, too.

"Neither man nor woman should marry under 20 years of age. After that the sooner the better.

"Engagements shouldn't be too long; they promote late hours and extravagant expenditures for clothes, gifts and entertainments.

"Engagements shouldn't be too short; those sometimes lead to unwise unions.

"A couple may safely wed if the man has an income of $50 or $60 a month, and he has saved up $200 or $300.

"A young man ought to know that sometimes young women put on the behaviour best suited to win, whether or not that behaviour has anything genuine back of it. A young man who is thought to be wealthy is especially liable to be caught in this trap.—Kansas City Times.

153 Papineau Ave., Montreal.

"For three years, I suffered great pain in the lower part of my body, with swelling or bloating. I saw a specialist, who carefully examined me and gave me several tonics to take, which did not help me. Then he told me I must undergo an operation. This, I refused to permit.

I heard about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the wonderful results it was giving because this medicine is made from fruit juices, so decided to try it.

The first box gave great relief; and I continued the treatment, taking six boxes more. Now, my health is excellent—I am free of pain and swelling—and I give 'Fruit-a-tives' my warmest thanks".

AVOID HARSH PILLS! DOCTORS CONDEMN THEM

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

BIRTH OF A RIVER.

How the St. Lawrence, the Oldest In the World, Was Formed.

ITS BED WAS MADE TO ORDER.

Nature Saved This Historic and Unchanging Stream the Trouble of Cutting a Channel For Its Course From the Great Lakes to the Sea.

What is the oldest river in the world? The St. Lawrence. It is also one of the few rivers that did not have to make its own bed and has remained unchanged since the very beginning of the American continent.

Try to think of a time when the earth was covered by a mass of water, hot, steaming and often tremendously disturbed by the throes of a globe beneath it that was shrinking because it was becoming cooler. As the globe shrank every particle of the outside was naturally pulled in toward the center, and the hardening crust, which could not be packed any more solidly than it was, had to wrinkle, sinking down here and bulging up somewhere else.

After time certain of these rising wrinkles, or folds, the thicker or firmer parts of the earth's crust, stood the strain and became permanent ridges. The oldest of them that geologists know and apparently the first that bulged up above the universal ocean and remained high and dry was the broad mass on which Canada now rests. It is a part of the original crust of the earth, and we can see it today wherever it is not covered by newer rocks or soil just as it crystallized and cooled out of the primeval molten material.

This mass formed a broad V from Labrador down to Lake Huron and thence northwestward to Alaska. On account of its shape geologists call it the Canadian shield. It is the oldest land known and apparently the strongest, for there are no signs of any extensive changes in it (except the wearing away of the surface) since it first rolled the ocean off its shoulders.

Off the eastern coast of this primitive continent lay a chain of lofty islands about on the line of the Blue Ridge, the White mountains, the Maine coast and Nova Scotia. Between these islands and the mainland was a troughlike space that ran from eastern Quebec southwestward to Ohio. It was two or three hundred miles wide and filled with a shallow sea, and just outside the island chain was the great hollow that held the Atlantic ocean.

Time went on. For ages the straining and cracking of the shrinking globe, earthquakes, sun and frost, pounding surf, running water, blowing gales, ice—all labored to tear down the mountains and carry the wreckage of rocks and dust away into the valleys and seas. In this way vast masses of rock in layers of shales, sandstones, and what not, were laid down in that narrow, troughlike sea between the chain of islands and the continent.

All these "sedimentary" rocks were soft and weak as compared with the solid old granites deeply rooted on either side of them, and the trough itself, a sagging fold, was a line of weakness in the crust. As the load of deposits became heavier and heavier the floor of this trough slowly yielded, and as it sank toward the heated region below the underside melted and grew thinner and thinner.

That could not go on forever, and soon the continual shrinking of the globe and the enormous pressure of the weight of the ocean became irresistible. The Canadian shield was immovable, so the rock in the trough began to bulge or crumple all along its length. Gradually, not all at once, but by slow and varying movements, those folds were squeezed up, which in their broken and worn down form we know as the Appalachian mountains.

Toward the south there was room for this action to be rather gentle and regular, but in the far northeast the trough was narrow, and the soft rocks were set on edge, overturned and splintered against the solid continent.

Very early in the struggle a great fracture of the earth's crust occurred here along a curving northeast and southwest line. It left a deep and broad trench between the crushed and displaced rocks of the trough and the granite shore of the Canadian shield. Into this trench rushed all the interior waters of the continent, draining away to the sea, and the St. Lawrence river was born! There, no doubt, it will remain as long as the earth keeps its present form.

At that time there was no gulf of St. Lawrence. The land extended out to a coast line that stretched unbroken from Nova Scotia to Labrador. The present gulf is the result of a sinking of the coast region. Most of it is very shallow, but a chart of soundings shows the ancient river bed as a channel winding out between Newfoundland and Cape Breton to the deep ocean.—Youth's Companion.

The Germans Are Still Retreating From Montdidier Line

SECTION OF GERMAN ARMY MAY BE CUT OFF

The Germans Are Preparing to Retreat From the Montidider-Noyon Salient

French Began a Movement Southeast of Montdidier Last Night and Place Is Virtually Surrounded —Enemy Retirement Continues.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

LONDON, Aug. 10.—(Official).—The important town of Montdidier, which was approximately at the apex of the German salient south of the Somme, has been captured by the Allies. Canadian and Australian forces have taken Bouchoir, Maharicourt, Lihons, Rainecourt and Proyart. The French have taken Le Tronquoy, Le Frstoy and Assainvillers.

PARIS (Official), August 10.—The German army of General Von Hutier is retreating from the Montdidier-Noyon line. The towns of Assanivillers and Rubescourt were captured and the French reached, Faverolles, less than two miles east of Montdidier. Northwest of Montdidier the French have advanced east of Anvillers, six miles northeast of Roye, and have captured Davenescourt, two miles east of Pierrepont, the French began a movement southeast of Montdidier last night, and virtually have that place surrounded.

LOOPHOLE CLOSED UP.

The German line from Montdidier to Noyon is between 25 and 30 miles in length, and forms a semi-circle swinging southeast from Montdidier to the south of Noyon. A retirement on this line probably means that the Germans are going to give up the Montdidier salient which would be the first marked consequence of the Franco-British offensive in Picardy. In retreating from this line the Germans are forced to use roads and railways going through Roye which is six miles southeast of Arvillers, east of which the French continued to advance last night. It is not improbable that the French thrust south of Montdidier Friday night in a northeasterly direction, reaching Faverolles, two miles east of Montdidier, compelled a retreat here. Montdidier apparently is in a pocket, but the French official statement does not say anything concerning the fate of that town. If the Germans have not evacuated Montdidier, the French advance would seem to place some soldiers here in a most dangerous position, as their retreat is cut off virtually on both sides. There is a small loophose to the north, but this is being closed rapidly by the French advance to Davenescourt.

Paris newspapers say that many more than 20,000 prisoners now captured by the Allies.

Battle Is Spreading.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, August 10.—The Picardy battle is reported to be spreading from the Oise northward to south ward of Arras. The French, it was learned, advanced this morning on a sixteen-mile front between Montdidier and the Oise, penetrating to a depth of four miles within six hours. (The distance from the Oise to Arras around the present front is nearly 75 miles.)

Heavy Fighting.

Heavy fighting was proceeding this morning, it was learned, and satisfactory progress was reported. Many additional prisoners have been taken and the total of captured guns is said to have reacher 300.

Allied Offensive.

ROTTERDAM, August 10—The Dusselforfer Nachrichten hints broadly that an Allied offensive on a new part of the west front is not expected.

"If it develops the Germans' task will be that of defence," the newspaper says.

Zeppelin Destroyed.

LONDON, August 10. — The destruction of a German Zeppelin was officially reported today by the Air Ministry in the communique describing naval flying operations during the first week of August. In addition the communique reported the destruction of three enemy machines, while six others were driven down out of control. No British machines are missing with the exception of one seaplane which was forced to

American Troops Still Pounding at German Line North of Vesle

(United Press Despatch.)
(By Frank K. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, August 10.—"American troops continue their incessant pounding at the German centre nort hof the Vesle.

Although our wings on each side of Fismes are comparatively quiet as regards infantry fighting, the Americans are slowly advancing up the ravines running northward from the Vesle toward the plane and heights where the Germans are strongly entrenched.

Huns May Call Out 1920 Class

Enemy Suffers Terrible Losses on the Marne and Somme Fronts

(By Lewell Meletet—United Press).

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN TH EFIELD, Aug. 10.—Allied armies are continually bombarding the important railway sectors of Roye and Nesle. Many fires have been observed in the south. Roye is ten miles north-east of Montdidier. Nesle is seven miles north-east of Roye and six miles south-east of Chaulnes. French troops have extended their front slightly south-west, capturing Contoirs and St. Hubert Wood.

Calling Out Boys.

The German command is now said to be considering throwing in the class of 1920 within the next few weeks.

Prisoners believe there is strong opposition in Germany to sacrificing these boys two years and a half before their time, notwithstanding the desperate need of 40,000 reinforcements which this class will provide, since the losses incurred on the Marne and the Somme calls have been made for more replacements than can be filled from recuperating.

RAFFLES THOUGHT HE WAS UP AGAINST STIFF PROPOSITION

Met the Committee Last Evening and Decided to Proceed With Performance.

The Exhibition Board held a meeting last night at which Raffles was present. After much consideration the Committee accepted him on his own terms, but with this understanding that he could examine the jacket, but it must be in the presence of the Committee only, as they were afraid he might tamper with it in some way. Also he must agree to release himself from the jacket while hanging from his heels in mid-air.

Loked It Over.

Raffles had a look at the jacket, against a tough proposition, and that against a tough proposition, and that he thought the Committee were taking an undue advantage of him by asking him to relase himself from the jacket in mid-air.

He said it would be hard enough on the platform, but Mr. Reg. Turner stated that the jacket had been made to hold him and not to make it easy for him, and that it was his opinion that no living man, including Raffles, could gain their release after it was once properly strapped on.

Will Go Ahead.

After much heated controversy between Raffles and the Committee, he accepted their proposition and stated that he would get that hundred dollars and the jacket, or break his neck in the attempt.

As Raffles was leaving the meeting, the Committee said, "Well, Raffles, we don't wish you any bad luck, but we hope you don't win the hundred.

He answered them quietly that those that laugh last, laugh best, so I might surprsie you all.

This wonderful exhibition will take place in front of the grand stand. Raffles will be suspended 75 feet in mid-air hanging from his heels. This big feature should be worth the price of admission alone. The jacket, made by J. J. Turner and Sons, will be on display in front of the Examiner Office.

CANADIANS OVER THE TOP

First Prisoners Began to Come in Sixteen Minutes After Attack Opened.

OBJECTIVES GAINED

(By J. F. B. Livesay — Canadian Press Correspondent in France).

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, Aug. 10.—Although all the fruits of the great victory on the Somme are not yet garnered, enough is known at this time to place it among the imperishable deeds of arms of this war. The Canadian forces held an honourable position in the Allied armies which attacked the enemy lines on a twenty-mile front. The Canadians went over the top at twenty minutes past four on August 8, and sixteen minutes thereafter the first prisoners began to come in. By eight o'clock a large part of the initial objective had been captured. The victory has been notable for a number of things. For the first time Canadian cavalry found itself on the same battlefield with the infantry.

Tanks Employed.

For the first time too the Canadian force employed tanks in large numbers, both of the heavy and "whippet" varieties. It was the first time that the Canadians fought side by side with their brethren from Australia. The victory, however, is notable, chiefly for wonderful staff work that alone made it possible. There was no artillery preparations in the usual sense of the word. The men went in immediately behind a barrage and kept up with it as it lifted. The Boche was taken completely by surprise, and prisoners were astounded to find they were surrendering to Canadians. The Canadian soldiers never went into action with more irrepressible eagerness and determination, not to be refused than they did Thursday. Behind rampart of valor they had builded at Vimy and Atras, they have lain all this spring and summer chafing that they were denied their opportunity of taking part.

Stemming the Tide.

The opportunity of taking part alongside their cavalry and machine gun brigade in stemming the tide of the Hun invasion on Thursday, though tired from a march that permitted little rest before the battle, they went over the top with unbeatable spirit of the men who fought and died at Ypres, on the Somme, and in a dozen glorious fields. It was a clear, starry night, with the faint light of the dawn touching the eastern sky. Of a sudden, with one deafening pulse, the roar of guns broke out. Far to the right was the flicker of the French seventy-fives and of American field guns and heavies. Immediately on the Canadian flank the Australians put up a great show in a sector where they had fought for several days past. Beyond them Imperial troops were in action.

The First Day.

Unfortunately on the first day's fighting, as dawn increased, the visibility became poor. A dense fog swept down into the valleys. While this was protection against machine gunners, it greatly increased the difficulty of the troops finding their way over unknown ground. In the first day's fighting the Canadian losses were not unduly heavy. One unit had heavy casualties in its first attack, but succeeded in taking its objective after the tanks had come to its reinforcement. Owing to the poor visibility there was little fighting in the air on Thursday over the Canadian sectors.

BRITISH SUCCESSES.

...cess of the new British ...rive in Picardy, and of the ...sive in Flanders is not ...ged only by the number of ... the quantity of war mater... or the French territory re...om the enemy, although all ...are great. Its importance ...s evidence it gives that the ...oint of the war has been ...that the initiative has en...ed from the hands of the ...command, that the enemy is ... with little hope of ever ...ack, and above all that the ...rmy, as a fighting machine, is still as effective as ever. The two offensives are effective endorsations of Lloyd George's story of how the losses in the British army were made good after the terrible losses suffered during the first German drive in March last, and in the heavy blow struck by the enemy in the Lys district in April. The casualties sustained by the British were almost staggering in their extent, but prompt measures were taken, and within a month over 350,000 troops were rushed across the Channel.

The two offensives that are being carried are almost altogether British attacks, the French playing a brilliant but secondary part in the Picardy drive. The result has been a crushing defeat for the enemy, the capture of thousands of prisoners, the destruction of the enemy morale and a triumph that will materially help to shorten the war.

THE VETERANS' REQUESTS.

The recomendations passed at the recent convention of the Great War Veterans' Association, in regard to the pension question, seems to be reasonable and practicable, and it is to be hoped that they will receive the immediate consideration of the government. In the first place Veterans ask that the present scale of pensions be increased in a manner commensurate with the rise in the cost of living. The scale at present may be the biggest in the world, as is claimed, but even then it does not appear to be adequate in view of the great increase in the prices of the necessities of life. The veterans ask that in estimating the disability sustained by a discharged soldier, who has seen service in an active theatre of war, no account be taken of any ailment or disability that may have existed prior to enlistment, provided that the soldier did not wilfully conceal such disability when he enlisted. This request also seems to be a just one. If a man is acepted by military doctors as physically fit, and is taken to France, and is disabled, it does not appear to be fair for a Pensions Medical Board upon his return, to say that his condition is the result of some ailment or other that existed before he became a soldier.

Among other suggestions made by the Veterans are the following in regard to medical boards, all of which are worthy of earnest consideration:

"That as far as possible the examining medical boards should be composed of a civilian physician or surgeon of wide experience, an overseas M. D. member with actual experience of war conditions and cases, and an experienced representative of the Canadian Army Medical Corps.

"That it should be impressed by those in authority upon the examining medical boards before whom members appear for examination for the determination of disability that the relationship between them is that of doctor and patient; that every facility should be granted a member to give an account of the facts of his condition from his point of view; and that the pension forms now in use should be altered to make provision for a record of such statement being taken and forwarded to the commission for consideration; that such statement after being read over to the member, as well as a statement as to the number of doctors who are present and made the examination, should be signed by him.

"That members of the medical profession attached to the pension and medical board be paid on such a scale that the very best may be obtained for these boards.

"That whenever a pensioner is required to be medically re-examined, he shall be entitled to be paid a reasonable amount for travelling expenses and subsistence or loss of wages.

"That the Board of Pension Commissioners be considered and developed as a civil rather than as a military organization.

"That the commissioners should devote the whole of their time to the performance of their duties.

"That the approval of the commission to the award of any pension be evidenced by the personal signature of at least one of the commissioners."

"That the applicant for pension should be promptly notified by the commission of their decision.

"That additional travelling representatives be appointed in order to deal more promptly with the complaints.

"That the percentage of disability set by the examining medical board at discharge should not be decreased to a greater extent than ten per cent. by the Board of Pension Commissioners unless the pensioner is re-examined by a medical board of review.

"That the Dominion Government insure all the substandard risks for disabled soldiers."

THE CANADIANS' PART.

The announcement that Canadian divisions are playing a prominent part in the new British offensive will send a thrill of pride throughout the Dominion—a pride that is none the less because the Canadian people have learned to realize that such triumphs must be paid for in the sacrifice of life and blood. The Dominion troops have not played a prominent part in this year's operations, but to them, however, has fallen the honour of guarding that vital point in the allied lines, the heights of Vimy. The Canadians wrested that stronghold from the enemy seventeen months ago, and Premier Lloyd George in his speech the other day pointed out to the world the importance of the exploit of the Maple Leaf troops by describing it as "the biggest success won by the allies since 1914."

"It has been," declared the British Premier, "like a great bastion, which the Germans could neither capture nor turn, and every effort they have made has ended in a most sanguinary repulse. So long as it was in British hands it made it difficult and impracticable to carry out their great operations for severing the British army, and ultimately destroying it. Think what a difference it would have made if some of the Vimy Ridge had been in the hands of the Germans on March 21. It would have made all the difference in the world."

This has been Canada's part in the campaign of 1918, to hold firmly the "great bastion" which the Germans could neither capture nor turn." Now the time has come for the Canadians, whose reputation as shock troops was demonstrated in the capture of Vimy Ridge and Passchendeale to again smash the foe. Canada can confidently await the result.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Haig is hammering the Hun.

"Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer."

French, Canadians, Australians and English troops all helped in the big success. There is glory enough for all.

It is a bad season for Crown Princes. The Crown Prince of Bavaria is beginning to realize how the German Crown Prince feels.

It is to be hoped that there was a movie man on hand to register the spectacle of a fat Hun general pursued by a British tank.

Let us see. When was Hindenburg going to have that dinner in Paris?

The British Tommy is probably singing the old classic—

We beat them on the Marne,
We cracked them on the Aisne,
We gave them H— at Neuve Chappelle,
And here we are again, boys.
Here we are again.

Have you tried brown sugar in your preserves? The most astute housewife can detect no shade of difference between it and ordinary white sugar.

There are three grades of brown sugar, generally classified as bright, yellow and dark yellow. They contain from 7 to 10 per cent. less sucrose than refined sugar, but they have in addition, from 4 to 8 per cent. of invert sugar, which has a sweeter taste than cane sugar and is the sugar found in honey, molasses and fruits.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

It is Not for Money-Making Purposes—Educational and Entertaining.

Any public enterprise that is plainly to the benefit of the public deserves to succeed. That is the reason that the Chautauqua should be made a success. It can be made so if you will do your part. That is patronize it. Speak about it. Spend a little money, in buying tickets, for the men who have guaranteed to see this thing through have to stand behind the financial circumstances of the venture.

Aside from this there is the real good, the chance to see and hear people of superb ability in several lines of instructional work and entertainment. Take, for instance, the sessions devoted to the educational work in the interests of children. Children are the future men and women of this big Dominion. And with the entire change that has been wrought by the war we need to look to the future much more critically than ever we did in the years past. Our biggest asset will be the boys and girls.

So come and hear what is to be told as to the education of the children. All good, bright, entertaining and practical stuff. If you are a father or mother you can absorb and take home with you enough good instruction, to in turn bestow it on your children that you will be repaid scores of times over.

The morning sessions are given over to the little folk. Get in at the very first morning, and be at the organization. Take the children, and have them enrolled. They will have a week of the most enjoyable activity and will look forward to it from day to day. The expense for each child will not cost you more than the price of a trip ticket down the river on a Saturday afternoon. Buy a season ticket and get all that implies which the programme will tell you. It would cost you $10.00 to hear and see what is offered for the $2.00.

Gi.ish, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known clever women all over the world have been using saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint.

This simple and harmless face bath is a splendid thing for the outdoor girl, since sun, wind and flying dust are so provocative of squinting and other contortions which cause wrinkles and crow's feet. Also it is fine to freshen up a tired face in hot, depressing weather.

COBOURG GIRLS ESSAY BEST ON SUBJECT OF "CONFEDERATION" FOR KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS PRIZES

Contest in Ontario Separate Schools to Encourage Study of Canadian History, to Promote Patriotism and Knowledge of Canada's Development—The Winners in Peterboro Schools.

To encourage the study of Canadian history in the Separate schools, thereby to inspire the children's patriotism with a lasting knowledge of the beginnings of Canada and of her early struggles to nationhood, the Knights of Columbus offered prizes of $5 in gold to be competed for in each school for the best essays on Confederation.

Local Councils of the Order were assisted by the Provincial Council, at the 1917 convention, of which the idea was proposed and unanimously approved. In the Peterborough district the five-dollar gold pieces were won as follows:

St. Mary's Convent—Miss Marcelle McNulty.

The Sacred Heart School—Miss Gladys Cook.

St. Peter's School—Master Joseph Dwyer.

Oshawa—Master C. Johnston.

Cobourg—Miss Catherine McDonnell.

The competition in each school was carried on without regard to the others. Uniform conditions were observed. Thus, the children of the higher forms were given plenty of time to study the features of Confederation, using their text books and any other books that were useful. They wrote their essays leisurely and at home, but these proved to be but a first draft. The youthful contestants handed in their first efforts which were destroyed, and the essays which were submitted to the judges were written from memory in school. The above list represents the winners in the five schools, but the judges further decided that Miss McDonnell, of Cobourg, deserved mention for the best essay of all they had examined. This little girl is only eleven years old. At the entrance examinations this year she won the scholarship at the Cobourg Convent. Nine pupils from the Convent tried the examination, and nine passed, six of them taking honours. Miss McDonnell lead this exceptional class with a total of 551 marks.

Essay on Confederation.

Miss McConnell's essay is reproduced as follows:

Here we are, living in this beautiful country of mountains, lakes and rivers. We have every means of convenience and peace. But who established us in such convenience and such peace? In answer we must pay homage and show our gratitude to the "Fathers of Confederation." But what is Confederation, you may ask. Confederation is the league, alliance, or union of persons, states, or provinces, for the purpose of mutual aid. Just think, was it not a grand idea to have all the provinces of Canada unite as one. The intelligent men who first thought of this were:—Sir John A. Macdonald, George E. Cartier, Alexander Galt, George Brown, Charles Tupper and Sir Leonard Tilley.

To trace the cause of Confederation we must go back to 1860 when a curious state of affairs arose in Canada. The old political parties became shattered and new alliances were formed In Upper Canada the more advanced Reformers gained great influence and began a disturbance as they wanted a change in the basis of representation in Parliament. They claimed, that, as Upper Canada was more populous and wealthier than Lower Canada, and paid more taxes, it should send more members to Parliament. Against this it was urged that at the time of Union in 1840 Lower Canada had a larger population, greater wealth, and a smaller public debt than Upper Canada,—but yet it was given the same number of representatives. It was therefore asserted that Lower Canada should continue to have as many members of Parliament as Upper Canada. The disturbance was continued for many years and parties became nearly equally divided on the question of "Representation by Population" as it was called. On the one side a majority of members from Upper Canada and a minority from Lower Canada, while opposed to the new policy was a minority from Upper Canada and a majority from Lower Canada. John A. Macdonald and George E. Cartier were prominent members of the Conservative party. George Brown, William McDougal and A. A. Dorion, the principal of advocates of "Representation by Population," and the Reform Policy. Several administrations were defeated in the years between 1858 and 1864 and finally it became quite evident that some change in the constitution must take lace if good government was to continue.

In 1864 a dead-lock of political leaders was reached and the leaders of both sides, recognizing the danger, dropped their feuds, and united to form a Coalition Government, which had for its object the Confederation of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and, if possible also that of the Maritime Provinces. The principle of this Confederation was suggested by the form of government in the adjoining Republic, the object aimed at being to give several provinces the control of their own local affairs, while matters of general interest were to be managed by a common parliament in which all the provinces would be represented. Several things helped along the movement. In 1860 George Brown had proposed in Parliament the principle of such a scheme, but his resolution was lost. The country was not then ready for its adoption. But when in 1864, circumstances forced the policy on both parties, it was found that not only Canada, but the Maritime Provinces were discussing Confederation.

A conference or gathering of delegates from these provinces was called to meet in September at Charlottetown, in Prince Edward Island, to arrange for a union, and the Canadian Government asked and received permission to send delegates. At this gathering the Confederation of all the provinces was seriously discussed. It was decided to call another conference at Quebec, in November, and to invite all the provinces, through their delegates. The conference met, and after much deliberation the outlines of a scheme of Confederation were approved of, by Upper Canada, Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland had withdrawn from the conference, the terms proposed not being agreeable to them. The delegates separated to report to their respective parliaments, which soon after, in 1865 agreed to the scheme and made the necessary arrangements to get consent of British Parliament.

In 1866, Macdonald, Cartier, Galt and Brown went to England to draft a bill for submission to the Imperial Parliament. Everything would be done to cement the union between the Motherland and the New Dominion. The bill was passed on the twenty-eighth of February 1867, and under name of British North America Act is the law which defines our present constitution. It came into force on the first of July, 1867. But its passage was not satisfactory to all provinces. Nova Scotia was brought into Confederation against her will as its government accepted the terms without consent of the people. Remonstrances and petitions were sent to the British Parliament; but they were of no avail. The British Government thought that discontent would not reign long and that the British possessions in America would be safer and stronger under confederation, against possible attacks from United States, than existing as provinces independent of each other. This had been proved to them by the War of 1812 and the Fenian Raids.

Let me now describe the government of the New Dominion. 1. The Sovereign was to be represented in New Dominion by the Governor-General. 2. The Governor-General was to have a small party of men to advise him. 3. The legislature was to consist of two divisions— Senate and House of Commons. 4. The Senate was to have sixty-five seats in the Governor-General. 5. House of Commons was to be elected by people for a term of five years. 6. Quebec was to have sixty-five seats in the House of Commons. 7. All the provinces were to have more or less seats according to how their population compared with that of Quebec. The Government was now formed and Canada was on the first step of the ladder to seniority.

"Our Canada, strong, fair and free
Whose sceptre stretches far
Whose hills look down on either sea,
And front the polar—star;
Not for thy greatness—hardly known—
Wide plains or mountains grand,
But as we claim thee for our own,
We love our native land."

The first Governor-General of the Dominion was Lord Monck and his prime minister was Sir John A. Macdonald ,who had taken an important part along with, Hon. George Brown in carrying through the Confederation scheme. Its master-mind, in the person of Sir John A. Macdonald, was then, in all the vigour of his keen constructive intellect, which made him easily the first among political leaders. Geroge Brown, the energetic personality, the honest lover of French and anti-Catholic, was pres his country, but unfortunately antient with a sincere desire to advance that cause of union, which, for some years, he had been most earnestly advocating. His principal colleagues were Sir George E. Cartier from Quebec, Hon. Chas. Tupper, from Nova Scotia, and Hon. S. L. Tilley, from New Brunswick.

The majority of the people of the Dominion were willing to give the new constitution a fair trial except those of Nova Scotia. In the first parliament elected after the union, the members from that province were nearly all opposed to Confederation and had to be quieted by granting of "better terms."

In 1868 steps were taken to get possession of the vast territory held by the Hudson Bay Company in the northwest. This territory known as "Prince Rupert's Land" had been given to the Company in 1670 by Charles II of England and had been used by it for two hundred years to carry on a valuable trade in furs. The value of this territory was but little known and the company fearful of losing its charter, always strove to make the English believe that it was fit for nothing but grazing buffaloes and providing trapping grounds for the Indians. A very few settlers had made their way into this unknown and lone land—the only settlement of importance being at Red River, where Lord Selkirk had founded a colony in 1811. The whole population numbered about ten thousand souls and was gathered mainly at the different trading posts. The charter of the company was expiring and the Canadian Government induced the British Parliament to pass an act by which the North West or Hudson Bay Company could be surrendered to Canada on payment of the just claims of the company. Canada offered to give the company three thousand pounds sterling, one twentieth of the land and the right to retain their trading privileges. The offer was accepted. Some men were set to work near Fort Garry at the junction of the Red and Assinaboine rivers. The inhabitants were afraid they would lose their lots and houses so they rose in rebellion. Many of the Canadian volunteers who took part in the rebellion, received grants of land in the new province and became permanent settlers. Soon there began to rise at Fort Garry a prairie-city which to-day is the fine flourishing capital of the province of Manitoba—the city of Winnipeg. In 1870 "The Manitoba Act" was passed. It defined the limits of the province and stated how it was to be governed. Now we have in our possession that one big stretch of waving grain that you can see as far as eye can carry. It was given the right to send four members to the House of Commons and allotted two Senators.

The next year saw British Columbia enter— that land of untold mineral wealth. It was separated from the other provinces by the Rockies and this made it a condition of building a railroad through the prairies to connect it with the rest.

Two years after still another province was added to the growing Dominion Prince Edward Island, which in 1866 refused to become a part of Confederation was now willing to cast in its lot with the other provinces. This little island with its hardy and intelligent people formerly belonged to Nova Scotia, but in 1784 it received a separate government. Its history is much the same as Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Confederation has certainly bestowed its blessings on Canada. By the alliance of the provinces they have greatly strengthened themselves in time of war. There has been increased inter-provincial trade. Three transcontinental railways have been built along which many great cities, which are centres of industry, have sprung up. Commerce has largely increased with the countries of Asia. The wealth of the west which is grain, is exchanged for the wealth of the east which is fruit, live-stock, dairy products and farm implements. Grants of land were offered by the Government to open up the west. All Canada owing to union has used ports on the East and West, religious freedom in church and school, each province allowed to settle its own church affairs. Just imagine any shipper down in Halifax can send his goods off on any of three routes, only in a few days to land off at Vancouver.

Canada promises to be among the leading countries of the world in future years. She is climbing the ladder fast and the hard work of our industrial people will soon bring her to the top-notch.

Oh Canada! Beneath thy shining skies
May stalwart sons and gentle maidens rise,
To keep thee steadfast through the years,
From East to Western Seas,
Our Fatherland! Our Motherland!
Our true north, strong and free.

Peterboro County Farmers Are Optimistic Over Crop Outlook

A Number of Farmers Express Satisfaction With the Results to Date—Oats and Barley Have Turned Out Well—Potatoes are Good.

WHAT FARMERS HAVE TO SAY

The farmers in the adjacent townships all agree that the crops are good and that there is no need for pessimism. Most of them are now cutting their crop and some have started to tuck it away in the barn.

Mr. A. M. Laing, of North Monaghan Township, has his whole crop of oats cut, and most of his peas. Mr. Laing's potatoes are particularly good, and his oats and barley are very good. In spite of the lack of help they are getting on famously.

Corn Backward.

Mr. E. J. McEwen, a farmer of Smith Township, reports that he has a bumper crop of potatoes, although his corn has not grown to any extent. The oats and barley are both good, and he has just started to cut. In general, conditions are good on the farm, much better than they expected.

Cutting Oats.

Mr. S. Bennet, of Otonabee, a practical farmer, is now cutitng his oats, which are an excellent crop. His barley is also good, but he has not started to cut it yet. His potatoes are fair, and altogether he expects to have as good a year as last. "Help was very scarce this year and has held us back, he said.

Very Optimistic.

Mr. S. W. Blewett, of Douro, is very optimistic over farm conditions this year, except for farm labour.

"We should have been extended more help," he said. "My beans, potatoes and in fact my whole garden crop is good, that is as good as can be expected. We have had no time to attend to it. My oats and barley are good and next week I will start to cut the barley. I have all the oats cut, and most of it inside."

Potatoes Are Good.

Mr. W. J. Crough, of Ennismore, has all his oats and barley cut, and says his garden crop, especially his potatoes are in excellent condition.

"Everything looks good on this side of the bridge," smilingly replied Mr. Crough.

Crops Are Good.

Walter Bowles, of Cavan, says the crops in that district are uniformly good. The hay was rather poor, but the oats are good, the barley is good and the potatoes will be good. All green stuff from the garden could not be better. "City people are coming to this district in their motors to pick berries and they have pretty well stripped the bushes," he said.

"I wonder how the stores sell a box of berries for a quarter of a dollar."

The estimate for the works east of Rice Lake upon the River Trent was £233,447 6s. 11d. which added to the estimate, a detail of which is published above, made the entire proposed cost of opening up an uninterrupted Water Communication between the Bay of Quinte and Lake Simcoe, a distance of about 165 miles, and 706—4 feet of lockage, £495,515.

Mr. Baird however appears to have feared that the amount of the estimate might deter the Government from prosecuting the work, to which he attached very considerable importance. He therefore made the suggestion that only the least expensive sections of the canal should be at once proceeded with, and the other portions railwayed, "for which," says the report, "it is rather remarkable, the whole ground of these intermediate sections affords the most favourable opportunity for construction that can be imagined or wished for, any descent that is being in the proper direction and easy of construction. The estimate of the probable expense of forming a connection between Lake Simcoe and the Bay of Quinte, on the double principle of Railway and Canal, was as follows:

	Miles
From the Bay of Quinte to Widow Harris'	9
Per Railroad		£17,500	0 0
From Widow Harris' to Percy Landing	21
Per navigation		14,114	7 6
From Percy Landing to the head of Heeley Falls	11

From Heely Falls to Peterboro Basin	55

From Peterboro to Chemong Lake	8

From Chemong Lake to Balsam Lake	40

From Balsam Lake to the Talbot River	13¾
Per railroad		27,000	0 0
From thence along river to Lake Simcoe	2¼
Per navigation		7,450	0 0
From across Lake Simcoe to the Narrows	22
Per navigation	0
From the Narrows to Lake Huron, say	15
Per railroad		30,000	0 0
Making in all		£177,786	13 8
To which add for Contingencies, Management, etc.		17,778	12 10
Making a total of		£195,565	6 6

The objection of transhipment, an almost insuperable one in the double scheme, Mr. Baird proposed to get rid of thus: "With the view of doing away with the only, at least the chief objection to the expedient system — the idea of frequent transhipment, I would propose that long and substantial steamers, of particular construction, should regularly play to and from on the intermediate water communication, and so arranged as to admit of the train of cars being transported at once, with their loadings, direct either for Lake Huron, or Lake Simcoe, as the case may be, and which I am satisfied can be done in such a way as to be practically useful, and serve well the present, and until such time as it may be deemed proper to put the lockage system in execution, the prospective wants of the country."

This project great as was the interest which attached to it at the time, was never carried out. Some £90,000 odd was expended upon the River Trent works; an the Lock at Peterboro basin, proposed by Mr. Baird, was constructed; but the troubles of 1837 and 1838, and the changes which immediately succeeded, prevented the full execution of the project of connecting the waters of Simcoe with the Bay of Quinte. The necessity for such a work, however, has never been lost sight of. Within the last two or three years, the project of connecting the waters of Huron with those of Ontario or the St. Lawrence with the view of directing the immense and growing trade of the Western States through Canadian channels—its natural outlet—has engaged the attention of the people and press not only of Canada but of Chicago and the Western States. Two projects to that end are before the public; the one to connect the Georgian Bay with the City of Toronto, preliminary surveys of which have already been made, attesting it to be a work of great, though by no means insuperable difficulties; and the other to connect Lake Huron with the Ottawa, a project to which Mr. Walter Shanley, one of our ablest Provincial Engineers, has given his adhesion. But it is quite evident that neither of these schemes, important as they unquestionably are, can for a single moment compare with that projected in 1833, to which reference has been made. The first, in addition to the immense expense of the work, $25,000,000, owing to the heavy cuttings that require to be made, and the great engineering difficulties that must be surmounted, offers but problematical advantages as a national work. That it would prove of very great advantage to the City of Toronto and divert much of the western trade through that city, is undoubted; but when that has been said the main argument has been advanced that can be advanced in its favour. It opens up no new country, and the produce once on Ontario via Toronto, stands equal chance of finding its way to the Atlantic through American as through Canadian channels. The second proposal, that of connecting the waters of Lake Huron with those of the Ottawa, stands deservedly high as a national enterprise. If constructed it would open up an immense section of country, now absolutely useless, and it would have the effect of placing Canadian channels far before any other for the conveyance of the produce of the west to the markets of Europe; advantages which cannot be overlooked in the construction of this National work. But the heavy outlay required on such a work is likely to retard its completion for many years. The route via Peterboro and the Trent, while offering advantages almost equal to those of the Ottawa Canal, as regards the opening up of the country, and the development of the trade by the St. Lawrence is so much less expensive as to offer much greater prospect of immediate construction.

GROCERY MARKET FOR THE WEEK

"Canadian Grocer" this week says: The sugar situation is one of the extreme interest at the present time, and indications are that supplies will be none too heavy from now until the end of the year. The trade should urge conservation along lines suggested by Canada Food Board, otherwise enforced action may be expected.

Prices on the 1918 pack canned salmon are out and reveal a substantial increase though in some quarters the opinion was expressed that quotations are lower than had been expected.

Canned peas are also being quoted, and the lower scale of prices will be generally welcomed. Canned fruits are high, cherries and gooseberries being named at higher levels than last year for new pack goods.

You have read of course, that the "life" of the best aviation motor is 150 flying hours.

And you must know that an aviation motor represents the highest development of gasoline engine building.

Must be—to withstand such strains for so long—for when you consider all the conditions, that 150 flying hours constitutes a terrific feat of endurance.

Figured in miles at the rate of speed our own Liberty motor has shown—144 miles per hour—it is 21,600 miles.

And in order to sustain its load in the air that motor is working to capacity all the time.

Now consider the performance of that Maxwell motor which, in 44 consecutive days and nights running never stopped, and covered, with its passengers, 22,022 miles!

It is a strange fact but true—as any metallurgist will demonstrate for you—that a motor, like a man or an horse, will do better with a rest from time to time.

For motors and the metals of which they are made, are also subject to "fatigue."

So the crucial part of that test was in its constant running—not a moment's relief allowed from the heat to cylinders or the motion of reciprocating parts.

Our records show many cases where, according to owners' statements, motor cars have gone 100,000 miles—150,000 and even 200,000 miles.

But we don't consider those cases exceptional.

Any Maxwell motor car will live to do that if kept oiled and given reasonable care.

And we are frank to concede that some other makes of cars can show similar mileages—for, as indicated above, intermittent service with rests between, is what the car is intended to do.

That is normal service.

But to withstand the terrific fatigue involved in that 44 consecutive days and nights "non-stop" test; and to cover, with four passengers, 22,022 miles; and, doing that, to average 26⅔ miles per gallon of gasoline too—that car must be a Maxwell.

Only Two Patients Are at Present Confined in the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital

It May be Possible to Close the Hospital Some Time Next Week—Nurses Will Become Farmerettes and Harvest the Crop on the Hospital Grounds—Institution is Minus a Janitor.

A NUMBER OF IMPROVEMENTS

To be sent to the Isolation Hospital, is to the general public who have never been there a sentence parallel almost to a sentence in goal. One visit however to the institution is enough to dispell all fears as a sojourn there is little short of a holiday at an up-to-date summer resort.

To begin with the view from the steep hill upon which the hospital is situated, is one of the most beautiful in Ontario. No unsightly buildings shut out the perfect view of the Otonabee river, beyond which the golf links, with their splendidly kept gounds, seem to be only a step away.

In the gounds a vegetable garden, which would be a credit to many a first class market gardener, supplies every vegetable the hospital and its inmates consume. Potatoes, corn, tomatoes, beans, onions and every variety of known vegetable is in abundance.

THE STAFF.

The hospital itself is a marvel of cleanliness and the staff of two leave no detail unattended to. Miss Reid, the superintendent, a graduate of Belleville, is beloved by both patients and fellow workers, and is exceedingly anxious to have every department up to the mark. Under her care since January, 1918, 24 scarlet fever, 3 diphtheria, 1 mumps and 1 measles case have been nursed back to health, and at the present time she has only 2 cases, both scarlet fever. These will leave during the coming week and the town will then be free of contagious diseases for a time.

THE ANNEX.

Since Dr. C. H. Amys, M.H.O., took charge, acting on his advice, the Board of Health built an annex to the hospital consisting of a long low tar paper and wood hut. With an eye to an ounce of prevention being better than a pound of cure, Dr Amys urged this building at the time the 93rd battalion was stationed here, in case of an epidemic of meningitis. Here in the hut, which cost less than a tent previously purchased, an epidemic of smallpox could be treated, should such a thing break out, or should the hospital which comfortably holds 29 patients, be overcrowded. Arrangements are such that a separate kitchen could be improvised in case of necessity.

Another addition based on Dr. Amys' suggestion, is a concrete root house, which with its reinforced roof, makes a water and wtatherproof place to keep the bags of vegetables for winter use. A test of the efficiency of this root house, which by the way has been copied by several institutions and private houses, lies in the fact that potatoes stored in the Fall had not sprouted in June. The jam, pickles and preserves are also stored admirably in the root house.

NO CARETAKER.

In spite of the fact that they work 24 hours a day the nurses, Misses Reid and Kathleen Kincaid, have been made the victims of the present social unrest by the departure of the janitor and his wife, who recently joined the Nicholls Hospital. The nurses now act in the capacity of cook and janitor pending the appointment of the elusive pair who will take the positions left vacant. Why the positions are not snapped up is a mystery as the quarters supplied are as good as any city flat, and the monetary remuneration is good. "I expect it's the name, 'Isolation Hospital,' which keeps people from applying," Miss Reid said.

PUBLIC IGNORANT.

Dr. Amys spoke of the general ignorance of the public regarding contagious diseases, which he said, if not reported, are punishable by a heavy penalty. Whooping cough, of which there is an epidemic at present, comes under this class.

FARMERETTES.

Starting with Tuesday, the 20th, when the nurses expect to close the hospital, they expect to become farmerettes and go well into the work of bringing in the harvest from the hospital grounds.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE SOUTH CENTRAL PUBLIC SCHOOL

Special Attention Has Been Given to the Sanitary Features.

Extensive improvements are being made at the South Central School. Mr. Hughson Johnson has already kalsomined the walls and ceilings and repainted the woodwork of four of the rooms. Neither of the halls will be repainted as they are in first-class condition. Water filtering cups are placed at intervals along the halls. The hardwood floors have been carefully oild and the play-ring in the kintergarten painted a dull red. In all the school presents a bright and clean appearance. The ventilating system is excellent. In fact the draft is so strong that a newspaper will cling to the radiator. The heating system is equally as good. Owing to the detached shape of the school five different furnaces had to be installed. The rooms are particularly bright and more air can be allowed in if desired by lowering the tops of the windows.

The sanitary conditions of the lavatories are very good. Electric fans have been installed and the whole basement has been very carefully whitewashed. Everything is as clean as a pin. The desks have all been cleaned and every room without exception presents a scrupulously clean interior. The yard is also being improved and soon the steam roller will be at work levelling it off.

At present the school is overcrowded, there being 468 children in attendance. But this has been relieved to some extent by securing a room in St. James' Church and another room will likely be secured.

NERVES ARE EXHAUSTED

When you have frequent headaches, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

SMALL BOY SHOWED ADVANTAGE OF BRAINS

Somewhere around town there is a boy who should make his mark in some pursuit where wits and sharp tricks are essentials. He and five others passing the Woolworth store a few nights ago stopped at the slot weighing machine, mauled it as boys will, and finally the bright mind of the bunch said: "All on for one cent, gang, follow me." He stepped on to the platform, dropped in his cent, and when he had noticed the weight registered, he instructed one of his companions to get up beside him. Then he stepped off. The second lad ascertained his weight and before he stepped from the machine another was up beside him. And so it went until the last boy was weighed. It was a gleeful experience, as pleasurable as getting something for nothing, must be to those who have experienced it.

SOME EXCELLENT SPEAKERS WILL BE FEATURE OF THE CHAUTAUQUA

A prominent citizen of Peterborough, who has heard Dr. Russell Conwell on several occasions in his lecture on "Acres of Diamonds," has this to say: "If Peterborough people may hear that lecture it will be a splendid investment of the price of the week's ticket even if there were no other attractions. There are few men in the world to-day who can speak of going off on a holiday in company with Oliver Wendell Holmes and Henry W. Longfellow, yet such has been the privilege of Dr. Conwell."

The Temple Church and University at Philadelphia, with its hospital and orphanage and other philanthropic departments, is a monument to the passion of one man to spend and be spent for others.

Raised Millions.

The money Dr. Conwell has raised by his lectures runs into millions, and yet every dollar of it has been spent for the education of youth and the helping of the unfortunate.

Dr. Conwell began his life-work as a lawyer, and was an unqualified success as such, but he felt the lure of the life of real ministry to men, and became pastor of a small church. Under the consecrated ministry of years this has become the church which leads all others of its denominations in the world, in the number of persons engaged in its deparments and in the amount of money invested in its enterprises.

Will Return.

It is expected that many citizens away on vacation will return for Chautauqua week, if only to hear Dr. Russell Conwell.

It will be a rare treat to Peterborough people to have the privilege of hearing Father MacCorry, the eloquent Paulist lecturer, in two Chautauqua lectures. He is the Vaughan of America, interested in all public questions, and is without question the greatest Catholic speaker in the United States. It is said that his illustrated lecture on the greatest pictures in the world is the most remarkable production of its kind that the platform affords. Audiences are held spellbound by this wonderful illustrated lecture, which is entitled "The Story Beautiful." The Chautauqua is absolutely non-sectarian, and the management aims only to obtain the best speakers procurable.

JURY BRINGS IN VERDICT OF ACCIDENTAL DEATH

Inquiry Into Death of Milne Pearson Concluded Last Evening Before Dr. Greer.

An inquest was held last night to inquire into the death of Milne Pearson, who was killed on the morning of August 6 at the Peterborough Milk Products Co.

Dr. A. E. Hammond was the first witness called and stated that he was summoned to the creamery by Mr. Robert Allen, foreman of the plant. The body was in the same position as it had been found. The head was between the casing or runway of the weight.

In Dressing Room.

Harry Rowe who is an employee of the Milk Products Company gave a lucid account of the accident. The room in which Pearson was in was the dressing-room, and the elevator ran on one side of a partition which formed one wall of the room. There is an opening in the partition so that light can enter the room. The opening in the partition is about five feet, five inches from the ground. The boy for some reason or other must have jumped on the bench and looked down through the partition with his head in the runway of the weight. The runway of the weight is about two inches from the partition. Mr. Rowe was working the elevator at the time the accident occurred. He went down to the basement with the elevator but Pearson was not in the dressing-room at the time. When he tried to operate the elevator from the basement it would not work. He then looked up and saw the head of Pearson under the weight which had fallen on his head. They then kicked the partition out and released the body.

Was Inspected.

Mr. Robert Allen and Mr. Alex. McDonnel corroborated the evidence of the previous witnesses.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, president of the Company was called and said that the elevator had been in use for four years, and had been inspected every year by a Government official.

The Verdict.

At 9:45 the jury brought in the following verdict:

We, the jurors summoned here tonight to inquire into the death of the late Milne Pearson, who was accidently killed on Tuesday, August the 6th, on the premises of the Peterborough Milk Produce Co., Ltd., 377 Aylmer street, in the City of Peterborough. We find after viewing the place where the accident occurred, and from the evidence submitted that the deceased came to his death by having his neck broken, the result of being caught between the elevator weight and the partition inclosing same. We find that the cause of death was purely accidental, and we strongly recommend that the entire elevator shaft from the basement to the roof be enclosed to insure against further accidents.

Mr. G. W. Hatton conducted the examination of the witnesses.

Safeguard The Milk Bottle--- From Raw Milk & Summer Heat

Which Milk Shall I Buy?

In selecting milk for the home use from the variety of milks on the market there are three matters of chief importance—viz.: SAFETY—DECENCY—FOOD VALUE. SAFETY comes first, and is more important than price or anything else.

WATER CONSUMPTION IN PETERBORO HITS A HIGH RECORD

Nearly Seven Million Gallons a Day Pumped Through the Mains.

NORMAL CONDITIONS

The peak or highest rate reached by the pumping engines at the pumping station during the past few weeks of scorching weather has been six and three-quarter million imperial gallons. This rate is reached at seven o'clock, when the lawn service is used. In ordinary weather the engines pump at the rate of three million gallons, with a peak of 3½. The highest rate yet reached by the engines is eight and one-half millions. This was registered at the time of the Neill fire.

The Bye-Law.

Superintendent Dobbin said yesterday that the fact that a bye-law prohibiting the reckless use of water from the mains during the progress of a fire is not generally known, and most probably not lived up to. He said that a peculiar feature of the water consumer is that he uses the lawn service, not by quantity, but according to time, and no matter how high or how low the pressure, the taps are going the same number of hours.

Water Temperature.

The highest water temperature reached this year was 84 degrees. This cooled to 68 degrees in the mains and varied slightly at the point of consumption. On George Street the water is always hotter than in the out-of-town districts.

It is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

OPERATORS MAY STRIKE

Five Hundred Bell Telephone Operators Held Meeting Last Night in Toronto.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—Amid much enthusiasm approximately 500 Bell Telephone operators last night unanimously decided upon the immediate formation of a union affiliating with the International Association of Electrical Workers, as the first step towards settling their claims and grievances against the company. Tentative plans for organizing were presented to the meeting by the local and International officers of the Association, and were given instantaneous and hearty approval. The final decision will be arranged at a mass-meeting to be held on Monday evening. As soon as the work of organization has been completed then the union will begin negotiations, and if the company refuses to treat with the new Association, or if the outcome of these negotiations are unsatisfactory, an application will be made as soon as possible to the Government for a Board of Conciliation under the Industrial Act.

Notices Sent Out.

Last night's mass meeting of operators was held at the Temple. The assembly hall was crowded to the doors, despite the threat alleged to have been made by the supervisor and chief operators in the various offices, that any who attempted fathering it would be discharged, and also in spite of the fact that cards advertising the assembly were distributed as soon as posted to the different officers of the company.

The girls further decided that their future movements shall be guided by the Lemieux Act, which provided for thirty days' notice before action is taken.

The principal demands to be made to the Bell Company are for higher pay, a change in the work hour schedules, and improved working conditions.

WAR SUMMARY

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 10.— The Toronto Star in its war interview to-day says:

Our high expectations founded on the success of the Allied drive on Thursday are being realized. The Germans have begun a retirement on the 20 miles of the line extending westward from the Oise to Montdidier, which had not been directly attacked. Thereby the front of the Allied advance has been extended to 20 miles. The whole Montdidier on the Oise-Somme salient, south of the latter river, is collapsing. From the first day of the Allied drive, the question has not been whether the Germans would have to get out of the salient, but whether those in the peak of the salient could be extricated. It is reasonably clear that the bulk of the troops in the south-western corner of the salient at Montdidier and Ressons cannot get out without destroying or abandoning most of their guns, ammunition and supplies.

AT MONTDIDIER.

The situation of those at Montdidier has been made almost hopeless by the French suddenly dashing forward more than four miles on a narrow front south-east of the town and getting astride of the Montdidier-Roye road and railway, blocking the last remaining exit of an artificial nature. The situation of the large German forces on the south-east at Ressons, is also very precarious. For twenty miles the Allies parallel their line of retreat within easy shelling distance of it, and an Allied advance of a few more miles would make matters desperate in the extreme. All the roads in the salient are needed for escape of fleeing troops, and it is next to impossible to rush in reinforcements to stay the Allied advance. The enemy is wedged in between the Allies and the Oise river in a difficult wooded country which, on the half nearest the Oise, is provided with few roads, and the enemy's comrades on either side can do little more than look on in exasperated helplessness. The best they can do locally is to rush forward to take up a strong defensive line in the rear through which the retreating horde may filter and at the same time make strong counter attacks on the north between Albert and Chaulnes to prevent the Allies from closing the mouth of the bag.

TWO DECLINE FUEL HONOURS

Messrs. Denne and Bradburn Will Not Accept Posts on New Fuel Commission.

The Trades and Labour Council are temporarily in full control of the Fuel Commission. At least their representative, Mr. Malcolm Campbell, the only one of the three recently appointed commissioners who remain office, Mr. T. H. G. Denne has declined to accept the obligation and has notified the City Clerk to that effect. Mr. W. H. Bradburn told one of the aldermen that he didn't want the post and would likewise refuse it. He intimated that he had been ready to assume the work, but the personal criticisms from the Trades and Labour Council before the commission had even accepted the work, was but an earnest of the future.

Mr. Denne's Letter.

Mr. Denne's letter, declining the thankless position and whatever honour attaches to it, is as follows, to City Clerk Armstrong:

"I am in receipt of your letter of August 8th, stating that the City Council had appointed me a member of the Board of Fuel Commissioners of the City of Peterborough. I wish to thank you for the honour you did me but in reply would say, that after looking into the matter carefully, I feel that I could not be of service owing to the restricted power conferred upon a Fuel Commissioner.

"Personally my opinion is that the relief in the coal situation rests with the Council in procuring supplies of coal and wood in sufficient quantities in your municipal coal yard.

"Again thanking you for the confidence reposed in me, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

T. H. G. DENNE."

ALDERMAN DOBBIN RECEIVES IMPORTANT LETTER BUT WITHHOLDS IT

Ald. Dobbin had a state secret this morning which he refused to divulge even when appealed to on the strength of his remnant spirit of newspaper fraternity. He unburdened himself of the information that it was a communication from the Fuel Controller, the most radical that had ever come from that source. There was nothing exciting in that statement, for the Fuel Controller has been two years on the job without controlling anything but his salary, so some of his local critics declare.

"This is real stuff," said Ald. Dobbin, and the more he fanned curiosity the stronger became his determination to keep silent. "I want to show this letter to the Mayor and some of the other aldermen; maybe on Monday you can see it."

"But Monday is a holiday," was the expostulation.

"Well, let it go till Tuesday."

So there you are.

FINE OUTSTANDING FOR EIGHT YEARS

The long arm of the law reached out yesterday and garnered in a local man who eight years ago was convicted under the liquor license act for purchasing or attempting to purchase liquor while on the prohibited list. At the time he was fined ten dollars, but skipped out without paying his fine. Yesterday the eight-year-old warrant was executed and the fine was paid over to Inspector Joseph Stewart, in connection with this case it might be stated that the sum of seventy-five cents each awaits at the City Clerk's office for Arthur Beal, William Doyle and R. Nicholls who eight years ago appeared as witnesses in the above case.

AL CHASE SUSPENDED FOR INDIFFERENT PLAY

EW YORK, Aug. 10.—Harold) Chase, captain and first base- of the Cincinnati Nationals, has indefinitely suspended because ndifferent playing. It was an- ced by Manager Mathewson. se was under a similar charge in while playing on the New York ericans and was traded by Mana- Frank Chance to the Chicago ericans.

ew York, Aug. 10.—Manager Mitchell of the Cubs, who will bably be the National League en- in the world's series, believes that annual classic will not be halted the officials in Washington. The er of the prospective pennant ners is confident that Secretary er will allow the players of the pennant winners affected by the ork or fight" order to play after tember 1.

I believe," said the Cubs' leader, at the war department will grant men who are in deferred classes the draft permission to play in the world's series. The series has always been the fitting climax to the baseball season, and I do not believe that the war department will prevent the big games."

"Secretary Baker will not interfere with the world's series," said Frank Bancroft, veteran business manager of the Cincinnati Reds. "The status of the rival pennant winners will be determined by their local boards after September 1. The members of the Cubs and Red Sox who probably will meet in the world's series should communicate with their draft boards at once, asking permission to keep on playing until September 10. There isn't a doubt that the draft boards will grant this concession when they learn that the players will seek other employment after the series ends. Secretary Baker has not ordered baseball stopped on September 1. He has exempted players from the 'work or fight' order until that day when they must be turned over to the draft boards for further instructions."

O.T.C. BACK FROM CAMP.

thur Carew of Lindsay Won the ndividual Championship—Have a Good Rugby Team.

TORONTO, August 9.—The Canan Officers' Training Corps is back Toronto from the Niagara Camp, where they spent a successful month or two. They have splendid material for a good rugby team, and expect to repeat their last year's win of the Mulock Cup series. They will also play outside games if they can be arranged. At Niagara Camp they won two out of three soccer football games from Aviation Corps and Field Service, and lost to the Army Medical Corps. In the field sports, Arthur Carew, former junior hockey star at Lindsay, won the individual championship, capturing the 100 and 220 sprints, third in short-put, and being on the winning relay team and the indoor and outdoor baseball championships. Section One, with Sergt. Finlayson in charge, won group honours. Section Two, Sergt. McFarlane, was second, and Sestion Three, Sergt. McKinnon, was third. Section Three won the tug-of-war, beating Section One in the finals. The male chorus of the Glee Club was very much in demand at the camp. Horace Bralsam, late of David Belasco, and Engene Lockhart, late of Klaw and Erlanger, staged four outdoor concerts for the various battalions in camp.

U.S. TO CONTROL MEAT PACKERS

Government Acquisition and Control of Big Plants Recommended.

WASHINGTON, August 9.—Government acquisition and control of all the principal stock yards, cold-storage plants and warehouses, and both refrigerator and cattle cars, has been recommended to the President by the Federal Trade Commission to destroy a monopoly which it declares Swift & Co., Armour Y Co., Morris & Co., Wilson & Co., Inc., and the Cudahy Packing Co. exercise not only over the meat of the country, but other necessary food supplies.

The Commission's report is based upon exhaustive hearings conducted recently in many cities, and was made public Thursday through the White House. It has been in the hands of the President since July 5, and it was explained that it had not previously been issued "because the President wished first to be in possession of full information."

Basing its statement upon a great volume of evidence examined, much of it taken from the confidential files of the packing companies, the Commission said the power of the five packing companies "has been and is being unfairly and illegally used" to Manipulate live stock markets;

Restrict interstate, and international supplies of food;

Control the supplies of dressed meats and other foods;

Defraud both the producers of food and consumers;

Crush effective competition;
